This wonderful vegetable restorative is the sheet-anchor of the feeble and debilitated. As a tonic and cordial for the aged and languid it has no equal among stomachics. As a remedy for the nervous weakness which women are especially subjected, it is superseding every other stimulant. In all climates, tropical, temperate or frigid, it acts as a specific in every species of disorder which undermines the bodily strength and breaks down the animal spirits.

GUESTS OF THE HEART.

They call and they answer each other—
They answer and mingle again—
As the deep and the shrill in an anthem
Make harmony still in their strain;
As the voices of mountains mingle
In the mountainous regions of snow,
Till from hill-top to hill-top a chorus
Floats down to the valleys below.

The shadows, the fire-light of even,
The sound of the rain's distant chime,
Come bringing, with rain softly dropping,
Sweet thoughts of a shadowy time;
The slumberous sense of seclusion,
From storm and intruders aloof,
We feel when we hear in the midnight
The patter of rain on the roof.

When the spirit goes forth in its yearnings,
To take all its wanderers home;
Or, afar in the regions of fancy,
Delights on swift pinions to roam,
I quietly sit by the firelight,
The firelight so bright and so warm—
For I know that those only who love me
Will seek me through shadow and storm.

But should they be absent this evening,
Should even the household depart—
Deserted, I should not be lonely;
There would still be guests in my heart.
The faces of friends that I cherish,
The smile and the glance of the tone,
Will haunt me wherever I wander,
And thus I am never alone.

OPEN THE DOOR.

Open the door for the children,
Tenderly gather them in:
In from the highways and hedges,
In from the places of sin
Some are so young and so helpless,
Some are so hungry and cold;
Open the door for the children,
Gather them into the fold.

Open the door for the children;
See! they are coming in throngs;
Bid them sit down to the banquet,
Teach them your beautiful songs;
Pray you the father to bless them;
Pray you that grace may be given;
Open the door for the children,
"Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Open the door for the children;
Take the dear lambs by the hand;
Point them to truth and to goodness;
Send them to Canaan's land.
Some are so young and so helpless,
Some are so hungry and cold;
Open the door for the children,
Gather them into the fold.

THE DEACON'S PLOT.

A reasonably good man was Deacon Pilsey, as times went, but if he had a weakness it was for making things in general go about as he wanted to. Not an overbearing man by any means, and certainly not a violent one, but with wonderfully cute and quiet and subtle ways of his own, by which he brought matters about without letting other people know how the thing was done. When a man is accustomed to have his own way he makes up his mind pretty easily, but there was one point of all others upon which Deacon Pilsey had been set and fixed for years, and the care of which laiy heavy on his mind, for the time had come when, in his judgment, something deep required to be planned and all his skill exercised in carrying it out To a mind like his, that had taken a perfect measure of every other in the village, and for miles around it, there could be but little difficulty in selecting his tools and assistants, and he had no need of counselors. That was how he happened to be talking so confidentially to Mr. Joe Gaines, as the two stood by the yard-gate.

"Why, Deacon said Joe, "I always thought you liked Bob Humphrey. He's a tip-top fellow, and a good match for any girl I know of."

"So he is, so he is," replied the deacon. "Can't say a word agin him. Knew him from a boy. Can't forbid him the house, or any of that sort of nonsense; but then he can't have Irene Wyer"

"I don't see how you'll help it, deacon. You're only her guardian, and she is about of age."

"Not for a year—that's how the will reads—and she's in my own house, you know. I guess I can fix some things, 'specially if you'll turn in and help me. You're a lawyer, Joe Gaines, but you're a young one yet, and I'll give you the fattest fee you ever dreamed of if you'll only hitch teams with me and see that Bob Humphrey don't get the upper hand.

"Well, if that's what you're after, so it's all right and square, I'd as lief earn a fee one way as another. What's your programme?"

"Well, you know there's nigh onto thirty thousand a comin' to Irene Wyer, in her own right, and I've took the best kind of care of it. It's been a mighty sight of trouble, and all along I've thought of my son Scott."

"Scott Pilsey!" interrupted Joe. "Why, he's in California.'

"He won't be long. He's comin' home inside o' six months, and I want to keep Irene safe for him. They used to be wonderful thick, and he writ to her regular ever so long arter he went away, and so did she to him."

"Do they correspond now?" said Joe.

"No, not now There's the rub. That's one reason I'm looking out so sharp after Bob. Now, I want you to just take a holt and try to keep Bob off till Scott, gets back. 'Twon't be for long, and Irene ain't such bad company, nohow."

"I don't know," said Joe. "There's Maggie and her mother. I couldn't be particularly attentive to Irene without their knowing it. And Bob Humphrey will be sure to be around most of the time, and it won't be long before I have the whole village talking the matter up.'

"Never mind that, Joe, never mind that. It'll be all right when Scott comes home. I'll give you the biggest kind of a fee."

"Well, deacon," coolly replied the lawyer, "it's a pretty tough case, but I'll take it on one condition."

"What's that?"

"Why, so long as it's only fun, and all that, I'll go ahead, but if it seems as if I was doing any harm, anything real bad, you know, I'm to be at liberty to back out."

"Well, I don't mind, so long as you let me know in time."

And so the Deacon and the lawyer discussed their plot to their satisfaction, and when all was settled the latter took his own way down the broad and grass-grown street of the village.

"The old shark!" he muttered, as he strolled leisurely on "What on earth put it into his plotting old head to pitch on me for his tool? He never was more than half decent to me before. I reckon I'll earn my fee, but I'll be fair and square with Bob Humphrey. What would Irene say if she knew what was up? Wouldn't those black eyes of her's strike fire?"

Now, it happened that of late, unknown to the deacon, perhaps, there had been growing up more than a little closeness of intimacy between Joe Gaines and Bob Humphrey, and thus it was treachery to his friend as well as unfairness to the pretty heiress, to which the young lawyer had allowed himself to be bribed by the deacon's promised fee.

A deep fellow was Joe Gaines, and a marvelous manipulator of social affairs. Again and again, as days and weeks and months went by, did Deacon Pilsey congratulate himself on his admirable selection, and chuckle in his utmost being as he witnessed the well-contrived success of Joe's manœuvres. There were picnics and drives and parties, and entertainments of various kinds, but in vain did Bob Humphrey invite or propose; the young lawyer was sure to be beforehand with him, and it almost seemed as if sweet, unassuming, quiet little Maggie Pilsey herself, the deacon's daughter, had joined the secret league against her friend Irene, so often was some excuse devised by which she was made to appear in the latter's stead.

Then, too, there were the home evenings at the deacon's house, when the subtle-minded old plotter could have hugged himself with satisfaction as he sat by and witnessed with his own eyes the admirable manner in which Joe Gaines worked for his fee.

"It takes a lawyer, after all," he said to himself. "I don't care much what he charges. I only hope he'll keep it up till Scott gits home. And then to see Bob Humphrey! Why, the fellow's got the perseverance of the saints, but he ain't nowhere with Joe Gaines."

As for Irene herself, her red lips pouted and laughed, and her bright eyes deepened and sparkled, and her life seemed flowing onward very pleasantly, as if no deep-laid plots and schemings had any power over her or her happiness. Moreover, through it all Joe Gaines seemed to maintain the most complete external semblance of frank-hearted friendship with Bob Humphrey. Odd as it may seem, the young lawyer also found that his practice had undergone a very sensible increase, caused mainly by the warm, though covert, encomiums which the good deacon's heart compelled him to utter here and there, in his keen appreciation of his young friend's tact and management.

Time will fly, however, and the mails at last brought to the Pilsey homestead the welcome news that its absent hope and heir would shortly return. There were letters from Scott Pilsey to his mother and sister Maggie, and to Irene Wyer, and even to his old friends and schoolmates Joe Gaines and Bob Humphrey, and to each one he had doubtless some matter of special interest to communicate.

No noisy, smoky, disgusting railway trains as yet vexed the retirement and repose of the village, but at last, on a morning when all thiugs were in a state of almost painful expectancy of his arrival, not the ordinary stage-coach, but a private hired carriage, heavy with packages and trunks, bore Scott Pilsey to the door of his father's house.

In an instant the little verandah was full of those who awaited him, but when the deacon's tall, sun-burned and bushy-bearded son sprang out upon the grass, he turned his back to the verandah for a moment, while he aided the movements of a graceful, well-favored, dark-featured young lady, who followed him, and whom, even in the first warmth of his "welcome home," he introduced as "my wife, my Lucia."

Maggie Pilsey hugged her and kissed her, and so did Irene, and so, in a moment more, did old Mrs. Pilsey, and the deacon was too wise a man to seem altogether astonished, while Joe Gaines and Bob Humphrey were fairly boisterous. In fact, Scott Pilsey's California bride was so overcome by the warmth of her greeting that the poor young thing forgot her pride and burst into tears. In a half minute after that there wasn't a lady visible, and then Bob and Joe knew enough to leave the deacon and his son to themselves. The two young men went off arm in arm, but they were back again before the day was over.

The deacon's face was a trifle serious, but not exactly cloudy, and before long he managed to get Joe Gaines off by himself for a bit of a private conversation.

"And so, Joe," he said, "you and the rest knew all about this matter of Scott's some time ago?"

"Well, yes; Irene told me in confidence, and then, when they wrote and told Scott how matters stood here, he wrote to congratulate us, and begged us not to spoil his surprise to you. We couldn't tell after all that, you know."

"Ahem! well—no—I can't say; but p'raps not. I can't be mad with Scott, for she's brought him a big ranche and a mine; but what am I to do with you now? I like Bob Humphrey first-rate—I allers did like Bob—and now it can't be Scott, I don't see as I orter to interfere. You've earned your fee, and I'll pay it; but, then, you see, there ain't no more use——"

"Oh, no, not a bit," interrupted Joe. "Bob is a good fellow, and he and Maggie are just suited. Irene and I think that Maggie couldn't have made a better match, and we think Scott's done splendidly well."

"Irene and you," exclaimed the deacon.

"Yes, of course. I've explained to her that I can't afford to lose my fee. I told her so at the beginning, and she said I must earn it. Seems to me I have done that; but I'll let you up."

"Done it!" exclaimed the deacon. "Well, yes, Joe; on the whole, I should rather be inclined to say I guess I think you have! Yes—you and Irene!"

"Looks Are Nothing."

It is to no purpose that the English aristocracy fume over the fact their good Queen is at best but a motherly-looking governess in appearance; not that they publicly comment upon it—their esprit de corps would prevent this—but in their hearts they would much rather she were as extravagant as the old Stuarts—had less virtue and more style—anything rather than that respectable, middle-class look which so eminently characterizes her. Observers of human nature think it is this very approximation in appearance which endears her to the common people, particularly to the women, who are more loyal than the men; her plainness and motherliness bring her nearer them, and their sympathies seem to be more in common.

Accustomed as this class is to think of a queen as pictured in the school books—English school books—a something stately and stiff, dressed in velvet robes, with a crown on the head and a sceptre in the hand—a something to stand in awe of and look at from a distance, yet in which they have no interest, being taxed for its support—they cannot divest themselves of the idea that this old lady who bows to them so pleasantly has deprived them of a right; and as the men pay the money they want the show.

"I really felt mortified," said an English woman, herself every inch a queen in look and bearing, "when I saw Victoria and Eugenie together;—our Queen was so dowdy, and that Spanish parvenu was so handsome, and graceful and elegant, and well dressed. I devoutly wished that Sophia, Electress of Hanover, had died ere she mixed the blood of the Stuarts with that of the house of Brunswick, marring the personal appearance of our royal line, and giving it the worst points of the German character and physique." The English succession might have gone further, but it certainly could hardly have fared worse.

A tourist describes having seen the Queen and part of her family with that of the Duke and Duchess of Argyll, in Scotland. A plainer, less aristocratic group of people he never saw. Had he not known who they were, he should have taken them for some well-behaved bourgeois out on a holiday. Indeed, the Duchess of Argyll hardly looked that; he had seen many market women in Philadelphia more comely and less coarse than she. The Queen reminded him of a well-fed matron of some charity institution, one accustomed to authority. This, be it remembered, was only the personnel; in conversation, there was no mistaking character and culture.

A Story About Greeley.

A New York correspondent of the Omaha Herald gives the following incident connected with Mr. Greeley's editorial life:

There is a newspaper reporter in this city who received his first lesson in journalism on the New York Tribune. Although he knew nothing whatever about newspaper work, he was possessed at that time with a high opinion of his own abilities, believing that he could do anything he saw fit to undertake—making application to Mr. Moore, city editor of the Tribune, he was taken on trial, his first work being to get up a short report of a meeting of the Quarantine Board. Returning to the office he handed his copy to Mr. Moore, who looked over it, thought it would do, marked it "local," and then, placing it in the dummy, sent it to the composing room. Going back to the office the next morning, our highly elated friend was sent to report the proceedings of some organization which held their meetings in Cooper Institute. The newly fledged reporter was not very favorably impressed with the appearance of the men composing the society, and, instead of reporting the proceedings as they occurred, he entered into a nowise flattering description of the men present, and wrote a burlesque of the business they transacted. Returning to the room of the city editor, he found that gentleman absent, and taking it for granted that his report was all right, he marked it "local," as he had seen Mr. Moore do on the day previous, put it in the dummy and sent it along. Upon going back to the office next day, he was told by the city editor that Mr. Greeley wished to see him. He immediately rushed off to Mr. Greeley's room, flattering himself that that gentleman had been so favorably impressed by his contributions to the "current literature of the day" that he was anxious to secure him before the other papers engaged him. Full of this thought he entered the philosopher's room, informing that gentleman that the city editor said he wished to see him. "Are you the d—n fool who sent up that report yesterday of the meeting at Cooper's Institute?" inquired that great and good man. This was not exactly the reception our cheeky friend had expected, but he managed to recover himself enough to be enabled to answer in the affirmative. "Did Mr. Moore examine your copy before it was sent to the composing room?" queried H. G. "No, sir," responded the reporter, "he was not in his room when I came in, so I just chucked it into a little box where I had seen him put my report the day before, and supposed it would be all right."

"What business had you to burlesque those who were present at the meeting?" said Mr. Greeley.

"Well, I considered them a set of wooden heads, and I thought it wouldn't do any harm to say so," replied the reporter, meekly.

"H—ll, man," exclaimed the exasperated philosopher, "I am President of that organization. That's all, young man; you can go."

The reporter did not remain on the Tribune. He was possessed of great talent, the editors all said, but it was not just exactly the kind of talent the Tribune needed.

Four Aces That Don't Win.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

Two young and enterprising Portlanders recently visited Walla Walla, and—did't make a cent They had been taking lessons in that game which Ah Sin didn't understand, and concluded they "knew how it was themselves," and made a trip up the river for the purpose of raking in a few dollars. Now, these young gentlemen were not gamblers, although they proposed to play the game to win, and would have felt highly insulted if any one would have charged them with a desire to play unfair or cheat in the least degree.

For several days after their arrival in Walla Walla they loitered around the hotel, playing "freeze out," and "sich" for something to drink, and even went so far as to play a little "bean poker." They were biding their time, and waiting for an opportunity, and it finally came.

One evening last week, a party of gentlemen who never play for great stakes, but who sometimes indulge in poker for pastime, assembled in one of the hotels and began playing. Our youthful Portland friends heard of the game and took measures to secure a hand. They were soon gratified beyond measure by being invited to join in the play, and took seats at the table and commenced chipping in quite lively.

The game proceeded, and luck seemed to favor the young strangers, who were joyous over the fact that they were already some $200 ahead in the game.

One of the players was Judge Blank, a man who dearly loves a game of "draw," and who knows about as many points in the same as any other man, be he a professional or other player. The Judge soon detected the young men from the "Big Waliamet" "playing roots," and took means to head them off, but how he did it we do not know. He called for a new deck of cards, and after a while was made happy by having three kings and a pair of deuces dealt to him. Of course he "chipped" in. One of the Portlanders—the one who had dealt the cards—raised him, and betting became lively until some $1,600 were on the table, when a call was made. The Judge displayed his full hand and reached for the pile.

"Hold on," cried the Portland youth, "I've got four aces and a king," and he went for the coin.

"Don't be too fast," responded the Judge. "I guess I'll take the money, for we don't let a man play six cards up here;" and he shoved his finger upon an ace, and lo and behold! it separated from a ten spot with a snap, as if it had been held by a bit of wax.

The Judge raked in the money, and the young man from Portland quit playing, saying as he did so, "There's cheating going on around the table."

Those young men are puzzled to know how the judge did it.

This is Edward Hale's story: "A man had sold himself to the devil, who was to possess him at a certain time unless he could propound a question to his satanic majesty which he could not answer, he being allowed to put three queries to him. The time came for the devil to claim his own, and he consequently appeared. The first question the man asked was concerning theology, to which it caused the devil no trouble to reply. The second he also answered without hesitation. The man's fate depended on the third. What should it be? He hesitated and turned pale, and the cold dew stood on his forehead, while he shivered with anxiety, nervousness and terror, and the devil triumphantly sneered. At this juncture the man's wife appeared in the room with a bonnet on her head. Alarmed at her husband's condition she demanded to know the cause. When informed she laughed and said: 'I can propound a question which the devil himself cannot answer. Ask him which is the front of this bonnet?' The devil gave it up and retired in disgust, and the man was free."

Be in Earnest.

Be in earnest! If you have anything to accomplish, go at it with a will, and let no barrier deter you that may be gone around, borne down or climbed over. Longing and wishing, although they may open the door for action, amount to very little unless the feet are swift and the hands willing; unless the purpose is ardent, the will power strong, and faith looks daringly forward to the consummation

Be in earnest! If you have a ditch to dig, or a shirt to make, do not repine and sigh over the drudgery of life, but bend yourself to the task, and be assured that the strongest man or most expert woman would have done the same no better, and then, surely, you may glory a little in its completion.

A blacksmith may, and has, become world-renowned, not because the work was grand, but it was done grandly. He took the same rough iron as his smutty companion, but gave it more thought, more turns and brighter polish, and would be satisfied only with the best, so he woke up one morning to find himself famous.

Be in earnest! If you are talking to another let him or her feel that your tongue utters the convictions of your soul, and that your actions are the result of tried principle; then, be he friend or foe, he will know where you stand, and be prepared to meet you face to face. Look around you. Is there anything in life that does not require your mightiest help or effort? The world is full of shadows, where only strong bare arms are needed to clear away the rubbish and broken boughs, to let warm sunshine lay caressingly in the darkened places and quicken into life the germs of sweetest flowers that, bid beneath seared, withered leaves, lay chill and dead amid damp and frost.

Be in earnest! You have but one to-day, and when it is gone it is gone forever. The sun bends steadily to the western horizon, and your sheaves must be cut and bound while the day lasts, if you would count them with satisfaction at the twilight hour. There is not a moment to be wasted. Morning and evening, seed time and harvest, give you the same loud call to the vineyard of life, and furnish labor and reward to every willing worker. "The keen spirit seizes the prompt occasion, makes the thought start into action, and at once plans and performs, resolves and executes." Glance over the field and mark the glorious work. There are wrongs to be met, vices to be uprooted, and right to be made triumphant. There are hearts to be comforted, feeble efforts to be kindled by your own. And for these you can only be prepared by giving your whole heart to present duties, and by doing the lowest work as well as it can possibly be done. Then when new labor and higher work comes, it will be taken up joyfully, and the ability will grow with the occasion.

Be in earnest! Get up in the morning. "Let no grass grow under your feet." If you have a log to chop, make your axe fly and let the chips attest to your industry. If you have a lesson to learn, put heart and brain to the effort, that the harvest of knowledge may be plenteous and golden. And whether you have a sermon to preach or a shoe to peg, dishes to wash or a book to write, be in earnest—earnest in your speech, earnest in your actions, earnest in your life, never forgetting the text, "Whatever your hands find to do, do it with all your might."

"Let us, then, be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate,
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait."

Geo. Alfred Townsend "Explains."

To the Editor of the Philadelphia Press:

SIR: The following editorial paragraph from your issue of Monday, is at hand:

"A friend in Delaware writes to us for information concerning the delegation at Cincinnati from his State, which cast six votes for Adams. He has no knowledge of the election or even the self-appointment of delegates from the little commonwealth, and hence the query addressed to us. This, like quite a number of other subjects in connection with the Cincinnati Convention, is one of those things that 'no fellow can find out.'"

I want every fellow to find out all about it. The subscriber had the pleasure alone. He was so well known to be a native of Delaware—never having voted elsewhere—and to be a writer in favor of the liberalization of both parties, particularly the ruling party, that the administration papers accused him of a design to appear at Cincinnati and vote Delaware there. A paragraph to this effect conceived in littleness like to its form, went on its travels, and by the time I arrived in Cincinnati to act in the line of my profession, letters and telegrams came to me from Delaware—from collegiates of my native county of Sussex, and folks of the city of Wilmington—advising me that the Liberal Republicans of Delaware were pleased to hear that they would not be without a delegate. Had none of these messages been received, I should have voted anyhow as a Delawarian by birth, interest, and by intentions of residence and citizenship, never abandoned since my boyhood, and which, long ere this, had been gratified, except by my roving attachment to the profession of the illustrious man whom we nominated at Cincinnati, and whose old white coat, as Chateaubriand said of Napoleon's redingote gris, has already "made all the politicians of the continent fly to arms."

The name of Delaware was called in my hearing without response. At last I presented my name before the Committee on Credentials, where I was, perhaps, not the only solitary representative of a State; for this was called a "mass convention." But times have also been when as large a State as Pennsylvania had only one voice in a "regular" convention, the echoes, however, counting. In this convention at Cincinnati every delegate counted, and none were echoes. I was recognized, and cast six votes alternately for Adams and Trumbull—the rule adoped being that where a State was partly represented, the fractional representation should still give the whole vote. In our Delaware delegation there was no division We never retired to consult. In the language of Carl Schurz "we meant business." Finally we accepted Horace Greeley with entire unanimity—one blue hen sitting on the six electoral eggs with ease. It was remarked that as we were the first State to ratify the Constitution, we were the easiest to please and to fall into accord at Cincinnati. The following was the resolution we drew up to report to the people of our State:

First in the war was Uncle Horace when he outlined all the campaigns with "On to Richmond;" first in peace when he appeared at Richmond, conqueror, and took the most grieved man in the fallen cause by the hand, bound up his wounds, pouring in the oil without the wine, and became his surety with the mild-mannered landlord. And when we prove him next November, first in the hearts of his countrymen, somebody may, perhaps, ask without captiousness, "who cast the six votes of Delaware for Horace Greeley's nomination?" I shall be ready to answer as cheerfully then as now, and I believe my children will approve of it. They were given by (yours truly),

WASHINGTON CITY, May 10, 1872.

Another "Commission" Killed.

Before the final adjournment of the Supreme Court, on Friday last, the following decision was announced, holding another law of this State unconstitutional, driving another nail in the coffin of "Mr. Irresponsible Commission," and recognizing local rights as superior to the will of the Legislature:

The People ex rel. Bela Hubbard et al., constituting the Fort Street Improvement Board, vs. The Township Board of Springwells. Mandamus. Opinion by Campbell, J.:

By act No. 414, of 1871, the Governor was empowered to appoint three commissioners to improve Fort street, from the western limits of Detroit to Dearborn road, the entire work being in the Township of Springwells. The commissioners were not required to reside in the town, and, in fact, a majority did not. The work to be done included macadamizing and draining the street, with some other necessary finishing, and when done it was to be paid for by issuing bonds of the township, the interest of which was to met by a general tax on the township, and the principal by an assessment made for that purpose in the outset by the commissioners upon the lands fronting on the street; which was made a district for the purposes of the assessment, on which the cost was to be apportioned according to the benefits. The statute provided that the Governor should remove and reappoint commissioners at his pleasure. The road, when finished, was to continue under their care and custody, and they were required to keep it in repair. They were authorized to levy tolls upon the same terms allowed to plank road companies, and subject to the same exemptions, including farmers going to and from work, and persons and vehicles going to and from public worship, and to and from funerals. Any further repairs not made up from tolls were to be paid for by tax on the real and personal property in the assessment district. The commissioners were to receive the per diem of supervisors (except one, who, as a civil engineer, was to receive $5 per day), all these

Senator Ferry defines his Position.

NEW HAVEN, May 23.—The following letter from United States Senator O. S. Ferry, to Hon. J. B. Ferris, of Stanford, Conn., clearly defines his position on National questions, and will be found interesting just now:

WASHINGTON, May 16, 1872.

Hon: J. B. Ferris, Stanford, Conn:

MY DEAR SIR.—I thank you for your congratulations. They are peculiarly gratifying from so old and valued a friend as yourself. I do not know why any one should misapprehend my political position on account of what has happened. I have never concealed my opinions. My record in the Senate is open to everybody. I believe as firmly as ever in the doctrines which I have advocated for the last 16 years, since the Republican party had a national existence. There are certain ideas, indeed, which have grown into prominence since the passage of the acts of reconstruction, in which I do not believe. I do not believe in the continuance of political disabilities after they have become a needless and mischievous irritation without a single good result. I do not believe in miscalled "Civil Rights" bills, subversive of local self-government and destructive of the school system of whole groups of States. I do not believe in the re-enactment of the Ku-Klux law, after it has expired by its own limitation and has accomplished all that was originally alleged to be its purpose. The truth is, that since the adoption of the last three amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and the closing up of the war question, our foreign relations and our domestic policy in matters of finance and revenue are again assuming their natural prominence.

To intrust these great interests to an Administration made up and controlled by Mr. Greeley would be mere midsummer madness.

The administration of the State Department during the last three years has preserved for the nation an honorable peace in the midst of the most delicate and embarrassing complications, both with Great Britain and Spain, while that of the Treasury has steadily enhanced the public credit and promoted the business interests of the country. I do not appreciate the wisdom of those who, instead of all this, would press an untenable claim upon England at the risk of war, would recognize the belligerency of the Cuban insurgents contrary to every principle of international law, and would diminish permanently the specie reserves in the Federal Treasury to ten or twelve millions of dollars at whatever hazard to the public credit. There are other matters to which I might allude, but these are perhaps enough. You and I will continue in the old Republican track. If new issues arise we will think and act as our convictions of expediency and duty require, and always be hopeful for the future of our country.

Yours truly,

O. S. FERRY.

Letter from a Democratic Member of Congress in Favor of Greeley.

TITUSVILLE, PA., May 24.—The Titusville Courier to-morrow morning will publish a letter from Hon. Samuel Griffith, Democratic member of Congress from the Twentieth Pennsylvania District, from which the following are extracts: Your editorial of the 20th entitled "The Tidal Wave" meets my unqualified approbation, and the approval of the calm, thoughtful members of this House, to whom I have submitted it, and I assure you that at least four-fifths of the Democrats here take the same view of the situation and the course that patriotism and duty requires in this important critical juncture of our national affairs. What the people need and demand, and must and will have, is reform extending to every department and branch of the government, expelling plunderers from the public treasury, instituting a real, genuine civil service reform. In accomplishing this great national work we all have our favored leaders. I would prefer, of course, a Democrat, but the work must be done, and if I cannot accomplish it under my favorite general, I will still do it under a good and honest man. Gen. Grant cannot do it, not so much because of his unwillingness, but because of the rings that surround, control and govern him, and who have ridiculed and defeated all his efforts at civil service reform. The contest, in my opinion—and I have endeavored carefully to watch and note public opinion here and elsewhere—is fast narrowing down to Grant or Greeley; and in such a contest I have no trouble in making my choice. I believe Greeley honest and capable, and therefore up to the old Jeffersonian standard of office, and see no reason why all good men cannot unite and elect him, and thus save the country out of the hands of the plunderers and inaugurate an era of peace and good feeling among the citizens of all sections of our country, and integrity, honesty and economy in the departments of the government. These are great national objects, and for their accomplishment I will yield, will sacrifice much, anything except principle and honor.

The National Workingmen's Convention.

NEW YORK, May 24.—The National Workingmen's Convention to nominate a President and Vice-President of the United States, met yesterday, in accordance with the call of the Workingmen's Central Union of the State of New York. The convention was called to order at 2:20 by Col. Hedmord, of New Jersey, who was elected temporary chairman. The usual committees were appointed. The call of the roll showed that delegates were in attendance from thirty States to the number of over two hundred.

A permanent organization was effected by the election of Col. Gibbons, of New York, as chairman. Col. Gibbons, on taking the chair, eulogized Grant's recent action in regard to the eight hour law, reviewed his policy and said that he was the only man who could be trusted by the working classes.

A series of resolutions were reported embodying the following principles: Reduction of the national debt; unconditional settlement of the Alabama claims; enforcement of the eight-hour law; low rate of interest as the common national law; encouragement of ship building; giving the United States mails exclusively to American built ships, and sympathy with nations struggling under oppression.

J. M. McGee, of New York, recommended President Grant for renomination. The delegation from Missouri recommended Horace Greeley. On taking a ballot Grant received 204 votes, and Greeley 5 votes. The nomination of Grant was then made unanimous.

Senator Henry Wilson was then nominated for Vice-President by the following ballot:

Wilson	100
Edwin D. Morgan,	95
Colfax,	24

Grant and Wilson were then notified by telegraph of their nomination. A committe was appointed to prepare an address to the workingmen of the United States.

A motion was adopted to hold a ratification meeting at Cooper Institute.

Tornado in Missouri.

ST. LOUIS, MO., May 28.—A terrible tornado passed over Morgan County, Missouri, on Saturday evening. On the farms of Avery Fisher and others, houses, barns, orchards, fences, etc., are completely destroyed. Jacob Blosser and child were killed, and Mrs. Blosser, Avery Fisher and wife, and twelve others are wounded, only five of whom are expected to recover. In the vicinity of Florence a great number of houses; barns, etc., were destroyed. At Verona, Sunday night, a tremendous rain fell, inundating a large part of the town, and carrying away the railroad bridge and a long stretch of the railroad track. The house of George Greeley was swept away, and himself, wife and child were drowned in the Valley Spring River. Immense damage is done, whole farms being completely ruined.

The Michigan Argus

ANN ARBOR.

FRIDAY MORNING, MAY 31, 1872

THE IMPEACHMENT trial of Commissioner EDMONDS came to an end on Friday last, and resulted in his acquittal on each and every article. The vote upon the several articles was:

1st. For withholding lands for sale for a pecuniary consideration: guilty, 16; not guilty, 11.

2d. For purchasing State lands contrary to law: guilty, 4; not guilty, 23.

3d. For furnishing descriptions of licensed lands where there was informality in settlement or occupancy: guilty, 12; not guilty, 15.

4th. For conspiracy with WM. G. PATRICK and others in fraudulently withdrawing from sale, or causing to be marked as sold, large quantities of State lands, to the detriment of bona fide purchasers and for the benefit of the conspirators: guilty, 0; not guilty, 27.

5th. Engaging with his deputy in the purchase and sale of swamp land scrip, so as to operate in fraud of and to the damage of the primary school fund, the several counties of the State, and of the State treasury: guilty, 8; not guilty, 19.

6th. Employing dissolute clerks, allowing them to sell valuable information contained in the office, and to act as agents for certain land dealers: guilty, 16; not guilty, 11.

7th. Retaining moneys received for the sale of scrip: guilty, 1; not guilty, 26.

8th. Conducting and publishing Every Wednesday Night—a scurrilous and obscene sheet: guilty, 14; not guilty, 13.

9th. Also about Every Wednesday Night: guilty, 8; not guilty, 19.

10th. Drunkenness: guilty, 0; not guilty, 27.

11th. Adultery: guilty, 1; not guilty, 26.

A two-thirds vote of all the Senators elect, or 22, was necessary to conviction, 16 being the highest obtained.

—Though the Commissioner has been acquitted, it can hardly be said that his reputation is unsullied. The proof showed a disgraceful state of affairs in his office, morally and officially; speculation and corruption, and the Commissioner sharing the profits. But, perhaps, the Court thought that to convict EDMONDS would be to serve a notice to quit on some or all of the other State officers, the practice of money making not being confined exclusively to the Commissioner's office. It was, therefore, necessary to let EDMONDS down easy. It remains to be seen whether the Republican party of the State will consider him thoroughly whitewashed and nominate him for another term.

—According to the Adrian Times this little attempt at purification costs the State the snug little sum of $12,595.65, as follows: Managers, $719.40; Senators, $7,385.80; Officers, $1,658.50; Witnesses, $1,132.80; Messengers, $380.20; Reporters, $1,000; incidentals, $312.95; stationery, $6.00, or had up to Friday, May 24th. These figures do not include the printing of the daily journal, or the publishing of proceedings in book form. Another exchange figures the total expenses at $25,000. But then the people have the satisfaction of knowing that the Commissioner didn't commit adultery; didn't get drunk; didn't have anything to do with that vile sheet, Every Wednesday Night; didn't have immoral, drunken, dishonest or speculating clerks; and didn't divide with them or outsiders certain illegal fees and perquisites. This is knowledge worth paying liberally for.

THE EIGHT-HOUR movement is turning everything upside down in New York, and all workmen in all trades and avocations are either on a strike, over a strike, or making ready for a strike. Eight hours work, with the same pay as heretofore received for ten hours is the basis of most of the strikes, though in some departments both eight hours and increased pay are demanded. Efforts are being made for co-operation in Chicago and other large employing centers, and sooner or later employers throughout the country will have to arrange their business on the new basis. This is the first result of the legislation of demagogues to catch the votes of laborers in government employ.

It remains to be seen how much the laborers of the country will be benefited by the new order of things. If the manufacturer can run his establishment but eight hours the cost of production will be largely increased by the loss on idle machinery and capital; and to this increased cost of production must be added a fifth for the increase of wages. The consuming community, of which laboring men are a large share, will in the end be compelled to remunerate capital for this loss, so that the pay of the laborer or the buying capacity of his pay will be not the whit increased. His only good will come from the two hours of leisure. Will he use that leisure in "over-work," in working for himself, in study, or in dissipation? These are questions for time to solve.

Meantime, how long will the mass of mechanics and laborers, on the farm or in the shop, who are their own employers, and who find the rewards of ten or twelve or fourteen hours daily toil none too large to meet the wants of their families, be willing to be taxed to pay men ten hours pay for eight hours work? Not long, we take it, unless the value of their productions, grains, fruits, vegetables or wares meet a corresponding increase in price, and that done what has the laborer accomplished?

The skilled and intelligent laborer can always command work with full pay. Eight hour legislation, unions and strikes are principally for the benefit of the ignorant, inefficient, unskilled, indolent or dissipated laborer, who wants the law to equalize by compelling capital to give him what he has not earned.

There is really no conflict between capital and labor. Labor creates capital, and without capital the laborer would find his occupation gone. The law cannot make all men intelligent, all men skilled, all men industrious, all men sober, all men honest, nor all men economical, thrifty or rich. Two men equally intelligent, equally industrious and equally honest will not prosper alike: one will make money and save it; the other will barely live. The law can not change all this. It can only protect each in his personal rights, guarantee him the right to his earnings if withheld, and throw upon him the selection of his field of labor, the regulation of his earnings, savings, and expenditures. Tact and intuition and skill will make one rich with a few hours daily labor of brain and muscle, the lack of such qualities will keep him poor though he may work sixteen hours a day. Those things the law cannot regulate, and the laborer must not calculate that eight hours is a panacea for all his ills.

ALL SORTS OF PARAGRAPHS.

—Senator Sumner has written a letter favoring thoroughly testing the eight-hour law. He says: "Here let me confess that I find this law especially valuable because it promises more time for education and general improvement. If the experiment is successful in that respect, I shall be less curious on the question of pecuniary profit and loss; for to my mind the education of the human family is above dollars and dividends." But how about bread and beef, beans and butter, beer and bolognas, cabbage, cheese and crackers, potatoes, pickles and pretzels, sausage, saurkraut and sugar, tea, tomatoes and turnips, and provisions generally, Mr. Sumner?

—The Grand Rapids Times having named the Hon. A. H. Morrison, of Berrien County, as the Liberal Republican candidate for Governor, the St. Joseph Herald withdraws him from the course. A suggestion just here: Before the Liberal Republicans parcel out the offices, wouldn't it be well to make a close canvass and determine whether or no there is a sufficient number of outspoken Liberal Republicans to fill the bill. There may be, but if so they are "fighting shy," —waiting for Baltimore, we suppose.

—The eight new Bishops of the M. E. Church were ordained on Friday last. Prior to their ordination a resolution was adopted requiring them to take up their residences one at or near the following places: San Francisco, St. Louis, Boston, Atlanta, Chicago, Cincinnati, Council Bluffs or Omaha, and St. Paul, selection to be made by the Bishops in the order of their seniority in office. Drawing it fine, considering that they were elected five one day and three the next, and all ordained the same day.

—A daring outrage was perpetrated upon the sick and afflicted, in the U. S. Senate on Tuesday last: that is by refusing to put assafetida and calomel on the free list. Some compensation, however, was obtained by Mr. Chandler moving to take old brass from the free list, which prevailed. Radical horn-toeters are not to get their capital in trade at reduced rates for the campaign. It must have been after 4 o'clock P. M. or Zack wouldn't have made such a motion.

—And now comes dame Rumor and reports that Horatio Seymour is to be Secretary of State if Greeley is elected; also that Greeley has promised to support the Democratic candidate for Governor of New York at the November election. To be taken with many grains of allowance.

—Mr. Sumner "gets up his back up" over the New York Times' statement that he said in executive session "that Great Britain should have been promptly notified when she proposed to break up the tribunal that there would be war." He "never said no such thing"—in executive session or out of it.

—Hon. D. W. Voorhees made a speech to his constituents, at Terre Haute, Ind., on the 25th, assigning his reasons for refusing to advise or consent to the acceptance of Greeley by the Baltimore Convention and the Democracy. It was a powerful bill of indictment of Horace Greeley.

—An anti-secret society convention, composed of a couple of dozen volunteers, was held at Oberlin, Ohio, last week, and nominated Charles Francis Adams for President, and Gen. Howard, of Chicago, for Vice-President.

—The colored men of Detroit met in mass meeting a few days ago, declared confidence in Grant, promised him their votes, and denounced the cries of corruption as coming from a "gang of hungry cormorants."

—The Rev. E. G. Andrews, one of the newly elected M. E. Bishops is a nephew of C. I. and E. C. Walker, of Detroit, and was a class-mate of Prof. Winchell, of this city. He is the youngest of the eight "elect."

—The friends of Colfax claim 150 delegates instructed in his favor, and 100 favorable but uninstructed; and so the declined Smiler expects to be renominated despite his smiling declinings.

—According to the new Newspaper Directory of Geo. P. Rowell & Co., there are 67 papers in Michigan got up on the "co-operative" plan, another term for patent out'ards and in'ards.

—The late Lake Superior miners' strike is estimated to have cost the miners a loss, in time and wages, of $72,000; and without accomplishing either object of their strike.

—The Irish have been reported all for Greeley, but an article in another column from a leading Catholic journal would seem to brand the report as unfounded.

—Queen Victoria, it is announced, will not appear at the coming Peace Jubilee Concert in Boston: and so that duet with Grant will not come off.

—We trust that Greeley knows something about swimming, for a newspaper heading says the Chicago Times has thrown him overboard.

—Greeley does not seem to be gaining ground very fast either in the affections of the Democracy or with the disaffected Republicans.

—The Adriatic made her last trip from New York to Queenstown in seven days and sixteen hours, the fastest voyage recorded.

—The Brooklyn Investigating Committee claim to have unearthed 11,000 illegal votes polled at the last city election.

—Go and return tickets to the Philadelphia Convention, from Detroit, are fixed at $16.75, good until June 15th.

—Ben. Butler is instructed to support Wilson for Vice-President, and selects Iowa Wilson instead of the Senator.

—Tennie C. Claflin's latest proposition is to organize a regiment of Internationals with herself as Colonel.

—The mother of the Emperor Francis Joseph, of Austria, died at Vienna on the 28th inst., of typhoid fever.

—"Big Injun" Red Cloud and suite were received by the President on Wednesday.

—Wendell Phillips don't like Horace Greeley or Charles Francis Adams. Too bad.

—June 3d is now the date fixed upon for the sine die adjournment of Congress.

IN THE House, on Monday, Mr. POLAND attempted to put through the Ku Klux or habeas corpus suspension bill under a suspension of the rules, but failed to get the necessary two-thirds vote, or even a majority, the vote being: yeas, 94; nays, 108. 23 Republicans voted with the Democrats against suspension, including Messrs. BLAIR and STOUGHTON of this State. Without a suspension of the rules the bill cannot be reached this session, so we may hope that it is dead. Enough of the voting no Republicans may, however, be brought to a realizing sense of their position, and pledge their votes for a new bill, which Mr. POLAND could introduce at any time. BUTLER's project will probably now be revived for a recess instead of an adjournment, in order to prolong in that way the life of the odious and infamous bill in question, a bill subjecting the liberty of every citizen of the nation to the whim and will of the military dictator enthroned in the White-House, for that is what President GRANT becomes and is if empowered to suspend the writ of habeas corpus at pleasure.

—BUTLER reported a new enforcement or suspension bill on Wednesday, but the Democrats fillibustered and compelled and adjournment before he could force it through.

IN DISCUSSING the habeas corpus suspension bill, in the Senate, on the 21st inst., Mr. MORTON said in the course of his indictment of the Southern people that their outcry against the Northerners who sought power among them was attributable to "the old State rights feeling and their want of a feeling of nationality," adding as a clincher: "This and political motives led them to do all they "could to make the new-comers uncomfortable, and to drive them out, and "this was one of the great errors of the "South, because carpet-baggers, with "their bags well filled, were the very "things she needed most, in order to aid "her to recover from the effects of the war "and to develop her resources." Aye, Mr. MORTON, "with carpet-bags well filled:" that's just the rub. The Southern people claim that the army of carpet-baggers came down upon them types of Pharaoh's lean kine, to thrive and fatten upon the substance of the land, to fill their empty carpet-bags with the spoils of office and speculation, and to assume the role of "lords and masters," backed by the central government at Washington. That's what's the matter, Mr. MORTON.

THE Liberal Republicans counted without their host in assuming the re-election of Senator O. S. FERRY, of Connecticut, as a victory. It is now out that the bolting Republicans were GRANT men all, and that the little fight was a family quarrel of the smallest dimensions. And that his re-election may not be made to appear as playing into the hands of GREELEY, Senator FERRY has written a letter discussing his views and position, the issues and interests at stake in the campaign, in which he says: "To intrust "these great interests to an administra-"tion made up and controlled by Mr. "GREELEY would be a mere midsummer "madness." FERRY, then, is a GRANT man, and the Connecticut Democrats chose between two GRANT men. That was all.

—It is perhaps a fair question: Are there any Liberal-Cincinnati-Greeley Republicans in Connecticut?

THIS is how the Chicago Evening Post, radical Republican, advises Commissioner EDMONDS to dispose of himself:

Yesterday morning the proceedings terminated, and Edmonds stands acquitted on each article. The testimony was, however, so damaging that he ought, in decency, to resign. The moral effect of a man holding office after so exhaustive an exposure is dangerous in every respect; and if Mr. Edmonds has any unselfish love for the State that has unwisely elevated him to office, his resignation will be in Governor Baldwin's hands before many days.

Does the Post see anything green in Mr. EDMONDS? Resign and acknowledge his guilt, in the face of an honorable acquittal? If he don't care on his own account he has too much respect for the High Court of Impeachment to snub it by such a declaration of want of confidence in its judgment.

THE SENATE "Supplementary Civil Rights Bill" ran against a snag in the House on Tuesday. Mr. BRIGHAM un took to put it through out of its regular order,—if anything is or can be out of order in the House.—but his motion to suspend the rules was defeated: yeas, 115; nays, 81; a two-thirds vote being necessary. The Democratic minority has it in its power to prevent any irregular or forced legislation during the closing days of the session, and their constituents expect them to do so. That curse of Congress, absenteeism, should cease for a few days.

The Ohio Democracy.

COLUMBUS, May 28.—The Democratic State Central Committee and a few Democratic politicians met here to-day to consult on the situation and fix a day for holding the State Convention. Gen. Durbin Ward offered a resolution that a call be issued for a State Convention of the Democratic party, to be held in this city August 7th, to nominate a State ticket and Senatorial Electors; that the call shall invite all Liberal Republicans and all opposed to the re-election of Gen. Grant to take part in said Convention; also that conventions be held in each Congressional district June 19th, in which the Democrats and all opposed to Grant shall co-operate, to elect delegates and alternates and four delegates at large to the Baltimore Convention, and that the election of delegates at large shall be reported to the State Central Committee, who shall meet here June 26th to count the votes cast by the respective Congressional districts for delegates at large, and the four persons having the largest number of districts shall be delegates at large to Baltimore. This first resolution was taken up and warmly discussed, Gen. Ward stating that he had offered this resolution so as to do away with action in the State Convention until it was known what it had been deemed best to do at Baltimore. Individually he was in favor of a straight Democratic nomination at Baltimore, and Wm. S. Groesbeck was his first choice.

Some members of the committee may have felt similarly inclined, but no one else publicly expressed himself as in favor of a straight Democratic nomination.

A motion was made to strike out that part of the resolution which invited the Liberal Republicans and anti-Grant men to co operate, and after an animated discussion a motion to so amend as to lay the whole series of resolutions on the table was agreed to. A motion was then made that the convention for nominating a State ticket and delegates to Baltimore meet in Cleveland, Ohio, June 27th, and agreed to, leaving the question of nominating an electoral ticket to the discretion of that Convention. Ward moved to amend it so as to provide that the language of the call of the National Committee be added to it, but this was voted down—8 to 5.

While no formal action was taken a general willingness was expressed to support Greeley heartily in case Baltimore saw fit to indorse his nomination, and some prominent gentlemen expressed themselves enthusiastically over such a course. The change of place of holding the State Convention from this city to Cleveland has no political significance, but is merely an economical move, free halls and free music being the incentive.

An East Saginaw Tragedy.

From the East Saginaw Courier, May 22.

Between 3 and 4 o'clock yesterday morning, one of the bloodiest tragedies that ever blotted the history of this city, occurred out on Janet street (Deerforth road), near the corner of Eighth street. In view of the fact that the man was perfectly sane at the time of the commission of the deed, and the fact that he is reported to have been a temperate man, therefore not having the customary liquor delirium to plead in the extenuation for him, it becomes one of those cold blooded transactions, for brutal ferocity rarely equaled, never surpassed.

The name of the would be murderer, and successful suicide, is Charles Boese, and his history and that of his family is as follows, as far as can be learned from the facts before the Coroner's Jury, and could be gleaned from those living nearest the scene of blood. Boese came to East Saginaw about three weeks ago from Tonawanda, New York, where he had lived for a term of years, had worked as a common laborer, until a short time previous to his leaving that place, when he broke one of his legs, from which he had but recently recovered—in fact he has done no work since his arrival here—his wife having supported the family by going out to do washing and odd chores. His family consists of his wife, two children (boys) here, and a son living in the the old country. Gustav, the eldest of the boys here, (a bright lad of fourteen) tells or the frequent abuse of his mother, by his father, heretofore, but to the extent only of using his fists on her. And he tells also of a wordy quarrel between them the night before. Yesterday, however, Mrs. Boese arose as usual between 3 and 4 in the morning, saying in answer to her husband's inquiry as to where she was going, that she was going out to do some washing, mentioning the house whither she had engaged to go. At this, the husband leaped from the bed, and without answering, seized a hatchet lying near, and made a murderous assault upon the woman, striking her with the weapon upon and over the left eye, forcing that organ out upon her cheek, and following up his attack with blows upon other portions of the head and person until the woman fell senseless to the floor. Thinking he had despatched her, Boese then seized a butcher knife, with a blade fully 10 inches in length, and plunged it into his stomach just below the breast bone, and pressing down on the knife, by apparently four separate cuts, each one from an inch to an inch and a half in length, made a horrible incision in his abdomen, through which his bowels protuded to a great extent. The two boys in the meantime, had commenced screaming, "You have killed mother." "Yes," said the demon, "and I will kill you, too," at which the boys fled the house. Boese, notwithstanding the terrible wounds he had inflicted on himself, next rushed from the house, with the hatchet in one hand, and knife in the other. He had made but a few steps, when he tripped against a rail and fell, but recovering, he made for a hole in the ground about ten steps from, and in front of the house, in which there was probably four inches of water. Into this the wretched man threw himself, evidently with the intention of ending his sufferings and miserable life, by drowning. There not being sufficient water in the hole to accomplish this, Boese dragged himself out, and again entered the house, where he sunk to his knees, still keeping possession of the knife and hatchet. By this time, some of the neighbors, among them Mr. Earnest Weichman, had arrived on the spot. Mr. Weichman says that when he got there he heard loud grunting (as he expressed it) inside the house, accompanied by a noise, as if some one chopping something. Leaving one of the men who had come with him at the front door, Mr W. passed to the rear of the house when he effected an entrance, to find Boese still on his knees, covered with blood from head to foot, his bowels dragging the floor, still holding the knife in his left hand, while he dealt blows on his head with the hatchet in his right At the approach of Weichman, Boese made an effort as if to hurl either knife or hatchet at him (Weichman) but the latter sized hold of the man, and wrested the knife from his grasp, Boese meantime striking himself with the hatchet on different parts of the head. Weichman addressed a question to Boese, as to what he was trying to do, and Boese replied in the low Dutch language, with apparent composure, "I have killed her, and I am now killing myself." Soon after Boese fell over dead, not, however, until a large number had congregated, to some of whom he spoke intelligibly. Word was immediately sent to Coroner Forrest, Dr. Hesse and Dr. Ross, the former of whom summoned a jury, while the latter attended to the prostrate woman, who was, and is still alive, whom they caused to be removed to the house of a neighbor near by, and her wants administered to. The woman is badly injured, but it is thought by the attending physician not fatally. But little was elicited at the examination other than has been related. There were over thirty distinct wounds on the person of Boese, and the woman's head was fearfully cut, and the skull fractured, and one of her fingers entirely cut off. She is being properly cared for.

There is much to indicate that this most sanguinary affair was premeditated by Boese, as instance the fact that he had on Monday ground the hatchet, (a common shingling one) and the knife to an exceeding fine edge, and had taken the precaution to lay them in position to be easily reached by him.

Thus closes act one of this blood-thirsty affair, which is said to have grown entirely out of a jealousy long harbored by the monster, Boese.

The Irish not all for Greeley.

From the Freeman's Journal and Catholic Register.

Can the Democratic party indorse Greeley and Gratz Brown? No! and a thousand times no! The attempt of any corrupt or cowardly leaders to betray the Democratic party thus would be only the declaration that the Democratic party was captured, and had surrendered, bag and baggage, body and boots, to its most implacable enemy. Private bargains may have been made, but Democrats will never ratify them. If, to suppose the impossible, the Democrotic Convention at Baltimore, in next July, were to nominate no ticket, and if no other rally of Democrats to name a ticket were to be made, and we were to be left with the beggarly choice between Grant and Greeley—between the "man on horseback" and the willing instrument of all the free-lovers, "Internationals," communists, and other foes of morality, society and religion—the general verdict would be, "Grant rather than Greeley!" We cannot imagine our committing ourself to the support of Grant. But we say it distinctly and deliberately, that as a man, a Christian, as the head of a family, and as a citizen having the duty of trying to guard our country from the most shameful degradation, if we were tied up to the desperate choice, we must use all our influence for continuing the rule of Grant, the stupid "man on horseback" against Greeley, the man without discipline, without doctrine, and akin to every abomination, in America or in Europe, that would dethrone God, revile the revelations of God's truth, and fraternize with the commune, the International, and every other scheme of devil-worship. Our instincts teach us to oppose the lawless person as if he were the plenipotentiary of the anti-Christ. The vulgar, plundering fellow "on horseback" is merely human, and a very poor "human" at that. But, at least, he is not a thoroughly bewitched tool of the devil, on plans made by bad women and men, as Mr. Greeley is.

Class Day at the University.

The exercises of Class Day in the University, set down for Wednesday last, came off according to the programme, and may be summarized as follows:

A well-filled M. E. Church in the forenoon, with prayer by Rev. Dr. COCKER; oration, "The Forces of History," by J. P. DUTTON; poem, "The Twentieth Century," by WALTER A. BROOKS; the benediction, by Dr. WILLIAMS; and music interspersed. The Detroit dailies have already given abstracts of oration and poem, and the next Chronicle will, probably, supplement the abstracts with full reports.

The afternoon exercises on the campus, in rear of the Law Building, consisted of Class History, by W. T. UNDERWOOD, who humorously detailed the frolics and escapades of the members jointly and severally, "pony" rides, sidewalk raids, love affairs, etc.; the Prophecy, poem, by HECTOR NEUHOFF, who placed his fellows in 1900 according to the let of his imagination; presentation of "Rewards of Merit"—a "mean-time chronometer (in brass) to the "coming man," one CHRISTIE, who during his whole college course had never been on time for any exercise or appointment; and "What I Know About Farming," to the representative member of the Farmers' Club; dedication of the Class Ivy, with an address by J. J. MAPEL; and miscellaneous doings.

The day was beautiful, the elements propitious, all the machinery worked smoothly, and a heap of enjoyment, especially for those who understood the "hits," was crowded into a few hours. And now the Seniors "lay off duty" and wait for Commencement and their sheepskins.

Water-works are again the topic of discussion in our city, the project being to bring water from the lakes west of the city, about 2½ miles. These lakes are found to be 70 feet above Huron street, and the waters are claimed to be soft and of good quality. Some investigations have, we understand, been instituted to test the quantity. Our city needs Water-works—furnishing water both for household and fire purposes—and if a thorough investigation settles the point that the lakes in question are the true source of supply, not temporarily but permanently, the right track has been struck. But no risks should be run or costly expenditures made until quality, quantity, and accomplishment have been reasonably established. Another week our readers may hear from the committee engaged in investigating the subject.

School and Library Moneys.

We append a table of the Primary School moneys apportioned to the several cities and towns in this county by the Superintendent of Public Instruction; also the apportionment of Fine and Library moneys as made by County Treasurer FAIRCHILD:

Ypsilanti City,	1,602	768 96	18 90
Total,	12 854	$6,169 92	151 75

The school moneys are one cent less on the scholar than last year, the deficiency being chargeable to certain County Treasurers who failed to make their returns within the prescribed time. The amount "short" will serve, however, to increase the average monthly balance of the State Treasurer for the coming year in the sum of nearly $4,000. The total amount distributed to the several counties is $187,352 64; the aggregate number of scholars, 390,318, and the rate per scholar 48 cents.

The limited sum of fine moneys will not make the several township libraries burst with fatness, and besides proves this a very law abiding county.

THE NEW YORK CIRCUS.—Our citizens will bear in mind that LENT'S New York Circus will exhibit in Ann Arbor on Wednesday afternoon and evening, June 5th. This announcement will be hailed with satisfaction by our amusement loving people. The New York Circus is considered to be, in all its appointments, the best circus that travels. It is permanently located, during the winter, in the iron amphitheatre, Fourteenth street, New York, and only makes short tours through the country during the summer season. It travels by railroad, and its horses and performers are always fresh and in a fine condition. One of the most prominent features of the New York Circus is Prof. Chas. Boswell's New York Band of twenty-five pieces—the largest and best band attached to any circus. Mlle. Rolland, the finest lady rider in the world, and John Henry Cooke, the famous English rider; also Charles Fish, a wonderful bareback rider; George Dunbar, a celebrated English clown; and Julian Kent will amuse the people by their comicalities. The attractions of the New York Circus are too numerous to mention, and for full particulars we refer our readers to the advertisement in another column.

[Communicated.]

The Gingko tree of Japan has been recommended as a fine ornamental tree, hardy and of easy culture. That it is hardy there can be but little doubt, as one which has now attained twelve or four ceen feet in height may be seen in the front door yard of Mrs. HOOKER, on Forest street, in a flourishing condition, showing no injury after our late, long and severe winter. All who may be interested in seeing the curious foliage—fan shaped—of this queer tree can do so by a short walk beyond the University. As the leaves, however, increase very much in size as summer advances, they will be in best estate a few weeks later. This Gingko tree at Mrs. Hooker's is, we believe, the only one of any age in town; it having been put out some six years since.

In the Hearth and Home for April 15th, 1871, may be seen an article on the Gingko tree, with illustrations. It is between twelve and fifteen years since American Horticulturists had their attention drawn to the advantages of cultivating it in our Northern United States. M. H. C.

PHILADELPHIA CONVENTION.—A rare opportunity is offered to our citizens who wish to pay a visit to the great city of Philadelphia during the National Republican Convention, and see the office-holders in council.

R. makes close connection with the Pennsylvania Central at Fort Wayne, and that through coaches run from here to Philadelphia, so that passengers who go by this route have but one change to make.

Political Matters in Tennessee.

NASHVILLE, May 24.—The Union and American this morning says Andrew Johnson is willing to become a candidate for Congress for the State at large under the law giving Tennessee an additional representative. The friends of Gen. Cheatham wish him to announce himself as a candidate for that position.

NASHVILLE, May 24.—Henry S. Foote has announced himself a candidate for Congress. In his card he says: "Having been magnanimously relieved from civil disabilities about three days since by a wise and paternal government, and feeling desirous of making a proper display of gratitude therefor, I announce myself a candidate for a seat in the House of Representatives of the United States Congress for the State at large. Declining to submit my claims as a candidate to a caucus of any political party, or either, I shall support Greeley and Brown and stand firmly and inflexibly by the principles embodied in the Cincinnati platform and in Greeley's noble letter of acceptance.

The June number of the Eclectic Magazine has a very attractive list of papers from the leading foreign periodicals, of which the most noticeable are: Sir Henry Holland's Recollections, The Portugese in Africa, Wanderings in Japan, Temperature and Movements of the Deep Sea, A Memoir of Mazzini, About Charles Lamb, Super-human Dwelling-Places, Monks of La Trappe, Our Dinners, The Asrai, and Chemistry in the Kitchen, with a continuation of Strange Adventures of a Phæton, full editorial departments, etc. The illustration is a very fine portrait of Carl Schurz. $5 a year. E. R. PELTON, 108 Fulton street, New York.

— The June number of the Overland Monthly has, among other papers: Sheep-Farming in California, What Was It? Kodiak and Southern Alaska, An American Art—the Electrotype, The Northern California Indians—III., Pavy's Expedition to the North Pole, with serial stories of the true Overland type. A new and novel feature in the Overland is a monthly record of marriages and deaths on the Pacific Coast, carefully compiled for each issue; marriages, 160; deaths, 272. $4 a year. JOHN H. CARMANY & Co., San Francisco.

— Among the most noticeable articles in the Herald of Health for June are: Absence from Physical Love in Youth, 1795, by Christopher William Hufeland; Corsets, by Howard Glyndon; and Money-Spending, by Rev. C. H. Brigham. $1.25 a year. WOOD, HOLBROOK & Co., New York.

In Memoriam.

JOHN MARSHALL SEAMAN, son of EZRA C. and MARIETTA V. SEAMAN, born in Detroit in 1847—died at Ann Arbor, of pulmonary consumption, Sunday evening, May 19th, 1872.

Always a thoughtful boy, as he advanced in years he exhibited much talent, and application to books, particularly to works which sought out the laws of nature, and ran consequences back to causes. After the preliminary preparation in English, Latin and French, he entered on a course at the University, but was compelled to give it up on account of feeble health; which however did not prevent reading, which, with him, was study! Reading on all subjects of interest to the scholar and the man of mature mind. Especially was he fond of mechanics and the sciences generally, as well as of history.

Stricken down by disease, his love of learning never faltered, but he continued its pursuits to the verge of the grave, and yet not mere human wisdom. Consecrated to God in baptism, his was a life of daily prayer: the scriptures were read and pondered, and though being reticent in manner, there was not so much outward expression of feeling, on occasions there was seen to be the communings of the heart with his Maker, as heart answereth to heart! His choice above every other remembrance, from his mother, on his last birth-day, was a bible, and as he took it from her hand he repeated the last verse of the nineteenth Psalm, saying: "That is an excellent prayer! Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight O Lord, my strength and my redeemer."

And so, gentle and courteous to all around, he passed from the sight of those who loved him. A little labored breathing—a deeper sleep—and the ransomed soul was, we trust, with God, in Paradise; where none of the imperfections of sense can fetter the aspirations of the disencumbered spirit, and where we shall no more see thro' a glass darkly, but unlock all knowledge with the golden key, laid up in the counsels of eternity. M. H. C.

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the Burlington Route, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st. to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific Roads. 2d, to Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with R. R. lands and homesteads. 3d, To St Joseph, Kansas City and all Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, finest cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air Brake (to prevent the loss of life that is ever where else happening); Pullman's sleepers, Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the West. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific Roads, be sure that you go "By-Way of Burlington"

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the great West and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, and any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent, B. & Mo R.-R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

The Lumber Market.

During the past few days there have been very few if any transactions in lumber at this market, and probably not many on the river or shore. This is owing to the increased difference between buyers and sellers, brought about by the recent rain storm. A week ago purchases were freely made at $7 50, $15 and $35, or figures equally good. The heavy rain which fell during a couple of days, and the lowering state of the weather generally, led many to the supposition that more logs would be secured from the upper rivers and their small tributaries. While buyers held off, sellers remained firm, hence no sales.

The prospect of getting out more logs this season is exceedingly poor; indeed, it is safe to say that scarce any circumstances can be conceived of that would be so fortuitous in character as to result in much increase to the stock already obtained. This is because rain storms after this time seldom continue long enough to enable the getting together of log driving parties who can work up to advantage. A few logs well out already may be run down on a few days' freshet. Those operators who have worked with small means or borrowed capital and who have their logs "hung up," will many of them suffer, as their interest account will be ruinous. Even some who are in the market with their logs are holding for high prices when they are in the most straightened circumstances.

The present anomalous condition of the market serves to make money very scarce among lumbermen. It is doubtful if ever before so few sales have been made by this time in the season, that is, in proportion to the crop cut, or even that secured. A few weeks will bring about a settled market and then we may look for unprecedented activity.—Bay City Journal, 27*th*.

The Feeling of the Illinois Press.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., May 28.—The State Register to-day publishes a list of seventeen Republican newspapers in Illinois which have unequivocally declared for Greeley and Brown. The Register tomorrow will print a list of six German newspapers in Illinois which declare for Greeley and Brown unequivocally, nine others opposed to Grant, and two for Grant. The list will also embrace thirteen German papers other than in Illinois that declare unequivocally for Greeley and Brown, and twelve are for Greeley as against Grant.

COMMERCIAL.

DETROIT, May 29, 1872.

Business is quiet in most all departments. Money, however, is getting easy, and it is probable that when dulness is to be expected we may have stirring trade. Such, at least has been the course of things the past three months, financially and commercially, the old order of things almost entirely reversed. Hardware is still unchanged, jobbers are free to admit that in their opinion the highest prices have been reached. Lumber is 50@$1.00 per M cheaper since the rains. Dry goods are off a little in many of the leading staples, and the market inactive. No wool has been received, although sheared sheep have been offering for two or three weeks. Wool buyers are free from excitement, and they may be expected to look twice at their money before paying 1c out at present quotations of the staple.

Cattle and sheep are in good demand. The former range at $5.50@6.00, for butchers' stock, while shipping grades would command $6.00@6.25.

There is no excitement whatever in the produce market. Green apples are about done with, though an occasional lot of russets sells at $3.50@4.50 per bbl. Dried are dull at 10½c, and were the stock heavy a decline would ensue. Butter is very plentiful; heavy amounts are going in to cellar, and it is safe to say that the bulk of it will come out at a loss. The quality is slightly above that of last year, but there is a good deal of over-salted and variegated (Dolly Varden) butter. The range for good and choice is 18@20c. Cheese is active at 14@15c. Eggs—only in local demand—12½@13c.

Flour is heavy at $9.50@9.75 for best white. Wheat rates as follows: Extra, $1.95; No. 1 White, $1.92; Amberwell, $1.90; Amber, $1 85. Corn is dull—offering at 38c. Oats heavy at 34c for No. 1 State. Barley nominal at $1.50 per cwt and malt firm at $1.20@1.25 per bu. Potatoes dull at 45@70c for mixed and peachblows. Tallow in demand at 8c.

ANN ARBOR, THURSDAY, May 31st, '72.

APPLES—Green, 80@90c per bu. Dried, 8@9c per lb.
BEEF—Brings 7@8c.
BOLTED MEAL—$2.00.
BUTTER—Prices remain at 16@18c.
BEANS—$1.75 per bu. is paid for good quality.
CORN—Brings 55@38c per bu.
CHICKENS—Dressed 12@
EGGS—Command 10@11c.
FLOUR—XXX, $5.00 per cwt.
HAY—$13@16 per ton, according to quality.
HONEY—In cap, 18@20c.
LARD—The market stands at 7@8c.
MAPLE SUGAR—12@17c.
OATS—37@40c.
POTATOES—90@95c.

The Loneliness of Farming Life in America.

An American traveler in the Old World notices, among the multitude of things that are new to his eye, the gathering of agricultural populations into villages. He has been accustomed in his own country to see them distributed upon the farms they cultivate. The isolated farm life, so universal here, either does not exist at all in the greater part of continental Europe, or it exists as a comparatively modern institution. The old populations, of all callings and professions, clustered together for self-defense, and built walls around themselves. Out from these walls, for miles around, went the tillers of the soil in the morning, and back into the gates they thronged at night. Cottages were clustered around feudal castles, and grew into towns; and so Europe for many centuries was cultivated mainly by people who lived in villages and cities, many of which were walled, and all of which possessed appointments of defense. The early settlers in our own country took the same means to defend themselves from the treacherous Indian. The towns of Hadley, Hatfield, Northfield, and Deerfield, on the Connecticut River, are notable examples of this kind of building; and to this day they remain villages of agriculturists. That this is the way in which farmers ought to live we have no question, and we wish to say a few words about it.

There is some reason for the general disposition of American men and women to shun agricultural pursuits which the observers and philosophers have been slow to find. We see young men pushing everywhere into trade, into mechanical pursuits, into the learned professions, into insignificant clerkships, into salaried positions of every sort that will take them into towns and support and hold them there We find it impossible to drive poor people from the cities with the threat of starvation, or to coax them with the promise of better pay and cheaper fare. There they stay, and starve, and sicken, and sink. Young women resort to the shops and factories rather than take service in farmers' houses, where they are received as members of the family; and when they marry they seek an alliance, when practicable, with mechanics and tradesmen who live in villages and large towns. The daughters of the former fly the farm at the first opportunity. The towns grow larger all the time, and, in New England at least, the farms are becoming wider and longer, and the farming population are diminished in numbers, and, in some localities, degraded in quality and character.

It all comes to this, that isolated life has very little significance to a social being. The social life of the village and the city has intense fascination to the lonely dwellers on the farm, or to a great institute of them. Especially is this the case with the young. The youth of both sexes who have seen nothing of the world have an overwhelming desire to meet life and to be among the multitude. They feel their life to be narrow in its opportunities and its rewards, and the pulsations of the great social heart that comes to them in rushing trains and passing steamers and daily newspapers, damp with the dews of a hundred brows, thrill them with longings for the places where the rhythmic throb is felt and heard. They are not to be blamed for this. It is the most natural thing in the world.

If all of life were labor,—if the great object of life were the scraping together of a few dollars, more or less,—why, isolation without diversion would be economy and profit; but so long as the object of life is life, and the best and purest and happiest that can come of it, all needless isolation is a crime against the soul, in that it is a surrender and sacrifice of noble opportunities.

We are, therefore, not sorry to see farms growing larger, provided those who work them will get nearer together; and that is what they ought to do. Any farmer who plants himself and his family alone—far from possible neighbors—takes upon himself a terrible responsibility. It is impossible that he and his should be well developed there. He will be forsaken in his old age by the very children for whom he made his great sacrifice. They will fly to the towns for the social food and stimulus for which they are starved. We never hear of a colony settling on a Western prairie without a thrill of pleasure. It is in colonies that all ought to settle, and in villages rather than on separate farms. The meeting, the lecture, the public amusement, the social assembly, should be things easily reached. There is no such damper upon free social life as distance. A long road is the surest bar to neighborly intercourse. If the social life of the farmer were richer, his life would by that measure be the more attractive.

After all, there are farmers who will read this article with a sense of affront or injury, as if by doubting or disputing the sufficiency of their social opportunities we insult them with a sort of contempt. We assure them that they cannot afford to treat thoroughly sympathetic counsel in this way. We know that their wives and daughters and sons are on our side, quarrel with us as they may; and the women and children are right. "The old man," who rides to market and the post-office, and mingles more or less in business with the world, gets along tolerably well; but it is the stayers at home who suffer. Instead of growing wiser and better as they grow old, they lose all the grace of life in unmeaning drudgery, and instead of ripening in mind and heart, they simply dry up or decay. We are entirely satisfied that the great curse in farming life in America is its isolation. It is useless to say that men shun the farm because they are lazy. The American is not a lazy man anywhere; but he is social, and he will fly from a life that is not social to one that is. If we are to have a larger and better population devoted to agriculture, isolation must be shunned, and the whole policy of settlement hereafter must be controlled or greatly modified by social considerations.

What is Water?

Before closing, may I be permitted to ask and to answer the question, What is water? I suppose some of my readers are ready to make the Dogberry-like reply, "Water, sir, is water." That certainly reaches the point by a very short cut, but to the thinking, inquiring man it is not quite satisfactory. Let us answer the question from the standpoint of the chemist. Water is rust. The red powder that falls from iron that has long been subjected to moisture is rust of iron. It is the oxide of a metal, and so is water. Water is the rust of hydrogenium, true metal. This wonderful element no human eyes have ever looked upon, and probably never will, as in its free state it exists only in the form of an invisible gas. Quite recently, science has demonstrated experimentally, what has long been suspected, that hydrogen gas is a metal, and capable of assuming a solid form in alloys. Oxygen, by uniting with this gaseous metal, rusts, oxidizes, or burns it, and water is the rust or ashes. This strange metal, hydrogenium, and its oxide, play an important part in all the operations of nature. It is not alone confined to the little ball of earth upon which we live, but it exists in the stellar worlds above us, and in those misty points of light, the nebulæ, which have so long puzzled and perplexed the astronomer and men versed in the physical sciences. The recent discoveries by means of the spectroscope have proved that this element enters largely into the unformed, chaotic masses of matter, moving in space, of which the worlds are made. It is ready, when the formative act is fully accomplished, for taking its place, in combination with oxygen, as water, to aid in the sustentation of animal and vegetable life upon spheres so far distant that our imagination even cannot reach them.

Mr. Bryant Robbed in Mexico.

In a late letter of the poet Bryant to the N. Y. Evening Post, he gives a vivid picture of the robber rule existing in Mexico. This is what comes from the sole education of a people being in the hands of priests of one sect. Mr. Bryant says:

We followed the road a little distance to the village of Tacubaya, situated on ground somewhat elevated above the plain, and noted for its beautiful country seats, the property of opulent families in the city. We entered and wandered over one of these—the Escadon estate, as it is called, from the name of the family owning it. It was a perfect labyrinth of walks among fruit trees and flowering shrubs. The walks twining through the grove are somewhat neglected, to be sure. Here and there were towering over the palms the fruit trees. A spacious mansion stood in the midst of an ample flower garden.

"Is not the family there?" I asked.

"No," was the answer, "the family is safer in town. The members sometimes come out to visit this place in the daytime and return by daylight, but they never venture to remain here over night. They might be robbed, or perhaps kidnapped and required to pay a heavy ransom."

I looked round on the orange trees dropping their fruit on the neglected walks where the weeds were beginning to make their appearance, and beautiful as the place was, I did not much wonder that it was not more carefully tended by those who were able to enjoy its beauty only by snatches, or in constant fear of a visit from banditti.

That Tacubaya was not a safe place for those who had anything to lose, I had a proof before I got home, for arriving at the railway station just before sunset, I entered the cars amid a crowd of people returning to town, and soon after having occasion to consult my watch I found that it was missing.

The most unsafe place, however, at present, seems to be the railway between this city and Puebla. The newspapers here give accounts of attacks made by robbers on the trains conveying pulque, which is the beverage drawn from the plant called here the maguey. These attacks, however, have been generally repulsed.

Not so fortunate has been the superintendent and paymaster of the railway which is yet constructing between Puebla and Orizaba, Mr. Quin, whom I saw after my arrival, just returned from an adventure with the robbers. They seized him when he happened to be without money, took away his watch, and after a detention of two hours, bargained with him for his release on the payment of $50, which he brought them, and they returned him his watch. But the watch he was not to keep, for two days afterwards I heard that they found him with $1,600 on his person and took that and the watch also. Soon afterwards news came that Mr. Quin was kidnapped a third time. He had no money with him, and after detaining him a day or two the robbers allowed him to depart with the message to his employers, that if $40,000 were not immediately sent to them, they would tear up the iron rails. The money, however, has not been paid, and the railway is yet untouched.

The leader of these bandits is one Negrete, who calls himself a General, and claims to be a revolutionist instead of a robber.

Omelets.

Few articles of food are so readily attainable, so attractive in appearance, and so quickly cooked as omelets. A good and economical omelet is made with four eggs, well beaten, and added to one cup of milk, into which has been stirred one tablespoonful of pounded cracker and one teaspoonful of flour. Stir the mixture well together just before pouring it on the well-butt red griddle, which should not be too hot lest the omelet should have a strong flavor of scorched butter. Turn it as soon as it begins to "set" around the edges with a wide bladed knife; fold it over once, and then again, and at once lift the griddle and turn the omelet upon a warm plate. It will of course be of four thicknesses. The best and nicest omelet is made with one egg to one spoonful of milk. For an unexpected guest, this one-egg omelet is just the thing for luncheon or tea, as it is easily made and turned off the griddle so handsomely.

A very good omelet is made by preparing a mince-meat of boiled ham, or cold veal, or chicken, well seasoned, and after the egg is poured upon the griddle, immediately scattering on a thick layer of the mince, and then folding the omelet as usual.

Poached or scrambled eggs should always be served on square pieces of toasted bread, which have been dipped for an instant in hot water and buttered. Mince meat, to be nicely served, should always be accompanied by toast in this way.

THOSE WHO NEVER WORKED.—We pity those who do not and never have worked. Ennui and satiety sooner or later are sure to be their portion. Like the child who is in possession of every new toy, and who has snapped and broken them all, they stand looking about for something—anything new and amusing; and like this child, they often stoop to the mud and gutter for it. It is an understood principle of human nature, that people never value that which is easily obtained. Bread which has been purchased with unearned money has never the flavor of sweetness of that which is won by the sweat of one's own brow.

VINEGAR BITTERS

EUREKA
VINEGAR BITTERS
J. WALKER, Proprietor. R. H. McDONALD & Co., Druggists & Gen. Agents, San Francisco, Cal., and 32 Commerce street, N. Y.
MILLIONS bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.
They are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.
They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.
FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.
For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.
DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.
They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.
FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.
Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.
Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist, there is scarcely an individual upon the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No System of Medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.
J. WALKER, Proprietor. R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists and Gen. Agents, San Francisco, California, and 32 and 34 Commerce Street, New York.
