THE PRAYER-SEEKER.

BY J. G. WHITTIER.

Along the aisle where prayer was made,
A woman, all in black arrayed,
Close-veiled, between the kneeling host,
With gliding motion of a ghost,
Passed to the desk and laid thereon
A scroll which bore these words alone,—
Pray for me!

Back from the place of worshipping
She glided like a guilty thing:
The rustle of her draperies stirred
By hurrying feet, alone was heard:
While, full of awe, the preacher read,
As out into the dark she sped:
"Pray for me!"

Back to the night from whence she came,
To unimagined grief or shame!
Across the threshold of that door
None knew the burden that she bore;
Alone she left the written scroll,
The legend of a troubled soul,—
Pray for me!

Glide on, poor ghost of woe or sin!
Thou leav'st a common need within;
Each bears, like thee, a nameless weight,
Some misery inarticulate,
Some secret sin, some shrouded dread,
Some household sorrow all unsaid.
Pray for us!

Pass on! The type of all thou art,
Sad witness to the common heart!
With face in veil and seal on lip,
In mute and strange companionship,
Like thee we wander to and fro,
Dumby imploring as we go:
Pray for us!

Ah, who shall pray, since he who pleads
Our want perchance hath greater needs?
Yet they who make their loss the gain
Of others shall not ask in vain,
And Heaven bends low to hear the prayer
Of love from dips of self despair:
Pray for us!

In vain remorse and fear and hate
Beat with bruised hands against a fate,
Whose walls of iron only move,
And even to the touch of love
He only feels his burdens fall
Who, taught by suffering, pities all,
Pray for us!

He prayeth best who leaves unguessed
The mystery of another's breast.
Why cheeks grow pale, why eyes o'erflow,
Or heads are white, thou need'st not know.
Enough to note by many a sign
That every heart hath needs like thine.
Pray for us!

PERE ANTOINE'S DATE-PALM.

BY THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH.

Near the levee, and not far from the old French Cathedral, in New Orleans, stands a fine date-palm, thirty feet in height growing out in the open air as hardily as if its sinuous roots were sucking strength from their native earth

Sir Charles Lyell, in his "Second Visit to the United States," mentions this exotic: "The tree is seventy or eighty years old; for Pere Antoine, a Roman Catholic Priest, who died about twenty years ago, told Mr. Bringier that he planted it himself when he was young In his will he provided that they who succeeded to this lot of ground should forfeit it if they cut down the palm.

Wishing to learn something of Pere Antoine's history, Sir Charles Lyell made inquiries among the ancient creole inhabitants of the faubourg. That the old priest in his last days became very emaciated, that he walked about the streets like a mummy, that he gradually dried up and finally blew away, was the meagre and unsatisfactory result of the tourist's investigations. This is all that is generally told of Pere Antoine.

In the summer of 1861, while New Orleans was yet occupied by the rebel forces, I met at N———, on the coast of New England, a lady from Louisana—Miss Badeau by name—who gave me the substance of the following legend touching Pere Antoine and his wonderful date-palm. If it should appear tame to the reader, it will be because I haven't a black ribbed-silk dress, and a strip of point-lace around my throat, like Miss Badeau; it will be because I haven't her eyes and lips and Southern music to tell it with.

When Pere Antoine was a very young man, he had a friend whom he loved as he loved his life Emile Jardin returned his passion, and the two, on account of their friendship, became the marvel of the city where they dwelt. One was never seen without the other; for they studied, walked, ate, and slept together.

Antoine and Emile were preparing to enter the church; indeed, they had taken the preliminary steps, when a circumstance occurred which changed the color of their lives.

A foreign lady, from some far-off island in the Pacific, had a few months before moved into their neighborhood The lady died suddenly, leaving a girl of sixteen or seventeen entirely friendless and unprovided for. The young men had been kind to the woman during her illness, and at her death—melting with pity at the forlorn situation of Anglice, the daughter—swore between themselves to love and watch over her as if she were their sister.

Now Anglice had a wild, strange beauty that made other women seem tame beside her, and in the course of time the young men found themselves regarding their ward not so much like brothers as at first.

They struggled bravely with their destiny, month after month, for the holy orders which they were about to assume precluded the idea of love and marriage

But every day taught them to be more fond of her. Even priests are human. So they drifted on in a dream And she? If Anglice shared their trouble her face told no story. It was like the face of a saint on a cathedral window. Once, however, as she came suddenly upon the two men, and overheard words that seemed to burn like fire on the lips of the speaker, her eyes grew very luminous for an instant. Then she moved on, her face as immobile as before in its setting of wavy golden hair.

"Enter o et roux Dieux fit ses longs cheveux."

One night Emile Jardin and Anglice were not to be found. They had flown, but whither nobody knew, and nobody, save Antoine, cared.

It was a heavy blow to Antoine, for he had made up his mind to run away with her himself.

A strip of paper slipped from a volume on Antoine's desk, and fluttered to his feet.

"Do not be angry," said the bit of paper, piteously; "forgive us, for we love."

Three years went by wearily enough Antoine had entered the church, and was already looked upon as a rising man; but his face was pale and his heart leaden, for there was no sweetness in life for him.

Four years had elapsed, when a letter, covered with outlandish post-marks, was brought to the young priest—a letter from Anglice. She was dying, would he forgive her? Emile, the year previous, had fallen a victim to the fever that raged on the island; and their child, little Anglice, was likely to follow him. In pitiful terms she begged Antoine to take charge of the child until she was old enough to enter a convent The epistle was finished hastily by another hand, informing Antoine of Madame Jardin's death; it also told him that Anglice had been placed on board a vessel shortly to leave the island for some western port.

The letter, delayed by storm and shipwreck, was hardly read and wept over when little Anglice arrived.

On beholding her, Antoine uttered a cry of joy and surprise—she was so like the woman he had worshiped.

As a man's tears are more pathetic than a woman's, so is his love more intense; not more enduring, nor half so subtle, but intenser.

The passion that had been crowded down in his heart broke out and lavished its richness on this child, who was to him not only the Anglice of years ago, but his friend Emile Jardin also.

Anglice possessed the wild, strange beauty of her mother, the bending, willowy form, the rich tint of skin, the large tropical eyes, that had almost made Antoine's sacred robe a mockery to him.

For a month or two Anglice was wildly unhappy in her new home She talked continually of the bright country where she was born, the fruits, and flowers, and blue skies, the tall, fan-like trees, and the streams that went murmuring through them to the sea. Antoine could not pacify her.

By and by she ceased to weep, and went about the cottage with a dreary, disconsolate air that cut Antoine to the heart. A long tailed paroquet, which she had brought with her in the ship walked solemnly behind her from room to room, merely pining it seemed, for those heavy orient airs that used to ruffle its brilliant plumage.

Before the year ended he noticed that the ruddy tinge had fled from her cheek that her eyes had grown languid, and her slight figure more willowy than ever.

A physician was consulted He could discover nothing wrong with the child, except the fading and drooping. He failed to account for that. It was some vague disease of the mind, he said, beyond his skill.

So Anglice faded day after day. She seldom left the room now. At last Antoine could not shut out the fact that the child was passing away. He had learned to love her so.

"Dear heart," he said, what is't that ails thee?"

"Nothing, mon pere," for so she called him.

The winter passed. The balmy spring air had come, and Anglice seemed to revive In her little bamboo chair, on the porch, she swayed to and fro in the fragrant breeze, with a peculiar undulating motion, like a graceful tree.

At times something seemed to weigh upon her mind. Antoine noticed it and waited At length she spoke.

"Near our house," said little Anglice—"near our house, on the island, the palm-trees are waving under the blue sky. Oh, how beautiful! I seem to lie beneath them all day long I am very, very happy. I yearned for them so much that I grew sick; don't you think it was so mon pere?"

"Mon Dieu!" exclaimed Antoine, suddenly. "Let us hasten to those pleasant islands where the palms are waving."

Anglice smiled.

"I am going there, mon pere!"

Aye, indeed. A week from that evening the wax candles burned at her feet and forehead, lighting her on her journey.

All was over. Now was Antoine's heart empty Death, like another Emile, had stolen his new Anglice. He had nothing to do but to lay his blighted flower away.

Pere Antoine made a shallow grave in his garden, and heaped the fresh brown mold over his idol.

In the tranquil spring evenings the priest was seen sitting by the mound, his finger closed in the unread prayer-book.

The summer broke on the sunny land; and in the cool morning twilight, and after nightfall, Antoine lingered by the grave. He could never be with it enough.

One morning he observed a delicate stem, with two curiously shaped emerald leaves, springing up from the center of the mound. At first he merely noticed it casually; but at length the plant grew so tall, and was so strangely unlike any thing he had ever seen before, that he examined it with care.

How straight, and graceful, and exquisite it was! When it swung to and fro with the summer wind in the twilight, it seemed to Antoine as if little Anglice was standing there in the garden!

The days stole by, and Antoine tended the fragile shoot, wondering what sort of blossom it would unfold—white, or scarlet, or golden One Sunday a stranger, with a bronzed and weather-beaten face like a sailor's, leaned over the garden rail and said to him: "What a fine young date-palm you have there, sir!"

"Mon Dieu!" cried Pere Antoine, "and is it a palm?"

"Yes, indeed," returned the man. "I had no idea the tree would flourish in this climate."

"Mon Dieu!" was all the priest could say.

If Pere Antoine loved the tree before he worshiped it now. He watered it, and could have clasped it in his arms. Here were Emile and Anglice and the child, all in one!

The years glided away, and the date-palm and the priest grew together—only one became vigorous and the other feeble. Pere Antoine had long passed the meridian of life. The tree was in its youth. It no longer stood in an isolated garden; for pretentious brick and marble houses had clustered about Antoine's cottage. They looked down scowling on the humble thatched roof. The city was edging up, trying to crowd him off his land. But he clung to it like the lichen and refused to sell.

Speculators piled gold on his door-steps, and he laughed at them. Sometimes he was hungry and cold, and thinly clad; but he laughed none the less.

"Get thee behind me Satan!" said the old priest's smile.

Pere Antoine was very old now, scarcely able to walk, but he could sit under the pliant, caressing leaves of his palm, loving it like an Arab; and there he sat till the grimmest speculator came to him. But even in death Pere Antoine was faithful to his trust.

The owner of that land loses it if he harm the date-tree.

And there it stands, in the narrow, dingy street, a beautiful, dreamy stranger, an exquisite foreign lady, whose grace is a joy to the eye, the incense of whose breath makes the air enamored! May the hand wither that touches her ungently!

"Because it grew from the heart of little Anglice," said Miss Badeau, tenderly.

A Plea for Silence.

H. T. TUCKERMAN.

The Tower of Babel is as significant an emblem of our heritage of woe as the lost Paradise; in the masterful dominion of one, as well as in the confusion of many tongues, individuality, freedom, and progress are overlaid or thwarted; speech becomes an echo, a wearisome refrain, instead of an original utterance; glib expression is mistaken for personal thought, and life in the less highly endowed instead of being an intellectual experience is reduced to a mechanical exchange of words. "A man full of words," says the psalmist, "shall not prosper upon the earth"; and it is by musing, and not talking, that the heart is kindled into worship, and the mind illuminated by truth Sydney Smith, enjoyed even Macaulay's "flashes of silence." I remember one of those placid women, neat, calm, and kindly of mien, whose expression as well as garb denotes a member of the Society of Friends, who came into the apartment of a neighbor, seated herself, smoothed the white kerchief over her gentle bosom, and, with a deep sigh of relief, exclaimed, 'What safety there is in silence!" She then related, with a kind of plaintive indignation, the experiments of a trader in whom she confided, and with whom she had long had transactions, to defraud her. When the intention became apparent, her wrath rose, but, in accordance with the principles of her sect, she restrained its utterance, and left his presence. "It was hard," she confessed, "to keep the old Adam down," but it appeared the doing so was a rebuke keenly felt. Indeed, no protest is so effective as silence. We felt this on one occasion when at a table encircled by courteous gentlemen, an underbred man made an inquiry which all present but the interlocutor felt to be indelicate and presuming The person addressed made no reply; the query was repeated, and one of the guests asked if it was heard. "I never answer impertinent questions," said the insulted gentleman, quietly. The aggressor quailed as no reproaches could have made him. How effective, in certain cases, is what has been aptly called "the conspiracy of silence"! it is the most eloquent form of remonstrance and contempt. Calumy is thus deprived of its sting; injustice is lived down Even will is weakened by over expression. "I have always found," says Ruskin, "that the less we speak of our intentions the more chance there is of our realizing them" If any living writer of the English tongue owes his influence and fame to an eloquent and audacious fluency, whereby the reader is carried away on a glowing sea of words, it is John Ruskin; and yet note his recent protest and confession: "I have had what, in many respects, I boldly call the misfortune to set my words somewhat prettily together; not without a foolish vanity in the power or knack that I had of doing so, until I was heavily punished for this pride by finding that many people thought of the words only, and not of their meaning" And elsewhere in the same treatise he remarks: "No true painter ever talks or ever has spoken much of his art; the greatest speak nothing. The moment a man can really do his work, he becomes speechless about it. All words become idle to him.—Atlantic Monthly for December.

Success In Life.

Take earnestly hold of life, as capacitated for and destined to a high and noble purpose. Study closely the mind's bent for labor or a profession. Adopt it early and pursue it steadily, never looking back to the turning furrow, but forward to the furrow that ever remains to be broken. Means and ways are abundant to every man's success, if will and actions are rightly adapted to them. Our rich men and our great men have carved their paths to fortune, and by this internal principle,—a principle that cannot fail to reward him who resolutely pursues it To sigh or repine over the lack of inheritance is unmanly. Every man should strive to be creator instead of inheritor He should bequeath instead of borrow. He should be conscious of the power in him, and fight his own battles with his own lance. He should feel that it is better to earn a crust than to inherit coffers of gold When once this spirit of self-reliance is learned, every man will discover within himself the elements and capacities of wealth. He will be rich, inestimably rich in self-resources, and can lift his head proudly to meet the noblest among men.

The proprietors at Paris have been deprived of their power to sue for rents, consequently a family needs but little ready money to subsist on from hand to mouth. A correspondent writes: "My landlord every week presents me with my bill. The ceremony seem to please him and does me no harm I have pasted upon my mantel piece the decree of the Government adjourning payment of rent, and the right to read and reread this document is all that he will get from me until the end of the siege."

A Puzzled Dutchman.

A Wisconsin secular paper contains the following good story:

One who does not believe in emersion for baptism, was holding a protracted meeting, and one night preached on the subject of baptism. In the course of his remarks he said, some believe it is necessary to go down into water, and come up out of it to be baptized. But this he claimed to be fallacy, for the proposition 'into," of the Scripture, rhould be rendered differently, as it does not mean into at all times. "Moses," he said, "we are told, went up into the mountain, and the Savior was taken into a high mountain, etc." Now we do not suppose that either went into the mountain, but went unto it. So with going down into the water, it means simply going down close by or near the water, and being baptized in the ordinary way, by sprinkling or pouring.

He carried this idea out fully, and in due season and style closed his discourse when an invitation was given for any one so disposed to arise and express his thoughts. Quite a number of the brethren arose and said they were glad they had been present on this occasion, that they were well pleased with the sound sermon they had just heard, and felt their souls greatly blessed. Finally a corpulent gentleman of Teutonic extraction, a stranger to all, arose and broke a silence that was almost painful, as follows:

"Mister Breacher, I is so glad I vash here to-night, for I has had explained to my mint some tings dat I never could pelief before. O, I ish so glad, that into does not mean into at all, put shust close by or near to, for now I can pelief manise tings vot I could not pelief before. We read, Mr. Breacher, that Tanel vas cast into the den of lions, and came out alife! Now I never could pelief dat, for de wilt peasts would shust eat him right off; put now it ist very clear to my mint He vash shut close by or near to, and did not get in the ten at all. O, I ish so glad I vash here to-night.

"Again we read dat de Hebrew children vas cast into the firish furnace, and dat alwish look't lik a beek story too for they would have peen purnt up; put it ish all plain to my mint now for they were shust cast near by or close to the firish furnace. O, I vas so glad I vas here to-night!"

"And den. Mister Breacher, it ish said Jonah vas cast into the sea and taken into the whale's pelly Now I never could beliefe that. It was as seemed to me to be a peg leesh story, put it ish all plain to my mint now He vash not cast into the whale's belly at all put shust shumpt onto his pack rode ashore O, I vash so glad I vash here to-night.'

"And now, Mister Breecher, if you will shust explain two more passages of scriptures I shall be, O, so happy dat I vash here to-night! One of them ish vere it saish de vicked shall be cast into a lake that purns with fire and primstone always. O, Master Breacher, shall I pe cast into that lake if I am vicked or shust close py or near to shust near enough to pe comfortable? O, I hopes you tell me I shall pe cast only shust py a good way off, and I vill pe so glat I vas here to-night! The other bashage is that vich saish, plessed are they who keep these commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life and enter in through the gates into the city. O, tell me I shall gets into the city and not shust close by or near to shust near enough to see vat I have lost, and I shall be so glat I vas here to night!"

He sat down with the impression left on many minds present that it would not do to take the Bible for only what it clearly says.

About Berlin.

To show the accuracy of their social statistics we state a few cases: There are 83,000 households with none but the members of their own family; 32,000 that employ servants, or have subsordinates living with them; and 38,000 that rent rooms furnished to occupants, or accommodate lodgers. Forty six per cent. of the population is unmarried, and forty-five married—the rest in widowhood or divorced. Seventy eight per cent. have fixed residences, and twenty-two are moving about, as clerks, servants, lodgers, etc; 344,000 are reported as earning their living, and 355,000 as living on these, or dependants. The whole population is quoted as having some religion, according to their confirmation; 630,271 are Protestants; 49 922 are Catholics; 27,565 are Jews, and only 197 are marked as of other creeds The civil authorities know every thing in the capital, as Von Moltke is said to have known every road, rock, eminence, and tree in his march through France. Such noses, and eyes, and patience are possessed only by the Germans.

In the matter of religion Berlin is not much to boast of; they are enrolled on church registers, and with most of them it ends there. The parishes are enormously large; in some instances 25,000 souls to one pastor. About 12,000 of them, on an average, go to church on Sunday, and some 4,000 appear at communion in a month, and still the city bears the external appearance on the Sabbath of paying a passable degree of respect to church services, for during these the public resorts are closed, and all is quiet The Court is orthodox and religious, and the King himself is very fervent, as may be seen by his despatches to his Queen and nation. The Catholics and Jews are gaining on the Protestants—a result of the liberal measures of the Protestant government to other confessions. The Jews of Berlin are very influential and intelligent, and their social position is high. Their "salons" have some of the choicest reunions of the capital, and their children visit the best schools in much greater proportion than the other confessions Their synagogues are among the finest religious temples of the city, and they cluster around these with their dwellings, so as to form a "Jewish Quarter"

In morals the Berliners are just twice as well behaved as the Parisians, having half the number of illegitimate births. Eight per cent of children in Paris are still-born, in Berlin but three per cent. Paris, without additions from the provinces, would soon die out. Berlin increases from its own births at the rate of 6,000 per annum. Of the entire population in Berlin, one-half are born within its walls. Its rapid increase, however, is mainly owing to the immense immigration from the surrounding country. Thousands and thousands are yearly pouring in to fill up the great industrial establishments. The locomotive works of Borsig alone nearly fill and populate a suburb. And, what is very remarkable, of its entire population only one per cent. is not German.—Scribner's Monthly for December.

Fresh Aztec Ruins.

Some discoveries have lately been made in New Mexico which will, doubtless, be the subject of protracted and highly interesting archæological research Governor Arny, the Special Indian Agent for that Territory, is the authority for the existence of these curiosities his knowledge of which has been gained by personal inspection It became necessary, in the discharge of his official duties, for Governor Arny to visit the Utah Indians, at the west of the San Juan River. To do this, he had to traverse a part of the great range known as the Sier a Madre Mountains, and here particularly in what is called the Canon de Chelly, the discoveries referred to have been made. We have, of late, been so overwhelmed with accounts of astonishing natural wonders newly found in the heart of the continent, that Governor Arny's description of strange ravines, whose walls tower perpendicularly to an altitude of from 1,000 to 2,000 feet, "the rock strata being as perfect as if laid by the skilled hands of masons, and entirely symmetrical," may excite only passing comment. But the ruins found among these lonely canons will attract more eager and substantial attention.

These consist, we are assured, of the deserted remains of ancient Aztec cities "many of which bear the evidence of having been populous to the extent of many thousands of inhabitants." The term Aztec is here used in its common and inaccurate sense, being applicable, in strictness, to only one of the seven Mexican tribes which collectively bore the name of Nahuatlecas. These tribes are supposed to have come from the North, from a region known as Aztlan. Their traditions say that they emerged from seven caverns in that region, which most investigators have placed north of the River Gila.

The interesting question now arises whether these vast canons or mountain gorges, described by Governor Arny, are affirmed by him to be filled, in some instances, with ruins, may not have been the original Aztlan It is at least evident, on reading his descriptions, and comparing them with such traditionary chronicles as we already possess, that this supposition is extremely plausible. The period of the departure of the seven tribes, and of their arrival in the valley of Mexico, is commonly reckoned to have been between 1064 and 1164. Perhaps a close examination of newly-discovered ruins will have the effect either of affirming or rectifying this estimate. In any case it will doubtless furnish us with important revelations of the past history of the continent.

The accounts already received from Governor Arny and his party are substantially to the following purport: The ruins discovered are of stone and of great extent. In each town or collection of buildings one edifice has been found hewn out of the solid rock, about twenty feet square, containing one room, and in this room a single human skeleton. In the centre of these apartments there are traces of fire, and the theory of the observers is that these solitary rooms were altar places, and the skeletons those of the officiating priests. It will be remembered that fire was always kept burning, as a religious rite, on the altars of the Aztecs; the Indian tradition being that ultimately it would light Montezuma back again to his people—he being not an earthly ruler only, but their Messiah or Eternal King. It is asserted by our informants that the structures contain handsome arches and other architectural devices and ornaments; and that the builders must have been skilled in the manufacture and use of edged tools, in masonry and other mechanical arts. Some of the buildings, unlike most of the ruins further south in Central America and elsewhere are reported to be seven or eight stories in height. There are no stair-cases in these lofty piles so that it is inferred the upper stories were reached by ladders planted against the walls. Others of the edifices are perfectly round, built very substantially of cut stone, and plastered inside. Tokens abound of the occupation of these places by dense and well instructed populations, and it seems reasonable to anticipate that to the wonders of natural scenery and mineral treasure abounding in that neighborhood there is about to be added such records of the men who once dwelt therein as will be, at least, as interesting.

The only doubt likely to be raised relative to the importance or probable significance of Governor Arny's discoveries, is whether his buildings may not belong to the class of "Casas Grandes" once held to mark the successive steps of the Aztec migration (which is supposed to have taken over 150 years from the starting point before reaching Chapultepec) but since attributed to the Moquis or to the Pueblo Indians. If the accounts that have come to us are precisely accurate, we should say this hypothesis was out of the question;—since the buildings would necessarily have been the work of a far higher civilization than any of the class last named."—*N. Niagara is no longer the most wonderful of cataracts Its rival has been discovered in British Guiana, in South America. There are two falls, one of seven hundred and seventy feet and another of fifty. The volume of water passing over these falls is seventy-eight feet deep and three hundred feet broad during the dry season The colonial government of Guiana is arranging facilities for visitors By way of comparison, it may be well to add that Niagara Falls on the American side is 164 feet high, and on the Canadian side 150 feet high. The width of the American falls is 1,100 feet and of the Canadian falls about double that number.

From the N. Y. World.

Not this Only, but More Also.

We and all Democrats go as far as the farthest for revenue reform. Free trade is our flag, and our flag is nailed to the mast for the fight of 1872. But other legends are also there inscribed. The Democratic party welcomes every ally in the contest for reform of our revenue chaos. But free trade is not the only purpose with which the party is inspired, nor the only blessing with which its victory will be pregnant for the people of the United States.

For a period of ten years a party has been in possession of the general government that has done its best to consolidate all kinds of power in the Executive Department, hands of that government than to any other parties had accomplished it, but to attribute the order of half for the seventy years preceding the advent of the Republicans at the helm, being the election of Lincoln. The old Federal party did a good deal in this direction, but its chief influence was exerted during the administration of Washington, and that influence was restrained and modified by his prudence and caution. The Whig party had some strong tendencies to centralization, but these tendencies were in some degree held in check by the necessity for paying deference to the great fundamental principles of the rights of States and localities. The Whigs never attempted to carry a Presidential election by a sectional combination; and the necessity they were under, therefore, to secure the votes of Southern States obliged them to be cautious in their doctrines respecting the powers of the Federal Constitution. Upon the whole, it may be said that what was done by both of those defunct parties to make our Federal government a consolidated one bears no sort of proportion to what has been done in that direction by the Republicans. Where there was one measure initiated by the Federalists or the Whigs that gave rise to a serious question respecting constitutional power, any one acquainted with the Congressional legislation and executive administration of the past ten years can put his finger on a dozen measures each of which is of a more alarming character than all the other measures of the Federalists or the Whigs put together.

In the period that elapsed from the establishment of the Constitution down to the final dissolution of the Whig party there were certain principles of interpretation of the text of the Constitution, in regard to the extent of its political powers about which all parties were agreed. The memorable difference between the Democratic party, as led by General Jackson, and the Whigs, as led by Mr. Clay, concerning the power of Congress to create a national bank, developed a more decided difference in the spirit of constitutional interpretation than almost any other subject with which those parties had to deal—a far more decided difference than that which existed between them concerning the constitutional power of "protection" through a tariff of duties. But with that notable exception there was, comparatively speaking, but little difference between them in respect to the principal doctrines of constitutional power; and with such men as Marshall and Story on the bench and as Clay and Webster in Congress, the Democracy as a party had little reason to complain of the spirit and tendency of their opponents in giving interpretation to the particular powers of Congress, or of any other department of the government. The country had not then undergone the misfortune of having a President elected by a sectional vote; and all men in public life, on all sides, agreed substantially on certain great axioms of constitutional law that preserve the line of demarcation between the Federal and the State powers. A public man in those days who could be justly accused of straining the Constitution beyond a reasonable definition of its powers was a rare and unenviable character.

But now all this is changed. The Republicans have brought about among all their ranks, among all their leaders, and among all their functionaries who have anything to do with the administration of the Federal government a tone and style of treating its powers as if they were paramount over all subjects and on all occasions. The line which divides those powers of the States is ignored; or, if it is not absolutely ignored, the habit of reasoning from the principle that Federal power can alone accomplish what people think ought to be accomplished has entirely obliterated the old doctrine that the supremacy of the Federal Constitution is a supremacy that can exist only within a prescribed sphere. Hence we have had usurpation following usurpation until it is impossible to tell where this tendency to consolidation will end, unless it is checked by a political revolution that will bring into power a class of men bound by their party traditions, their personal training, and their political principles to administer the Federal government in a different spirit.

This political revolution can only be effected by the Democratic party. This is a reform which no other political organization can bring about, because it requires the binding force of old party traditions, habit, and discipline to institute it and carry it out. A new party associated only or chiefly on the basis of a reduction of the tariff to the point of destroying the hydra "protection" would be entirely without power to restore the Constitution to the sway and influence of those principles of interpretation on which Hamilton would have agreed with Madison, Marshall would have agreed with Taney, Clay would have agreed with Jackson, Webster would have agreed with Silas Wright. That there is such a common ground on which these great representatives of their respective periods and parties stood, and that it is the only ground on which we of this generation can stand for the preservation of our political system from the dangers and mischiefs of consolidation, is perfectly clear. It is the mission of the Democratic party to occupy this ground and to fight this battle. It will do it, by recognizing the settlement of the issue of State secession as final and by maintaining the indissoluble nature of the Union. It will accept whatever changes have been made in the text of the Constitution by the rightful process of amendment, and it will loyally adapt its action and its measures to those changes. But it will set its face resolutely and sternly against all that habit of construing and using the powers of the Constitution for purposes that are not within the sphere of the general government which has taken possession of its legislative and executive departments. It will insist that the Federal government shall be administered as what it is: as a government of defined and limited powers each of which is capable of an exact and rational definition, that will save it from encroaching on the rights of local self-government and prevent the Federal system from becoming a consolidated empire.

The Democratic party are revenue reformers, and no more so.

An Interview with Bismarck.

LONDON, Nov. 26

A special correspondent of the World who left Versailles on the 21st, brings the following report of an interview he had with Bismarck:

Correspondent—"What is the explanation of the great dissatisfaction expressed in Germany at the plan of the campaign, especially in relation to Paris?"

Bismarck—"The capture of Paris is clamored for and it must be accomplished to satisfy the folks at home. Respecting the time and means for effecting this public opinion is widely astray. It bestows unmeasured abuse unjustly. Had my counsel been followed, Paris would have been attacked long ago."

Correspondent—"Your Excellency says your counsels were overruled?"

Bismarck—"When the forces led by Gen. Von Blumenthal, after the victories of Weisenburg and Woerth, emerged from the Vosges and marched toward Chalons, where the cavalry under Prince Albrecht stood, Gen. Von Moltke decided that they should come up and help annihilate the army which had so hurriedly abandoned Chalons. I urged that they should be ordered to continue their march on Paris, then unprepared for a siege, and take it, or at least cut it off from the rest of France, which should then be overrun as quickly as possible. When the Department of the Seine was reached it was found a nut hard to crack. Then there was a new question—how was the kernel to be reached? First we determined on bombardment, of which the intention to open a secret park of artillery at Villa Coublay was complete proof. This measure I urged, but now came a new disagreement. The King, under advice of Von Moltke, decided to let famine reduce the capital, trusting that discord among the Parisians would contribute to hasten surrender."

Correspondent—"But this plan was universally supposed to be your own."

Bismarck—"So far is that opinion from truth that I now ceased to disguise my indignation at being no longer made a party to the councils wherein great questions were decided. In 1866 no important proposition was decided without asking my advice. Now there are great changes. Whole plans are adopted without consulting me, while popular disapproval falls upon me. Those who say it is my fault that Paris has not been bombarded are wholly in error. I have most ardently desired and strenuously urged it."

Correspondent—"But at least you have the satisfaction of having accomplished the unification of Germany?"

Bismarck—"Ah! no. I attribute the halting and partial failure of the attempt for German unity to the delay resulting from these opposing schemes.—Had my advice been followed the people of Bavaria and Wurtemburg would have been carried in on the wave which swept over Germany, and the grand scheme of a united Vaterland and Deutcher Kaiser would have become a reality instead of the half hearted confederation now about to be born. For me the great object of the war never lay on this side of the Rhine, but on the other side, where I meant should exist one great empire.

This extraordinary conversation was held under peculiar circumstances, that cannot now be stated, but I have given almost the exact words uttered by the Chancellor.

"Much Ado About Nothing."

The following card gives evidence that much wind has been expended by Messrs FULTON and TILTON to little purpose, except to brand them both blowhards, but truthful and honorable ones:

Much has recently been published in reference to the controversy between Theodore Tilton, Esq., and the Rev. J. D. Fulton, and it may interest the public to know the result of a conference between these two gentlemen, in the presence of their friends; hence the following card, namely:

1. That Mr. Tilton's informant, a gentleman of intelligence, refinement, and veracity, does in the most solemn manner reaffirm his original statement, while Mr Fulton as solemnly denies it in his presence.

2. That the Rev. Dr Armitage affirms that Mr Fulton never preached for him in Norfolk street on Sunday evening in 1855, to the best of his recollection; but that he did preach for him on Tuesday night in 1853 or 1854.

3. As the alleged transaction dates back to the year 1855, and there have already appeared in this conference several discrepancies in matters of memory and statements by equally honorable men concerned in the matter, naturally arising from the lapse of time involved, we concede to the parties at issue the doubts arising from all such discrepancies while neither of them abates a jot either of the allegation or the denial, but both leave the public to give credence to which side they may choose; while the present purpose of Mr. Tilton and Mr. Fulton mutually is to dismiss the whole subject.

4. The conference of friends referred to in the above are firmly persuaded that all the gentlemen named above have no disposition to swerve from the truth in any measure whatever, but mean to be true and honorable in their statements, which, as far as now appears, can not be readily harmonized out of a court of justice at this distant date from the alleged transaction.

THEODORE TILTON,

An Alabama Stanton "Stick"-ing.

MONTGOMERY, Nov. 17.

The city is full of excitement and the wheels of the State government are entirely locked. Smith and Bingham still claim to be Governor and Treasurer respectively, and each retain possession of their offices. Smith has obtained a number of troops from the commanding officer here, and they are posted in front of the Executive room and Treasurer's office. The Senate met and adjourned. The House passed the following resolution:

Resolved, The Senate concurring, that a committee of six, consisting of three from the Senate and three from the House, be appointed to ascertain without delay upon whose application, by whose order and for what purpose said military force was quartered in this capitol, and that the General Assembly desist from further proceedings until the report of said committee be received and acted upon.

Only two Republicans voted against this resolution.

An indignation meeting, composed of all parties opposed to Gov. Smith's proceedings, will be held to-night, and will be addressed by many speakers who supported Gov. Smith at the late election.

The Michigan Argus

ANN ARBOR.

FRIDAY MORNING, DEC 2 1870.

A most ludicrous, and at the same time serious complication has arisen from the management of matters at the polls in the town of Freedom, Washtenaw county, at the recent general election. The town is inhabited wholly by Germans, and has the bad habit of giving from 200 to 300 Democratic majority for the "straight ticket" every time. It is one of those benighted places where the so-called Democratic party of to-day finds a congenial home. Running against Elihu B Pond, the Democratic candidate for State Senator, in Washtenaw county, was Emanuel Mann, an enterprising German citizen of Ann Arbor. Upon the day of election one of Mr Mann's agents, a German, proceeded to the polling place in Freedom, hired a room convenient to the scene of the biennial freemen's contest, and proceeded to ornament the Democratic ballots with Mr. Mann's slips, plastered on the worst possible place, to wit: directly over Pond's name, the German electors being urged to vote the same by the agent, on the ground of support for a fellow countryman. But this was an innovation unprecedented and not to be tolerated for a moment. The Democratic Board of Election Inspectors actually left their seats, went to the room, "cleaned out" Mr. Mann's agent in short order, and then returned to the performance of their regular duties. And, not to be circumvented by the agent's operations from some new and hidden base of action, they actually opened the ballots thereafter presented, and whenever Pond's name was hidden from view by one of Mr. Mann's slips, the name was restored to its original status on the ballot by the gentle removal of the slip which intervened between it and daylight. The cool determination of this State Prison performance is irresistibly funny, but it is about time the election laws were enforced in the town of Freedom, before the query attains too great pertinence, "What's in a name?"—Detroit Tribune.

JOHN G. FELDKAMP, the Supervisor of Freedom and chairman of that "Democratic Board of Election Inspectors," requests us to say that the Tribune has been imposed upon, and that its informant knew the above to be A WILLFUL AND MALICIOUS LIE, and when FELDKAMP speaks like that he means just what he says, as some who prate about "State Prison performances" will find to their sorrow if they don't dry up. This "most ludicrous" story has just this much of truth in it, and no more: That "agent" did go to Freedom, and did urge the Democratic "German electors" to vote "for a fellow countryman," and sixty of them did so vote, a confession and a proof that the Democratic votes which elected Mr. MANN were given to him as a German, and not simply as an American citizen. We thank the Tribune for blundering into one truth. The "Democratic Board" did not "clean out Mr MANN's agent," and did not "open the ballots" and tear off his "slips," witness sixty Democratic tickets with his name on. They may have urged Democrats not to "ornament" their tickets, and that they had a right to do,—though not done very successfully as must be conceded.

—This explanation is made only at the urgent request of Mr. FELDKAMP, an honest and capable officer, but if "the dogs of war" are to be let loose we may be compelled to expose some of the means used—we hope not with Mr. MANN's consent—to get the German Democrats—who ought to be Americans by this time, if electors—in Lodi, Scio, Freedom, Manchester, Sylvan, etc., to vote "for a fellow countryman." We prefer peace, but the peace we prefer is not to sit very still while ourself and our friends are deluged with abuse and slander.

—Since the above was in type, Mr MANN has called at our office with Mr FELDKAMP, and assures us that the publication above does not meet his approval, and that he is satisfied Mr. F. is not obnoxious to any of the charges made.

THERE is no clause in the constitution of the United States which is oftener quoted to sanction wrong and high-handed outrage than the following:—"Each House shall be the judge of the election, returns, and qualifications of its own members." And the similar clause in our State constitution is as often mis-interpreted and the power it does confer equally tortured and abused. To read the learned disquisitions in Radical journals, gotten up to bolster up the Congressional House in ousting Democrats whose constituents have impudently elected and returned them, one might well suppose that instead of simply being authorized to decide—under the constitution and laws—as to the election—that is, the fact; the returns—that is, whether correct in form or not, and agreeing with the facts; and the qualifications—that is, whether a citizen, and of proper age, it was the business and right of the House to determine whether or no the elected man was not morally and politically incompetent or disqualified, and whether his constituents did not make a mistake in electing the man they did.—Now, we submit, that the House is only to act as a jury and is not "a law unto itself," and it should be governed by the same rules of evidence that govern a court of justice. It is a total ignoring of this principle that causes so many contested seats; it is its violation that turns so many Democrats out of Congress and gives their seats to Republicans never elected; and it was the same perversion of right and rights that caused a Michigan Legislature some years ago to buck against the Supreme Court. It is time for different talk.

REPUBLICAN office-holders down in Alabama are for all the world just like their political brethren elsewhere, and propose to "stick" to office whether the people want them or not. And if they don't have a Congress to contest in—like SCHENCK and CESSNA, et al—they call in the aid of the military, like STANTON—and hold on to the teats. That's what Gov. SMITH and State Treasurer BINGHAM are now doing.

SOME of our readers may remember having read a novel entitled "Japheth in Search of his Father." The government printers are about to issue a rival work in law sheep, to be styled:—"Ulysses in search of a Minister—to England." It is warranted full of interest—to the initiated.

A FEW days ago came a story from Nevada, by the way of New York, that FITCH, the Radical candidate for member of Congress, imported several hundred Mormons into adjoining counties to "make his calling and election sure," but that a large number of them violated the contract, voted for his opponent, KENDALL, and elected him. And now comes another story, this time from Salt Lake City. To give it as the telegraph gives it, it is this:

The government survey between Nevada and Utah makes several important mining districts, heretofore considered in Nevada, in Utah, among which are the Pioche, Shoshone and Smoky Valley. These places give Democratic majorities. Pioche alone gave 136 majority for Kendall over Fitch for Congress. This will probably return Fitch to Congress, but the Democrats still elect most of their ticket.

Was that "government survey" made before or since election; that is the question. A politician has got to be "up to snuff" to run in Nevada, especially if he be a Democrat and compelled to fight a combination of Radicals, Mormons, and "government surveyors."

THE Tribune publishes a letter purporting to have been written by Judge SUTHERLAND prior to the recent election, in which he scouts free trade, advocates protection to the manufacturing interests and productions of the Sixth district, and says: "I shall consider it my duty if elected, to do all I can to procure such protection." All of which, if true, will almost reconcile us to having the State Board of Canvassers reject the votes cast for Judge SUTHERLAND. It is better to give the Republican protectionists rope with which to hang themselves than to send Democratic protectionist to Congress. The injury done to the party by making it responsible, in even a very small part, for the robbery of the protective system can hardly be compensated by Democratic views and votes upon other measures.

HAVING doubted the Detroit Tribune's assertion or prediction that "eventually the municipalities will be compelled to pay these bonds"—railroad aiders, that journal renews its assurances as oracularly as if inspired. It says:

"As to the decision of U. S. Courts on the railroad municipal indebtedness, we advise the Argus to wait and see. It will know more on the subject after awhile than it does now."

We propose to "wait and see;" but as to "knowing more" we shall be obliged to get the increase from some other source than the Tribune, as that journal has evidently profited not a bit by the decision of our Supreme Court. It is just as opinionated and wrong-headed as before that decision. Perhaps the "U. S. Courts" may succeed better in enlightening it as to what is law. "Wait and see."

CONGRESS will convene on Monday next, and as there will be no delay for the purpose of organization the President's Message will probably be sent in on Monday afternoon. Latest Washington advices say that the advance printed copies will not be sent to the larger cities, for the press, but that it will be telegraphed as soon as transmitted to Congress. Look out for a document full of bulls and blunders.

THE cables of 1865 and 1866 are both reported "not working." The French cable will work but one way, from east to west, and that slowly, so that no messages are now received for any part of Europe. The difficulty with the old cables is about 65 miles from Heart's Content, and is expected to be speedily remedied.

A Herald "special" has it that "as soon as Paris capitulates all French generals and prisoners will be convened at Cassel, under King WILLIAM." And that's how LOUIS NAPOLEON is to get that imperial army at the head of which—another dispatch says—he is to march into Paris. What next in the line of burlesque?

AT Raleigh, on Monday, ex-Gov. VANCE was elected to succeed carpet-bagger ABBOTT in the United States Senate. The vote stood: VANCE, 94; ABBOTT, 43.

—MANNING, Democrat, has been elected to fill a vacancy in the 41st Congress, from the Raleigh (N. C) district, beating a son of Gov. HOLDEN, 436. A Democratic gain.

THE war news is scattering, but shows French losses at every point. The coils tighten around Paris, provisions are getting short, and a surrender without bombardment may be anticipated at almost any time.

—An absurd rumor comes over the wires that KING WILLIAM and his ex royal prisoner have agreed upon terms of peace, and that LOUIS NAPOLEON is to enter capitulated Paris at the head of an imperial army.

The Darien Expedition.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.

The United States ship Guard, Commander, E. P. Lull, will leave on the Darien expedition about December 6th Commander Selfridge, who has command of the expedition, will take passage in the Guard, and proceed at once to the mouth of the Atrato river, where the work is to be begun. After organizing various parties, which are to perform hydrographic and shore duty, Commander Selfridge will take the Nipsic and proceed to Aspinwall and Panama. At the latter port he will find the steamer Saginaw, detailed by the Department for the purpose of carrying on surveys from the Pacific side of the entrance of the Darien river. The principal work of the Selfridge expedition is to be prosecuted on the Pacific side. The party which is to take passage in the Guard is rapidly assembling in New York. The Civilian Scientific Staff is to be very strong in the present expedition. It will be composed of an astronomer, naturalist, photographer and civil engineer from the coast survey. A portion of the gentlemen will go in on the Pacific side later in the season.

COMMERCIAL.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.

The little excitement in monetary affairs occasioned by the belligerent attitude of some of the European powers, has been but temporary, and the former ease and quiet is returning. Wheat and flour have fluctuated some during the week but closing about the same as at last report. Speculation as to the future is entirely at fault. The better grades of wheat in Liverpool went up 8d per 100 lbs. within a few days time on the strength of the Russian war talk. The price receded 2d early last week and to-day a further decline of 2d is announced, leaving the market at present 4d above the highest figures reached in October. Entire confidence seems to be now felt in a peaceful solution of the Eastern question and prices may go still lower, although there seem good reasons for the belief that they should not. Coarse grains are unchanged except corn, which is 2@3c lower. Beans are dull, and at present prices there is no shipping margin from the west. Prime mediums are quotable at $2.15@2.20, and prime marrows at $2 55@2 60 for crop of 1870. Butter is weaker, fresh Michigan firkins, fair to good, being 22@27c, good to prime, 25@28c, and fancy selections 30@31c. The market is overstocked with poor and common grades, which are unsalable. Hops are salable only for best grades, which are quotable at 18@20c for crop of 1870; yearlings, 6@8c. The brewers are the only buyers. The market is overstocked with poultry, much of which will spoil, or be sold at merely nominal prices. The impression is very general that the stock of poultry in the country is large, and consumers seem in no humor this season to pay high prices. Western chickens are quotable at 8@11c for poor to good, and 11@13 for good to prime; turkeys, 10@14 as to quality.

DETROIT, Nov. 30.

Navigation remains wholly unobstructed and the lake and river trade is still active. The market for wheat and flour has been downward at a rapid rate, flour having declined 10@20c and wheat 5@8c. Extra white is $1.28@2 29—last week, $1.35; No 1 white is $1.18@1.19—last week $1.23; amber $1 14—last week, 1.18. The increased risk of transportation and advancing freights depresses prices here relatively more than in New York. Corn is lower at 58@60 for No. 1 new. Oats steady at 43@44. Barley in some demand at $1 70@1.75 for No. 1 and $1,35@1 30 for No. 2 Rye 85@90c. Apples rather quiet than otherwise, at $2@2.20 from store and $1 90@2 from street. Beans are irregular at about $1.80 for mediums and $2 for marrows from store. On the street, the range is $1.40@1.75. Butter is still in excessive supply, especially of the medium and lower grades. About 27c is outside for best lots. Cheese a little improved at 15@15½ for factory. Cranberries $10 50@11 50 per bbl. Dried apples are not in much demand, and rather weak at 6½@7½ Eggs are more plentiful, especially salted and limed, which are quotable at 24@26; fresh 27@28. Hops unchanged at 10@12 for new. Potatoes are in some demand for shipment at 60@65. Poultry is heavy since thanksgiving. Chickens, 8@10, turkeys 12 a14 Clover seed is becoming somewhat active at about $5.50

THE PORK TRADE.—The season thus far has been a very peculiar one in the pork trade. Four weeks ago, the market promised to open early, with a short season, because stock was in good condition and prices good. The warm weather, however, has postponed fall killing nearly a month beyond the usual time, while prices have declined at some points $2.50a3 per cwt. from what they were early in the season. The further danger now is that with the advent of cold weather, the pens will be cleared out suddenly and the hogs thrown upon the market at once, and prices in consequence be run down to a very low figure. In Detroit, dressed hogs decline on the week about $1 per cwt., the best quotations at present being $7a7 50 The cool weather last week started a few from the country, but the warm weather since has cut off receipts, and weakened the market for those on hand. The decline at other points is 25a50c per cwt.

TAX RECEIPTS.

Just printed and for sale at this office. Town Treasurers' orders promptly filled.

The Circuit Court has been in session since Monday afternoon, Judge Henry presiding, and has been at work upon a large calendar. Short work was made of the criminal calendar, several prisoners plead ing guilty, and others being released on bail, their cases standing "continued." In the latter list we may name HENRY C. JOHNSON, Jr., (medical student,) informed against for assault with intent to murder. The civil calendar was taken up on Wednesday.

Maj. A. F. BIDWELL, of the First Michigan Infantry, formerly of Coldwater, but for some years a resident of Kansas City, Mo., committed suicide at Parker, Kansas, about three weeks ago, by shooting himself with a pistol. No papers were left assigning any reason, and the act is attributed to a fit of despondency. Mr. BIDWELL was 45 years old, and left a wife and three children.

JUSTIN MCCARTHY will discuss "England and the Alabama Claims," at the M. E. Church to-morrow (Saturday) evening, before the Students' Lecture Association. Mr. McCARTHY is known as a popular writer and able lecturer, and as an Englishman with American sympathies.

The Ann Arbor Savings Bank makes a very favorable semi-annual statement in another column. The Directors, we are told, have declared a semi-annual dividend of 5 per cent. payable January 1st.

At an M. E. Church Social, on Wednesday evening, largely attended, Dr. CROCKER told of his late visit to England, of what he saw, and his impressions.

The bell-tower at Firemen's Hall is going up, and the artesian well down. Height of one or depth of the other not known at this writing.

As all ladies like a good article, those of the ARGUS circle will do themselves a favor by reading the item among our "Business Notices" headed "Williston Thread." It is claimed to be a superior thread in every respect.

The December Magazines.

Since our last list of notices the following December magazines have come to our table:

Lippincott has the conclusion of Anthony Trollope's novel, Sir Harry Hotspur of Humblethwaite; A Roving Commission, a war correspondent's experiences in the South; The Appian Way, poem, by T. Buchanan Read; Louie, a Tale, by Harriet Prescott Spofford; Florida, How to go and where to stay, by J. P. Little; The Real Condition of the South by Edward A. Pollard; Chit-Chat from Andalusia, by Florence Marryat; Irene, a Tale, Part III.; Expansion or Contraction, by Amasa Walker; A Vision of the Hour, poem, by Lucy Hamilton Hooper, Monthly Gossip, Literature, etc. With the January number the sixth volume will be entered upon, with the assurance that "whatever has hitherto recommended it to public favor will be continued with such improvements as experience has suggested." $4 a year. Address J. B. LIPPINCOTT & Co., Philadelphia.

—The Overland Monthly, all the way from the golden city of the Pacific, has: The Last of the Sibyls, Life in the Bush, Tom and His Wife, Pansies, Gray's Peak—to stand up it, A Frontier Post and Country, A Naturalist's Rambles in Northern Mexico, Mother Hoxley, Aspasia, Walker's Administration in Kansas, Mr. Ela's Story, Manitoba—The Red River Country, A Canoe-cruise in the Coral Sea, His Answer to "Her Letter," by "Truthful James," alias Brett Harte, and Current Literature. The papers are all readable and some of them more than that—instructive. This number completes the vth volume of the year. Address JOHN H. CARMANY & Co, 429 Washington Street, San Francisco

—Golden Hours is filled, as usual, with good things, including Air Navigation, Constantinople, Carrie May, The Shining Pands, Raccoon, etc., Luminous Insects, Bible Lesson, all illustrated, with other articles not needing pictures to command attention. Fortunate is the boy or girl who shall receive the Golden Hours for 1871, as a Christmas present. $2 a year. Address HITCHCOCK & WALDEN, Cincinnati, Ohio.

—The Nursery, a capital number of a capital magazine for the little ones. Its large print, beautiful pictures, and entertaining stories make every boy and girl into those hands it falls dance for joy. It ought to be in every household in which there are two, three, four or five year old, and we are pleased to be able to offer inducements to our little friends to take it for 1871. $1.50 a year. Address JOHN L. SHOREY, Boston.

The Nursery and the ARGUS for $3 a year.

—Arthur's Home Magazine has a readable list of articles and a seasonable list of illustrations, fashions, working plates, etc., with full directions. No impure literature and no very strong meat find a place in this magazine. $2 a year. Also, The Children's Hour, a real gem of a monthly for the little ones. Its pictures take the eye and its stories the ear and heart of the lambs of the flock. If you have a six year old in the family subscribe for it. $1.25. Address T. S. ARTHUR & SONS, Philadelphia.

THE ENGLISH PRIME MINISTER ON THE SITUATION. Littell's Living Age, No. 1382, for the week ending Nov. 26, (Littell & Gay, Boston, publishers,) contains an important article on France, Germany and England, from the Edinburg Review, written by or under the inspiration of Mr. Gladstone, the English Prime Minister; together with the usual variety of the best literary and scientific matter.

By the way, the following anecdote is told of The Living Age, in a recent number of the American Bookseller's Guide:

"A little town away down in the State of Maine, believing, with Godwin, that "man has an understanding to be matured, a moral sense to be developed, and a taste to be refined," determined to have a public library, and after great and heroic exertions, succeeded in raising a small sum of money for the purchase of books. Then the happy little town chose the pastor as a committee of one to go to Boston and spend the money as judiciously as possible. He went, and invested nearly every dollar of the funds in a complete set of Littell's Living Age. You smile, perhaps, but just think of the vast amount of valuable and interesting reading of all kinds, and suitable for all tastes,—the history, the biography, the theology, the philosophy, the science, the art, the criticism, the fiction, the poetry, etc.,—contained in the hundred small filled volumes of the Living Age, and then will say that the parson spent the money wisely and well. The Living Age is one of the triumphs of civilization, and an indispensable necessity to all lovers of reading."

The Position of Prussia.

LONDON, Nov. 30.

I am enabled to state upon unquestionable authority the position taken by Prussia on the Russian question, and which will probably be communicated to the British Cabinet to-day: Prussia maintains that, like Italy, having signed the treaty of the 30th of March, 1856, which was concluded as mentioned in the introduction prefacing the treaty for the purpose of guaranteeing the independence and integrity of the Turkish Empire, she, like England, France, and Austria, who concluded an additional treaty on the 17th of April, 1856, by which they bound themselves to consider any infraction of any of the stipulations of the treaty of the 30th of March as a casus belli, and obliged themselves to fight for the maintenance of a clause to which a great power cannot submit forever, and which does not in any way infringe the principle of the first treaty so far as Prussia is concerned, therefore, she does not regard Russia's position as one threatening war, because the St. Petersburg cabinet does not intend to endanger the independence or integrity of Turkey. The statesmen of Russia declared that any additional territory was undesirable, and also relinquished the idea of creating a Greek Empire at Constantinople under a Russian protectorate. Neither do they intend to establish an extensive naval arsenal on the coast of the Black Sea. Under these circumstances it confidently believes that by diplomatic measures an understanding will be arrived at by which the powers which signed the treaty of Paris will accede to the Russian request, regarding the neutralization of the Black Sea. To this end Prussia offers mediation.

Re-Union—16th Michigan.

A re union of the 16th Mich. Inft. Vet. Vol., will be held at the Michigan Exchange, Detroit, Dec 13th, 1870. Banquet 4 P. M.; Address 8 P. M., by Capt. JAMES LAIRD, followed by a Ball given by the regiment. All soldiers of the regiment are expected to attend, and soldiers of other regiments are cordially invited.

THE TINTINABULATION OF THE BELLS.—It has been lately suggested that POE, in order to give force to his imagination when he was writing his Poem of the Bells, probably took a large dose of Quinine, previously, so that he had the ringing in his ears. Whether this is true or not, there is one curious contrast between Bitter Quinine and Sweet Quinine, which is, that the Sweet Quinine never produces that result even in large doses. Sold by Eberbach & Co.

The Williston Thread.

American genius has at length triumphed in the manufacture of thread, an article in which England has long had the monopoly of production. The Williston Mills produce an article of six cord thread made from Sea Island cotton, which surpasses anything yet made in this or any other country.—Rochester Daily Union and Advertiser, Sept 11th 1869

This thread is now being introduced to the ladies of Ann Arbor by the agent for this State, Mr. A. L. Wells who is now in town, and has been favoring our ladies with his neatly printed circulars, addressed to them individually through the postoffice.

Those ladies receiving a "Complimentary Card" are requested to present it to their dry goods store and receive a spool of the C. S. I. thread to test its superiority, and we hope all the ladies of our town will give this new thread a trial. Messrs Field, Leiter & Co., of Chicago, are the sole manufacturer's agents for the western States.

1871. THE WORLD. 1871.

The year 1871 bids fair to be one of the most important and fruitful in our political history. In it will be shaped the great issues on which the Presidential election of 1872 must turn. It will be an era of new political energy in the South, which, for the first time in twelve years, comes unfettered into a national canvass; and an era of confident hope to the Democratic party everywhere. The superannuated issues on which the Radical party have stood are passing out of politics, and the blundering imbecility and profligate extravagance of General Grant's administration need only to be faithfully exposed to turn the tide of public feeling strongly against it. In this, the great work of the coming year, THE WORLD will act no secondary part. Its location in the great focus of national commerce and intelligence, the freshness and abundance of its news, and its recognized position as the leading organ of the Democratic party, lay upon it a mission and apostleship which it will discharge with unflinching boldness, vigor, fidelity, and zeal. It will be in constant counsel and communion with the tried leaders and sagacious statesmen of the party in all of the States of the Union, cordially co-operating with them, and they with it, in building up the party in order and unity; healing differences, infusing confidence, inviting and encouraging new proselytes, and leading on the party as a bold and unbroken phalanx to the great triumph which awaits it in 1872.

The share allotted to THE WORLD in this combined and disciplined movement of the Democracy, in their onward march to victory, is the dissemination of political truth; a work which can be fruitful only in proportion to the extent of its circulation. We ask Democrats everywhere to aid us in scattering the good seed broadcast over the whole land, during the period which is so important in reference to the coming harvest.

AS A VEHICLE OF NEWS

THE WORLD (now in the eleventh year of its existence) has always held the first rank among metropolitan journals. Its News on every topic of interest, political, commercial, literary, social, domestic, and foreign, is always fresh, abundant, various, and accurate, comprising the whole circle of current of intelligence, always rendered with such promptitude and spirit that the paper has a large and increasing circulation among political opponents for its superiority in these respects.

AS AN ORGAN OF OPINION

THE WORLD is fearless, trenchant, indomitable; ardent in its advocacy of sound Democratic principles, unsparing in its denunciations of political abuses and corruption; and not confining its discussions to mere politics, it takes a wide range, touches upon a great variety of subjects, and aims to be a safe guide of public opinion on all topics which engage public attention. It gives conspicuous prominence to trade, commerce, and finance, and on these topics invites comparison with any other journal published at the commercial metropolis.

THE WEEKLY WORLD.

A large quarto sheet, printed throughout in large type, and published every Wednesday morning. Among its prominent features are:

1. Its very full and accurate Market reports, embracing the Live Stock markets of New York, Albany, Brighton, Cambridge, and Philadelphia; the New York country produce market, and general produce markets of the country; and full reports of the New York money market. Each of these reports are compiled with great care, and contain the latest quotations that can be obtained up to the time of putting the paper to press.

2. Its Agricultural Department, which contains each week articles on practical and scientific farming that are of great value to American farmers. A special feature of this department is a weekly summary of the condition of the hop market at home and abroad.

A very full report of the proceedings of the Farmers' Club of the American Institute is printed in each issue of the Weekly WORLD, the day after the meeting of the Club. By this arrangement the report appears in the Weekly WORLD one week in advance of its publication in any other weekly paper.

3. A portion of the Weekly WORLD is reserved for family reading matter, including original and selected stories, poems, waifs of humor, and extracts from books and periodicals Particular attention will be given to this department during the year.

4. A special feature of the Weekly WORLD is a carefully compiled summary of the news of each week. It is made so complete that no one who reads it can fail of being well posted on all the important news of the day.

THE SEMI-WEEKLY WORLD.

Published Tuesday and Friday, is a large quarto sheet containing all the news published in the Daily WORLD, with the exception of such local reports as may be of no interest to non-residents of New York City. Its market reports are as full as those of the daily edition, and it contains, besides interesting literary matter, on Friday of each week a full report of the Farmers' Club.

THE DAILY WORLD.

Contains all the news of the day that can be obtained by mail and telegraph from all parts of the world, and thorough discussions of all topics of interest

THE WORLD ALMANAC.

"The World Almanac" contains a vast quantity of political information of use to every voter, and of such character as can be obtained in no other publication. In it are printed full official returns of every important election; the vote of New York State by election districts, and of Connecticut by towns; the name and votes of each candidate for each branch of the New York Legislature; list of members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives; obituary record and list of important events; a complete summary of political events during each year; crop reports; cotton statistics; acts of Congress, &c. As a compact political manual it has no equal.

I do not wish to inform you, reader, that Dr. Wonderful, or any other man, has discovered a remedy that cures Consumption, when the lungs are half consumed, in short, will cure all diseases whether of mind, body or estate, make men live forever, and leave death to play for want of work and is designed to make our sublunary sphere a blissful Paradise to which Heaven itself shall be but a side show You have heard enough of that kind of humbuggery. But when I tell you that Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will positively cure the worst cases of Catarrh in the Head, I only assert that which thousands can testify to. I will pay $500 reward for a case that I cannot cure. A pamphlet giving symptoms and other information sent free to any address. This remedy is SOLD BY MOST DRUGGISTS IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

Price 50 cents. Sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of sixty cents, or four packages for two dollars. Beware of counterfeits and worthless imitations. See that my private Stamp, which is a positive guarantee of Genuineness is upon the outside wrapper. Remember that this private Stamp, issued by the United States Government, expressly for stamping my medicines has my portrait, name and address, and the words U. S. Certificate of Genuineness," engraved upon it, and need not be mistaken. Don't be swindled by travelers and others representing themselves as Dr Sage; I am the only man now living that has the knowledge and right to manufacture the Genuine Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, and I never travel to sell his medicine. THE DIAMOND GLASSES, Manufactured by J. E. Spencer & Co., N. Y., which are now offered to the public, are pronounced by all the celebrated Opticians of the World to be the Most Perfect Natural, Artificial help to the human eye ever known. They are ground under their own supervision, from minute Crystal Pebbles, melted together, and derive their name, "Diamond," on account of their hardness and brilliancy The Scientific Principle on which they are constructed brings the core or centre of the lens directly in front of the eye, producing a clear and distinct vision, as in the natural, healthy sight, and preventing all unpleasant sensations, such as glimmering and wavering of sight, dizziness, &c., peculiar to all others in use

They are mounted in the FINEST MANNER, in frames of the best quality, of all materials used for that purpose.

Their finish and durability cannot be surpassed.

CAUTION.—None genuine unless bearing their trade mark stamped on every frame.

TO-DAY.

O linger, sweet To-day,
And hasten not away;
Let kindly eyes still shine,
The same old friends be mine,
The joys which, being thine,
Shall pass with thee away:
Oh leave them, kind To-day!

Oh hasten, drear To-day!
O hasten fast away;
For thou sad tears hast brought,
And hours with sorrow fraught,
Fair hopes that came to naught:
Take, take them all away,
And linger not, To-day!

O infinite To-day,
Thou shalt not pass away!
Out of the shadowy night
Into thy heavenly light,
Un[illegible] its watchful sight,
[illegible] would haste away,
[illegible]lished in earth Yesterday.
[illegible]ears prec[illegible] M. H. K.

Publicans at the [illegible]me.

[illegible] e old F[illegible]tain is Formed.

To u[illegible]stand the philosophy of this this dis[illegible] phenomenon, essential to the very existence of plants and animals, a few facts, derived from observation and a long train of experiments, must be remembered.

Were the atmosphere everywhere, at all times, at a uniform temperature, we should never have rain, hail, or snow. The water absorbed by it in evaporation from the sea and the earth's surface would descend in an imperceptible vapor, or cease to be absorbed by the air when it was once fully saturated. The absorbing power of the atmosphere, and consequently its capability to retain humidity, is proportionably greater in cold than warm air. The air near the surface of the earth is warmer than it is in the region of the clouds. The higher we ascend from the earth, the colder we find the atmosphere. Hence the perpetual snow on very high mountains, in the hottest climates.

Now, when from evaporation the air is highly saturated with vapor,—though it be invisible,—if its temperature is suddenly reduced by cold currents descending from above, or rushing from a higher to a lower latitude, its capacity to retain moisture is diminished, clouds are formed, and the result is rain. Air condenses as it cools, and like a sponge filled with water and compressed, pours out water which its diminished capacity cannot hold. How singular yet how simple is such an arrangement for watering the earth!—Scientific American.

The Poverty of Prosperity.

Beecher, in a recent sermon, says:—"I verily believe that men who prosper by wickedness lose their capacity for enjoyment; so that there are thousands of overswollen prosperous men who are not one-tenth as happy as the men who have almost nothing. Why, there are poor workmen in yonder city with such pitiful stipends that they can scarcely make both ends meet, who are yet a great deal happier than the millionaire whom they serve. There are men that have gone through the prosperity of what are called secular things in this world, who look out enviously, and sometimes almost sadly, upon the swart laborer, and say, "Oh! if I had no more anxiety than he has; if I could only whistle and sing as he does; if I had his lungs, and such arms as he has; if I were as happy as he is, I think I would be willing to give up all my wealth." Oh! the heart-aching cares the rust and biting, the envies and jealousies, the competitions and rivalries, the attritions of a life keyed in the lower range of the human faculties! These miseries belong to such men; and if you could look into them you would not be deceived, nor seduced, nor persuaded to take their place."

Two Pictures.

A Boston girl asks the following pertinent questions to other Boston girls: "Could you love a man who wore false hair on his head when he had enough of his own? who painted his face and improved his form as you improve (?) yours? who pinched his feet with small shoes, his hands with small gloves, his waist with corsets: and then, as if he had not already deformed himself enough, tied a huge bustle to his back, and thrust tiny mountains of wire into his bosom"

We would put the following pertinent questions to young men. Could you love a girl who defiled her mouth with tobacco and loaded the air with fumes of cigars? who staggered home several times a week the worse for liquor? who indulged in fast horses, bet high at races, and swaggered around the streets with questionable companions?

Which picture wears the most alluring colors?—Revolution.

AN ASTONISHED MINISTER.—In a small city not far from the "Hub," resides a dentist named Brown. He received an order from his beloved pastor for a set of false teeth. The work was executed promptly and the pet shepherd of his pet flock called in at the appointed time to receive them. Brown fixed them in his Rev. customer's mouth when the latter, stepping to the glass to see the effect, said slowly and distinctly:

"Jesus Christ! Jesus Christ!"

Now, Brown is more noted for his quickness of temper and profanity than for his piety; and hearing his customer speak in such a manner, his ire was quickly aroused.

"Blast it!" he exclaimed, "if you don't like the teeth, you needn's take them, but there is no necessity for your swearing about it."

The astonished minister drew back.

"My dear sir," he said, "I was not swearing about the teeth; but for ten years I have not been able to pronounce my beloved Saviour's name distinctly; I was only trying your teeth."

GLYCERINE AND YOLK OF EGG.—The Philadelphia Journal of Pharmacy has made known a formula for a preparation which is likely to prove valuable for external use. Four parts, by weight, of yolk of eggs are to be rubbed in a mortar with five parts of glycerine. The compound has the consistence of honey and is unctious like fatty substances, over which it has the advantage of being easily removed by water. It is unalterable, a specimen having laid exposed to the air for three years unchanged. Applied to the skin, it forms a varnish that effectually prevents the action of the air. These properties render it serviceable for broken surfaces of all kinds, particularly erysipelas and sore nipples, and for cutaneous affections, of which it allays the itching.

Judge Portly says the liveliest time he ever experienced was on issuing the first number of a newspaper in a western town. The people wanted something stirring. He published the personal history of the leading politicians as furnished by their friends. The Judge says that for the first hour they all rushed for the paper; the second hour they went for him.

From the Country Gentleman.

Making Winter Butter.

As prime butter, without fault in flavor, always commands a high price, and an article made perfect in the dead of winter, with all the nutty taste of the best Orange county summer grass butter, would make an extra high figure, why not produce such a quality, and make a kind of harvest at the season of the year when nothing is done, or worse than naught by some farmers? Some may say, "I cannot be done in this State;" but I have done it in the north and south, in States fairly representing all others; it can be done, and very easily, in any part of the Union, with no more trouble than is taken in the production of soapy stuff. Grow some mangolds and carrots; cut some grass just as it has come into bloom, and give it plenty of field room, turning it often that it may dry uniformly and be a sweet, bright-looking article of hay.—When winter commences, begin feeding the cows in milk with these roots and the beautiful hay, and if some good corn meal is shaken over or mixed with the roots, so much the better for the cows, the butter and the manure; the corn meal will be well paid for, though hay alone of the description alluded to will make first-class butter. The right kind of food given to the cows is the first step toward making fine butter, and without this being done the best dairymaid in the whole world cannot manipulate their milk into the desired article. I believe there are some men who have an idea that it is a kind of extravagance to have cows in milk during the winter; who think calves cannot be raised that are dropped in the autumn, and believe men ought to do like the squirrels—put everything in store for the cold season. Let them eat the tub and potted butter; but, while fresh butter with others is appreciated, and so long as there is a market for first-class produce of every kind allow farther-seeing men to provide the essentials for supplying the demand.

Salt butter in England is considered very little better than hog's lard, and is never brought on any respectable person's table. It is used occasionally on toast, and a good deal in making pastry but fresh butter and fresh meats are eaten by everybody in comfortable circumstances, except that cold boiled ham and rashers of broiled bacon are very common for the breakfast.

Preserving Cider.

The following methods of preserving cider are recommended as being worthy of trial:

Cider Wine.—Take one barrel of cider from the press; let it stand three days to settle and ferment; then draw it off into a cask while it runs clear; turn it into another barrel, bung it up tight, and in three weeks draw it off again; take two ounces of Cooper's isinglass and mix it with a quart of cider; let it stand two days; beat it up in the cider, and add a pint more cider, let that stand another day, then beat it up well, and add two quarts more of cider, and beat it thick; turn this into the barrel of cider, and stir it through the bunghole until it is thoroughly mixed; beat it for fifteen minutes at least; now fasten it up tight for three weeks then draw it off and either bottle or keep on draft, but closely fastened.

A less intricate method is, to pulverize charcoal, then put one pint of it in a cotton bag and put it into the barrel; the cider will keep sweet, and will improve the longer it is kept, and it is said will never intoxicate.

Champagne Cider.—Take one barrel of pure cider made from sound apples, no decayed ones; mix with it forty pounds of light brown sugar, dissolving it with some of the cider in a tub while it is perfectly free from fermentation; place the barrel in a cool cellar, and let it work thoroughly from the bunghole, filling it up as it evaporates, with some that has been saved out for that purpose; when it has worked a week or so bung it up securely; draw it off in March, and put it in a clean cask, stopped tightly; it can be bottled in May or June, and it is well to coat the corks with melted tallow and rosin, using one ounce of the forme to one quarter of a pound of the latter.

From the Rural New Yorker,

Cancer Remedy.

I have discovered, in an old scrap book which my wife keeps, and adds everything of interest there, a cure for a cancer, which every person ought to know. It has been tried in our family, and proved a success. I will give you the whole story, and you can use it as you see fit; it is this:

"Not long since an article appeared in the Milwaukee Free Democrat, which the Providence Post thinks of sufficient importance to receive general notice. The statement of the Democrat is that some eight months ago Mr. T B. Mason who keeps a music store on Wisconsin street, ascertained that he had a cancer on his face the size of a pea. It was cut out by Dr. Wolcott and the wound partially healed; subsequently, it grew again, and while he was at Cincinnati on business, it attained the size of a hickory nut. He has remained there since Christmas, under treatment, and is now perfectly cured. The process is this:

"A piece of sticking plaster was put over the cancer (a little larger than the cancer,) so that the cancer and a small circular rim of healthy skin next to it was exposed; then a plaster made of chloride of zinc, bloodroot, and wheat flour and water, was spread on a piece of muslin the size of this circular opening, and applied to the cancer for twenty-four hours. On removing it, the cancer will be found to be burned into, and appear of the color and hardness of an old shoe sole, and the circular rim outside of it will look white and parboiled, as if scalded by hot steam; the wound is now dressed, and the outside rim soon separates, and the cancer comes out in a hard lump, and the place heals up The plaster kills the cancer, and it sloughs out like dead flesh, and never grows again.

"The remedy was discovered by Dr Fell, of London and has been used by him for six or eight years with unfailing success, and not a case has been known of the reappearance of the cancer when this remedy has been applied."

The above remedy has been used on a sore in our family which had every appearance of a cancer. It had attained the size of a large chestnut, and it came out exactly as represented above, in about ten days, and healed up in ten days more.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y. S. S. WESCOTT.

The number of inhabitants of Berlin belonging to the reserve of Landwehr, who have been called on for service, is 35,000, or nearly 5 per cent of the population. This, however, is considerably above the average of the whole country. More than 13,000 of their wives, having no means of support, have to be maintained by the city.

TO PHYSICIANS!

NEW YORK, August 15th, 1868.

Allow me to call your attention to my PREPARATION OF COMPOUND EXTRACT BUCHU. The component parts are, BUCHU, LONG LEAF, CUBEBS, JUNIPER BERRIES.

MODE OF PREPARATION.—Buchu, in vacuo. Juniper Berries, by distillation, to form a fine gin. Cubebs extracted by displacement with spirits obtained from Juniper Berries; very little sugar is used and a small proportion of spirit. It is more palatable than any now in use.

Buchu as prepared by Druggists, is of a dark color. It is a plant that emits its fragrance; the action of a flame destroys this (its active principle), leaving a dark and glutinous decoction. Mine is the color of ingredients. The Buchu in my preparation predominates; the smallest quantity of the other ingredients are added, to prevent fermentation; upon inspection it will be found not to be a Tincture, as made in Pharmacopœa, nor is it a Syrup—and therefore can be used in cases where fever or inflammation exist. In this, you have the knowledge of the ingredients, and the mode of preparation.

Hoping that you will favor it with a trial, and that upon inspection it will meet with your approbation,

With a feeling of profound confidence I am, very respectfully,

H. T. HELMBOLD.

HELMBOLD'S
FLUID EXTRACT
BUCHU!

For weakness arising from indiscretion. The exhausted powers of Nature which are accompanied by so many alarming symptoms, among which will be found, Indisposition to exertion, Loss of Memory, Wakefulness, Horror of Disease, or Forebodings of Evil; in fact, Universal Lassitude Prostration, and Inability to enter into the enjoyments of society.

THE CONTITUTION

once affected with Organic Weakness, requires the aid of Medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system, which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. If no treatment is submitted to, Consumption or Insanity ensues.

HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT
BUCHU

in affections peculiar to Females, is unequalled by anyother preparation, as in Chlorosis, or Retention, Painfulness or Suppression of customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Schirrus State of the Uterus, and all complaints incidental to the sex, or decline or change of life.

HELMBOLD'S
FLUID EXTRACT
BUCHU
IMPROVED ROSE WASH

Will radically exterminate from the system disease arising from habits of dissipation, at little expense little or no change in diet, no inconvenience or exposure; completely superseding those unpleasant and dangerous remedies, Copaiva and Mercury, in all these diseases.

USE
HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU

in all diseases of these organs, whether existing in male or female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing. It is pleasant in taste and odor, "immediate" in action, and more strengthening than any of the preparations of Bark or Iron.

Those suffering from broken down or delicate constitutions, procure the remedy at once.

The reader must be aware that, however slight may be the attack of the above diseases, it is certain to affect the bodily health and mental powers All the above diseases require the aid of a Diuretic. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU is a great Diuretic.

Sold by Druggists Everywhere. Price $1.25 per Bottle, or 6 Bottles for $6.50. Delivered to any address. Describe Symptoms in all communications
