THE PARADOX OF TIME.

Time goes, you say?—Ah no!
Alas, time stays—we go;
Or else, were this not so,
What need to chain the hours,
For youth were always ours?
Time goes, you say?—Ah no!

Ours is the eyes' deceit
Of men whose flying feet
Lead through some landscape low;
We pass, and think we see
The earth's fixed surface flee;
Alas, time stays—we go!

Once, in the days of old,
Your locks were curling gold,
And mine had shamed the crow;
Now in the self-same stage,
We've reached the silver age;
Time goes, you say?—Ah no!

Once when my voice was strong,
I filled the woods with song,
To praise your "rose" and "snow;
My bird, that sung, is dead;
Where are your roses fled?
Alas, time stays—we go!

See, in what traversed ways,
What backward fate delays
The hopes we used to know;
Where are our old desires—
Ah, where those vanished fires?
Time goes, you say?—Ah no!

How far, how far, O Sweet,
The past behind our feet
Lies in the even-glow!
Now, on the forward way,
Let us fold hands and pray;
Alas, time stays—we go!

RANK IMPOSES OBLIGATION.

"Hang Miss Ashurst!"

"Oh, Phil!"

"Well, I can't help it. Why does she come to spoil everything? Don't I know how it will be?—always Miss Ashurst to be considered, taken about, included in everything. No more drives and boat-rows, just you and me, Amy; no more evenings on the door-step. I declare I've a great mind to go over to Uncle Phil's at Goshen for a month."

"Now, Phil, please (coaxingly). "It won't be so bad as you think. Besides, you may like her very much. Mother says her mother was the greatest beauty in Connecticut."

"She isn't a beauty, though; I'll bet on that. A talking, writing, society woman—I hate the kind. Amy, will you go out for a row? We'll have one more while the boat is all our own."

This confabulation was held on either side of the Widow Mauran's garden gate—a model gate for purposes of conversation, just high enough and wide enough to accommodate two pairs of elbows, and allow the owners of the elbows to look easily into each other's eyes. Phil smiled into Amy's as he swung wide the barrier. He offered his arm, she took it, and they sauntered down to the shore. They were a picturesque couple to look at. Tall Phil, in spite of his momentary ill-temper, possessed a frank, handsome face, lit with fine eyes and the sweetest of smiles; while little Amy's modest, wild-flower beauty was exquisite in its way. Second cousins, intimate friends, all but declared lovers, it was a pleasant matter of course that they should be always together; and in spite of Amy's disclaimers, she was at the bottom of her heart as sorry as Phil at this interruption to their tete-a-tete—as sorry or sorrier; for blended with her regret was the instinctive apprehension of a girlish heart, which, pledged in fact though not in name, grieves with the unspoken dread that some other woman may yet pass by to snatch from her very lips the coveted untasted cup in whose depth lies, or seems to lie, all the best sweetness of coming life. It was a comfort to have Philip so cross about it, however; and in the effort to soothe him, she, woman-like, forgot her own annoyance. So the evening ended happily.

Next day brought the expected guest. Amy's first glance sent her heart to quaking again. Never had she seen a woman in the least like this. Rose Ashurst was one of those born enchantresses who reign not only by intention, but by right. Her beauty would have been remarkable had not her charm been more remarkable. Her wit and talent were balanced by a sweet humor which pervaded every word and act, and flavored all with fascination. Tact, culture, the perfect self-possession which verges upon self-forgetfulness, lent their aid to complete her attraction. And all was real. There was no pretense about Miss Ashurst. The kind looks which beamed from her beautiful eyes sprung from a kind heart. She threw herself into the interest of every human creature who approached her with a warmth born of true sympathy. No wonder she was popular. Popularity hardly spoiled her. She received her daily ovations as a matter of course, half indifferently, half gratefully, but always with a modest grace which enhanced her effect. A dangerous woman this to bring into propinquity with susceptible youths. Poor Amy!

But Amy, too, felt the charm. The dazzling brown eyes which had bewitched so many hearts worked their spell upon her's at once, and she lent delighted aid in settling the new comer and her belongings. This month in Pemigewasset was a sudden whim of Miss Ashurst's. She wanted quiet and a place to write in, and the old homestead in which her great-grandmother was born seeming to meet these conditions, she wrote to offer herself as an inmate; and Mrs. Mauran, who was glad to add to her small income by an occasional boarder, gave pleased consent. All manner of pretty things came out of the trunks to adorn the simple chamber. Miss Ashurst could not live without artistic surroundings, and traveled always with photographs, sketches, books, small articles of virtu, and bits of bright color in this or that. These disposed on walls and table, with daintily frilled and embroidered covers laid over the old-fashioned pillows, an easel with its canvases and oil-tubes in one corner (Miss Ashurst painted pictures), a writing-table exquisitely arranged drawn into the window (Miss Ashurst wrote books), a sweet-faced Madonna painted on ivory, a few flowers grouped in a classic vase, made the homely keeping-room chamber over into a bower of romance, simple Amy thought. She stood as in a dream, inhaling the perfume of a wide luxurious life, of a whole world of sensations and sights unknown till now, and scarcely comprehended.

"There!" said Miss Ashurst, giving the last touch to her vase of clematis and roses, "now I shall do beautifully. What a pleasant room this is! The very exposure I like best, and such a sweet view! It is just the room to work in. I am glad your mother let me come, Amy. I may call you Amy, may I not? We are relatives, you know—far away, but still relatives."

"Oh yes, please do," cried Amy. "Every one calls me so."

"How lovely she is! was her soliloquy as she went down stairs. "I wonder what Phil will think of her? He will be surprised, I'm sure, but he must admire her; he can't help it."

She watched the expression of his eyes at teatime, but it told her nothing. Phil scarcely spoke. He looked at Miss Ashurst a great deal, but Amy could only guess what the looks meant.

"Well?" she said, interrogatively, as they met on the door-steps after tea.

"Well," responded Phil.

"What do you think? Isn't she pretty?"

"Pretty!" with an indignant inflection.

"Why, Phil, how can you help thinking so?"

"Pretty is not the word at all. She is superb—beautiful."

"I thought you would think so," said Amy, cheerfully, but with a little stricture at her heart.

"Yes. She's not my style, of course; but she is a woman in a thousand. No wonder she has been such a belle all her life."

"I'm so glad you admire her. Now you won't mind her being here, and you'll be polite to her, won't you, Phil?"

"Oh, yes; I'll do whatever you wish," replied Phil, with a carelessness which was half affected.

"She's not Philip's style," whispered Amy to her pillow that night, and fell asleep with the talismanic sentence on her lips.

"Alas, how easily things go wrong!
A word too much, or a kiss too long,
And there falls a mist and a blinding rain,
And life is never the same again."

sings George Macdonald. Things went "wrong" in little Amy's world during the next fortnight. Was it only the prescience of coming mists which darkened the blue, and made the days sad? Was it only foolish jealousy, or was it something tangible? She made herself miserable over these questions. She scolded herself, but scolding did no good; the wrung, hurt feeling would not leave her. And yet why was she hurt? Was it not natural and right that Philip should be attentive to their guest, who had on him, as on her, the claim of kindred blood—this guest who was so charming? For Amy never denied the charm; she felt it herself too strongly. Was it not the very thing she had asked him to do? Yes; but yet—but yet—All these reflections ended by deepening the vague unhappiness. Night after night she sat alone on the door-step and watched the boat glide off into the moonlight; Phil at the oars, Miss Ashurst with the tiller ropes in her white hands. "Come with us," they always said; but when she murmured an excuse, they passed on cheerfully without her. Yes, it had come to that: Philip went without her, and liked it just as well! The world—her world—had changed. Would it ever be "the same again?"

Philip was in a temporary dazzle of admiration; he neither reasoned nor reflected. But for Miss Ashurst, no slightest glimpse of the truth had crossed her mind. She thought Amy a sweet, pretty child, but shy, and busy with household matters, as the only daughter of a widow in poor circumstances must naturally be. For Phil, he was charming; she liked him best when alone—the truth being that a slight uneasy consciousness made him awkward when in company with the old love, with whom he was somehow a little "off," and the new, with whom he was not fairly "on." So Miss Ashurst was not sorry when Amy refused to join in the moonlight rows, and knowing nothing of what had gone before, it did not strike her as unusual or make her question. He and Amy were as brother and sister, she reflected. So her eyes being sealed by ignorance, and Phil's blinded as by a sudden spell, Amy's pale cheeks and woful looks passed unheeded, except by one pair of eyes which were not sealed, namely, her mother's.

Mrs. Mauran was a quiet person; but her quiet concealed strength and a power reading character. Instinctively she "took stock" of all persons with whom she came into contact, and her instinct rarely failed. A bitter experience had taught her how "easy things go wrong" in this world of ours, and though she "hated to meddle," and was sorry to lose her boarder, she resolved to appeal to the sweetness and nobility which she felt were the underlying stratum of Miss Ashurst's nature. It was in this wise that she accomplished her purpose:

Miss Ashurst and Phil had been off on a drive prolonged into late twilight. Tea was over. Phil had strolled down to the village after the mail, and Mrs. Mauran sat beside her guest in the shaded porch.

"Where is Amy?" asked Miss Ashurst.

"Gone to bed with a bad headache," said Mrs. Mauran.

"A headache? I am so sorry! Isn't there something out of my medicine case which would relieve her?—pulsatilla, perhaps, or iris." Miss Ashurst was a devoted homeopath.

"I think there is something. Not out of your case, however," replied Mrs. Mauran, quietly.

"What can you mean?"

"My dear Miss Ashurst, may I speak frankly to you about something that is on my mind? And will you not think me unkind or impertinent?"

"I am quite sure you could be neither."

"I want to tell you a little story which concerns Phil and Amy."

"Phil and Amy!"

"Yes. They are second cousins, as you know. Phil's father was my most intimate friend, and the children were naturally brought up together. Last spring Phil, who trusts me as if I were his mother, begged my leave to ask Amy to be his wife." She paused a moment. Miss Ashurst said nothing, only leaned forward a little and listened. "I told him that Amy was so young that he had better wait a few months before he said anything. I wish I hadn't."

"Why?"

"I don't know why. It might have been better. Since that time Phil has seen a woman a little older, far more beautiful, than my little girl, richer in all that life has to give, but not richer as far as he is concerned, for she has no love to give him, and Amy has. If she had, if she could, I should not speak. If I did not know that she is as true and as good as she is beautiful, I should not speak. As it is, I do."

There was another pause.

"My dear Mrs. Mauran—thank you," said Miss Ashurst, at last. "You were right to speak. I have made mischief, but without knowing it. You are sure of that, I hope."

"I am sure of it."

"Phil is a charming person. I like him extremely, and of course I saw that he—liked me. But I never thought of it as a serious thing. A great many other people have felt the same, and have gotten over it."

"Phil will get over it also. He has loved you but three weeks, and Amy three years. It is a glamour, which will wear off."

Miss Ashurst smiled still, but less brightly. It is not pleasant to be agreed with so cordially in matters of this kind. "Yes," she said; "it is, as you say, a glamour. It will disappear as I disappear. And the sooner that disappearance takes place the better. I shall have a letter this evening which will oblige me to leave you day after to-morrow. Will that do?"

"My dear Miss Ashurst, my dear kinswoman, believe me when I say that I am truly sorry that anything must make you go. You are what I thought, what I trusted, and I thank you with all my heart."

"And I thank you for trusting me," replied Miss Ashurst.

But after she went up-stairs her face changed. Long she stood at the window looking out at the dim-tinted sea.

"It has been very nice," she whispered to herself at last. "But this is foolish. I must go to bed."

Miss Ashurst's letter of recall came, and on the day fixed she left. Amy, dazed, as it were, by this sudden departure, reproached herself heartily for feeling glad. This reproach deepened into remorse when, the farewells spoken and the beautiful radiant presence vanished, she found her walls and table ornamented with good-by gifts. There were the photographs she had most admired, the books, even the Madonna, ivory-painted and velvet-swung, all left for her by her sweet-hearted rival. A mist of penitent tears dimmed her eyes; but in spite of penitence and of tears, she was glad. For Phil, the rattle of the wheels which bore his charmer away was like the sound which breaks sharply into some fantastic dream.

Metaphorically speaking, he rubbed his eyes. For a day or two he hung about, vacant and listless; then he roused, as desirous to pick up dropped threads again. Somehow Amy was more difficult of approach than of yore. A little veil rested between them. She was not always to be had when wanted. We value what we work for, what we hold with some trembling sense of insecurity. As weeks went on, Phil grew to prize Amy more than ever. The knowledge that he had half lost her intensified his love. It required months to win his way back to the old place. But at last—

"And you are quite, quite sure that you care most for me?" whispered Amy, saucily, the night after their engagement.

"Most? Altogether, you mean. There is no other."

"Not even Miss Ashurst?"

"Not even Miss Ashurst; though"—and Phil lifted his cap as before a queen—"she is a stunner, a real lady, every inch of her, and as good as she is beautiful. Bless her!"

And bless her, say we.

THE VISIBLE PLANETS.

Their Positions, Appearances and Movements at the Present Time.

MERCURY

is now rapidly approaching the sun, and will soon become invisible. The planet can be distinguished from a fixed star only by its bright red color and the fluctuating light which seems to be peculiar to this planet. When near the horizon it generally keeps up a continuous "twinkling," not unlike that of the stellar orbs. Several eminent astronomers never saw this planet, and Copernicus himself is said to have lamented in his dying moments that he was never able to obtain a glimpse at Mercury. For many evenings the planet Mercury may be seen after sunset in the western heavens, low down toward the horizon.

VENUS,

which has been visible in our morning sky for several months past, will soon make her appearance as an "evening star." On Thursday, Sept. 23, Venus was situated in her superior conjunction with the sun. This planet is now gradually receding from that luminary toward the east, and will soon present a magnificent appearance in our evening twilight.

MARS

Is now the most conspicuous planet in the heavens. About 9 o'clock in the evening he may be seen upon the southern heavens in the beautiful constellation Sagittarius. His motion is toward the east or direct, and he may be easily recognized by the reddish light with which he shines. Mars is now plainly visible throughout the entire night.

JUPITER.

The "giant planet" Jupiter is at present very unfavorably situated for observation. Friday, November 5th, Jupiter will be situated in conjunction with the sun, after which he will become visible upon our eastern sky as a "morning star."

SATURN.

What has been said of Mars will apply to the planet Saturn, as they are situated only a short distance from each other, Saturn being in Capricornus, the next constellation east from Sagittarius. Saturn shines with a pale white light, and will not be mistaken for a fixed star. The rings of Saturn may be perceived through an ordinary astronomical telescope.

URANUS

is now in the constellation of Leo, in good position for telescopic observation, but cannot be perceived by the naked eye unless its exact situation is known. When seen through an instrument of sufficient power the planet will show a sensible disc. It shines like a star of the sixth magnitude, with pale blue light.

NEPTUNE.

This far off sentinel of the planetary system cannot be seen with the naked eye. Even by using good telescopes no satisfactory observations can be made on this planet at present. It appears as a star of the eighth magnitude, and one can recognize this orb only by detecting its motion, which is very slow.

Our Great Poets.

Mr. Ralph Waldo Emerson has been talking with a correspondent of the Concord Monitor about the habits of his poetical friends. "Holmes," said he, "is so full that he can write at any time. Lowell broods over his subject for a time, and then composes with great swiftness. He does not like to write to order, though desirous of employing the stimulus of great occasions. We asked him to read a poem at Concord on the one-hundredth anniversary of the fight, but he said he could not. His wife, a day or two before, wrote to me saying, 'I cannot speak for James, yet I think you may expect a poem from him on the 19th. He has been going about for some time in that peculiar way which is a promise of something,' and on the 19th Lowell was on the ground with his poem—and a grand one it was. Longfellow prepares his poems to be read on any great occasion, as a minister who lives near Boston prepares his sermons, nearly a year ahead. He wrote the poem read at Bowdoin College last summer early in the fall of the preceding year, and well it was he did so, for the months intervening have been fruitless as far as literary labor is concerned, owing to physical prostration. He is, happily, better now."

AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

Around the Farm.

NOW IS the time to be looking for next year's seed corn.

CASTOR OIL is said to be the best and must durable lubricator for buggy axles.

GLYCERINE is excellent to rub on chafes, burns or chapped hands or sun scalds.

KEEP your boots well oiled in winter, ank they will last longer, while your feet will be drier and warmer.

THE average cost of fences in the State of Pennsylvania is $11.40 an acre. In Rhode Island it is $19.50 an acre.

WHITE LEAD ground in oil is an excellent application for saddle chafes or harness or yoke galls on horses or cattle.

BEYOND any sort of doubt, seeds soaked in weak camphor water will sprout and grow vigorously, when the same seeds not thus treated will refuse to show any signs whatever of vitality.

DO NOT allow trees to grow over and shade your dwelling. They are unhealthy. On the contrary, vines and creepers on the walls protect them, and make a house warmer and dryer, and also make it look much better.

ENGLAND washes most of the manure made by her people into the ocean, and then hunts over the globe, from Egypt to Peru, for more to waste. The United States does no better. But the natives of China and Japan maintain the fertility of their soil by saving what those who pretend to be civilized throw away. They have no worn out abandoned fields.

AUTUMN is the proper season to prepare grafts and cuttings. Of the latter, cuttings of grapes, currants, quinces, gooseberries, poplar and many other plants, taken off in the fall and buried in the ground all winter, will grow with facility in the spring. Grafts should always be taken off in the fall and kept in moist sand or sawdust till ready to use.

DR. HULL, a noted horticulturist of Illinois, says that his lime remedy for the codling moth has proved completely effectual. The lime is thrown into the trees when the dew is on, or just after a rain, and after the fruit is set. A dipper or large spoon may be used; or, best of all, a bellows made for the purpose. The insects "will not go where the lime is scattered," he remarks; "they go away."

FARMERS will find the following profitable for house or fence paint: Skim milk, two quarts; fresh slacked lime, eight ounces; linseed oil, six ounces; white Burgundy pitch, two ounces; Spanish white, three pounds. The lime is to be slacked in water, exposed to the air, and then mixed with about one-fourth of the milk; the oil in which pitch is dissolved to be added, a little at the time, then the rest of the milk, and afterward the Spanish white. This for white paint. If desirable, any other color may be produced; thus, if a cream color is desired, in place of part of the Spanish white use the ocher alone.

About the House.

IT IS not coldslaugh, but coleslaugh, when cabbage is cut fine and served raw.

A REALLY good cure for toothache: Cotton, saturated with a mixture of spirits of niter and alum, applied to a hollow tooth, is a good remedy.

VEAL broth: Stew a small knuckle in about three quarts of water, two ounces of rice, a little salt, and a blade of mace, till the liquor is half wasted away.

THE surplus heat wasted from a common stove will, if conducted through a drum into another room, warm the room as much as a stove would, and still compel the fuel to do double the duty and give double results.

STEAMED Indian bread, extra: Three cups of buttermilk, three cups of sweet milk, three cups of meal, two cups of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of soda; put in a greased pan and steam three hours.

TO CLEAN SOILED RIBBONS.—Wash them in cold suds, with a little alcohol in the water. Rinse in clear water that a piece of gum arabic has been dissolved in. Wind around a glass can or bottle to dry. Do not iron.

THE best way to keep apples through winter for daily use is on shelves, in a cement-bottomed basement room, whose temperature is kept as low as practicable without freezing. Spread the fruit only a few inches deep, that they may be readily picked over.

THE brilliant colors of autumn leaves may be preserved by dipping the stems in melted yellow beeswax. The leaves should be well dried. By piercing the leaf near the stem with doubled thread wire, you can weave them on coarser wire, or on large cord, into any description of garlands.

TO CLEANSE cotton goods: Add to hot rainwater an amount of wheat bran equal to one-eighth of the fabric to be cleansed, and, after stirring well for five minutes, add the goods; stir them about with a clean stick, and bring the whole to a boil. Allow the mixture to cool until the articles can be washed out, after which rinse them well.

A VERY good way to pack eggs, it is said, is to take the barrel or tub, and put a layer of plaster in the bottom; then set the eggs up on end, but do not let them strike each other. Add more plaster; then another layer of eggs, and so on until the vessel is full. Set them where they will keep dry, and in the spring you will have plenty of fresh eggs on hand.

CHICKEN CHEESE.—This is so nice that everyone who eats it once likes it again. Boil two chickens till tender; take out all the bones and chop the meat fine; season to taste with salt, pepper and butter; pour in enough of the liquor they were boiled in to make moist; mold it in any shape you choose, and, when cold, turn out and cut into slices. It is an excellent traveling or picnic lunch.

Lotteries and Fools.

Alexandria, Va., is the last scene of one of those villainous schemes that take a man's money without giving him anything for it. Investigation shows that the drawing of the Montpelier Female Humane Association Lottery was a huge hoax. The managers were from New York, and of the half million dollars received from tickets, all but a few thousand were absorbed by sharpers. Not a dollar was drawn by a bona fide ticket holder. This is a fair specimen of all these swindles. And yet every loudly advertised game of this sort finds its dupes all over the land. Poor fools invest their last dollar with the hope of winning a big bonanza. As long as men do not believe in Horace Greeley's theory that the only way to get money is to honestly earn it, they must not complain when they are basely defrauded by gambling schemes.

A Father Kills His Two Sons and Commits Suicide.

The killing of two children by their father, at Hackettstown, N. J., on Saturday, was one of the most heartless and cold-blooded murders that ever occurred in that State. The perpetrator of the crime is a German house and sign painter named John Rutter about 45 years of age. Ten years ago he married a woman living in Scranton, Pa., and she bore him the two children who died by his hand on Saturday. They were both handsome little boys, the elder aged 7 and the younger 4 years. Mrs. Rutter is represented by her neighbors as not being true to her husband, and rumors of this reaching his ears, angered and excited him. Frequent and bitter quarrels were the result; and more than once the woman was compelled to ask the intervention of the town authorities to save her from her husband's violence. He finally carried his abuse to such an extreme that the wife decided to remain with him no longer, and taking her two little sons with her, she repaired to the home of her parents in Scranton. Rutter followed her thither, and succeeded in taking the children away. His wife went back to their house in Hackettstown and demanded their return. The husband refused to deliver them, and the mother in order to be with them, was persuaded to take up her residence with her husband again. On Saturday, about 12 o'clock, Mrs. Rutter went over the way to visit a neighbor, leaving her two little boys playing on the floor in the room facing the street. While she was there Rutter went in to get his dinner. He called to his wife to come over, but she did not seem to hear him, and he then fired a pistol out of the window, apparently to attract her attention. He then deliberately walked to the place where his little boys were playing, and placing his pistol behind the left ear of the elder fired, killing him instantly. The younger boy, frightened at what had happened, started for the door. His father caught him on the threshold and lifted him in his arms. The boy exclaimed, "Don't! papa, don't!" but Rutter paid no heed to his entreaties, and, placing the pistol against his forehead, sent a bullet into his brain. Laying the body carefully by the side of that of the other child, he then tried to shoot his wife, who just then rushed into the house. She avoided the fate which her boys had suffered by running over the street, and Rutter then shot himself twice, the first ball striking him on the side of the head, and glancing off, leaving only a scalp wound. The second shot lodged a ball in his neck, near the base of the skull. When the neighbors entered the house the bodies of the children were found near the center of the room, their father lying near them in an insensible condition. On the wall opposite the window from which the pistol had first been fired, were inscribed, in his handwriting, some German words, which, translated, read: "My wife and Fred Smeat's wife are the cause of my death and my children's." Rutter was removed to the jail at Belvidere, the county seat of Warren county, where he is receiving medical treatment. His wounds are not thought to be necessarily fatal.—New York Herald.

Coinage at Philadelphia.

The silver bullion which is now being received at the Philadelphia Mint for parting is mainly from the Consolidated Virginia Mine, in Nevada, and contains 40 per cent. of gold, 50 per cent. of silver, and 10 per cent. of base metal. The bullion is known as the dore, or silver containing gold. The Mint is supplied with bullion as rapidly as is required for coinage purposes. In addition, the Assay Office in New York supplies the Mint with fine silver sufficient to insure a coinage of $1,000,000 per month in subsidiary silver coin. The standard fineness of the coin is made of 900 parts of pure silver and 100 parts of pure copper alloy. The law of 1873 has somewhat increased the weight of the subsidiary coin, so that the coins at present issued are a trifle heavier than the coin issued prior to the 1st of April, 1873, and are made to correspond in weight with the French coin. At present the subsidiary coins now issued are the half-dollar, quarter-dollar, twenty-cent piece and dime. The half-dollar weighs 192.9 grains. This piece formerly weighed 192 grains. The quarter-dollar now weighs 96.45 grains; it formerly weighed 96 grains. The new twenty-cent piece weighs 77.16 grains, and the dime weighs 38.58 grains; the latter formerly weighed 38.4 grains. These are the only silver coins authorized, excepting the trade dollar, which is a commercial piece, and weighs 420 grains.—New York Times.

The Tramp Printer.

He came in with a modest air and looked around inquiringly. The bright look of intelligence which shone from out the weather-beaten lineaments of his countenance, and the thin, tapering fingers, betokened the tramp printer. All he wanted was a couple of days' work to push him to the next town. When he went to work he did not remove his coat, his modesty being too excessive. It was a "solid dig," and he held to it nobly until the "take" was finished, then, with a bland and suppliant look at the copy hook, he quietly inquired if the ordinary Massachusetts paragraphist ever stopped long enough to take a drink. On being informed that it was against the rules of the office to make more than two breaks in a column, he walked over to his frame and fingered the type for a few minutes, and then stole out of the door as silently as he had entered. One of the boys went over, and taking up his stick, read aloud its contents, as follows:

"Cursed be thy slanderers, oh, Aleck Stephens!"—Turner's Falls Reporter.

War in the Dutch Indies.

The Dutch war against the Atchinese in Northwestern Sumatra has not been at all successful. Since the fall of the fortress called the Kratow, early in 1874, the Dutch have made no real progress, and the greater portion of Atchin is still in the hands of the Mahometan natives. Disease, aided by the intense heat, makes terrible havoc among the soldiers of Holland. A bounty of £34 is now paid each man enlisted for the war. The blame for the disastrous management of the war is thrown by some upon the Governor of the Dutch Indies; but others say that M. Fraussen Van de Putte, the Colonial Minister, is the person in fault. Meanwhile, the Atchinese have a new Sultan, and it is rumored that under his command they will soon make an aggressive movement with 30,000 men against the Dutch lines.

THE BRAIN.

Vagaries and Peculiarities of that Delicate Organ.

Unsoundness of brain, says Harper's Bazar, is often known only to its possessor. There is a stage of consciousness in which a person may be incessantly at war with himself, and with the promptings of a double, urging him to do and say things abhorred by his better self. "I am not conscious of the decay," wrote a patient to his adviser, "or suspension of any of the powers of the mind. I am as well able as ever I was to attend to my business. My family suppose me in health, yet the horrors of a mad-house are staring me in the face. I am a martyr to a species of persecution from within, which is becoming intolerable. I am urged to say the most shocking blasphemies, and obscene words are ever on my tongue. Thank God, I have been able to resist; but I often think I must yield at last, and then I shall be disgraced and ruined." The famous Bishop Butler is said to have been engaged in such a conflict for the greater part of his life. Akin to this phase of unsoundness is the desire so commonly felt to throw one's self from a height, or to give utterance at inappropriate times, as when Charles Lamb burst out laughing at a funeral. In such moments of temptation the mastery of the reason over the inclination distinguishes the sane from the insane, and it is only the sustained eccentricity of thought and mode of life which points to a condition of the brain betokening insanity. Very noteworthy are some of the early symptoms of disorder. Of one of these, the undue exaltation of the senses, an instance is given, where the patient felt such an extraordinary acuteness of hearing that he heard the least sound at the bottom of his house, and was able to tell the hour by his watch at a distance at which he could not ordinarily see the hands. Sometimes incipient disease is indicated by a perversion of the sense of touch, as in the case of a patient who, from the fancy that everything he touched was greasy, was continually washing his hands. Other well-marked symptoms are the loss of memory, deterioration in handwriting, the use of wrong words in conversation and double vision. Kleptomania, the habit of secretly purloining articles, is now a recognized form of brain disease. Of another more terrible form of madness, dipsomania, it is curious to read that its victims will drink shoe-blacking, turpentine and hair wash, when they can get nothing else to satisfy the demon that possesses them. Sometimes these two forms of mania are seen co-existent in the same person under very odd circumstances. Thus it is recorded of one man that when drunk he always stole Bibles; of another, spades; while a third individual invariably purloined a tub.

Delicate as the organization of the brain must be, it is surprising to read of the hard knocks it can bear, not only without injury, but even to its advantage. One man who lost half his brain through suppuration of the skull, preserved his intellectual faculties to the day of his death; and the brains of soldiers have been known to carry bullets without apparent inconvenience, and to undergo operation for the extraction of the foreign bodies without loss of power. A physician who was afflicted with an abnormal cerebral growth which pressed upon the cavities of the brain, so as to paralyze one side of his body and render him speechless, retained possession of his reasoning and calculating powers until he died. One of three brothers, all idiots, after receiving a severe injury on the head, gained his senses, and lived to be a clever barrister. A stable boy of dull capacity, and subject to fits, had his wits sharpened by the kick of a horse, which necessitated the abstraction of a portion of his brain; and no less a personage than Pope Clement VI. owed the improvement of his memory to a slight concussion of the brain.

An Ignorant Boy.

Mr. Porter, of Baker street, has so many irons in the fire that he never has time to sit down and talk with his children and explain things. His son John traded a dog for a steel trap the other day, supposing it to be a rat trap. Then he set the trap on the front steps, supposing that to be the best place. If his father had been a different man the boy would have had more perception, but Mr. Porter never sat down, took the lad on his knee and pointed out the straight and narrow road which the successful rat-catcher must pursue. John was in bed and asleep, and his mother was sewing a three-cornered patch on his pants, when Mr. Porter came home and stepped into the trap as he unlocked the hall door. He yelled "git out!" and "murder!" for three straight minutes, and when the neighbors gathered and pried open the trap he went in and licked John until his arm was tired. The boy was yesterday packing up a collar box, a kite and a pair of stilts, intending to run away. He can't be blamed. Fathers should sit down and explain to their sons all about rat traps and all about the best place to catch rats.—Detroit Free Press.

Look Out for Colds.

About this time look out for colds. The change of weather, when it comes, is likely to be sudden, and there will be much unhealthy exposure. Colds have an unusual tendency this season to result in pneumonia or inflammation of the lungs, a disease that has carried off a great many, who, but for a slight cold, might yet have enjoyed life and good health for many years. There is no specific rule for guarding against this dangerous disease, but the exercise of good common sense will do much to prevent taking cold. Wet feet, going from a warm room into the chilly air, laying off wrappings after a brisk walk in a room insufficiently heated, sleeping in a damp or cold bed, or going to bed before the body and feet have become sufficiently warm, are among the most common methods of exposure.

Reforming on Spelling.

Gov. Ingersoll, of Connecticut, has appointed a committee to consider the advisability of using the "amended orthography" in publishing the official documents printed by the State. It consists of Senator W. W. Fowler, who introduced the resolution; Prof. W. D. Whitney, of Yale College; Dr. J. Hammond Trumbull, Prof. C. Van Benschoten, of Wesleyan University; Prof. B. G. Northop, of the State Board of Education, and Prof. Samuel Hart, of Trinity College. The Michigan Argus.

FRIDAY MORNING, OCT. 29, 1875.

THE President has designated the last Thursday in November, the 25th, as Thanksgiving day, of which the people, young and old, as well as the turkeys and chickens, will take due notice.

A DESTRUCTIVE fire visited Virginia City, Nevada, on the 26th inst., burning much the larger and better part of the city. Reports put the losses at over $3,000,000, and say that 10,000 people are rendered homeless, 3,000 being in a state of destitution. Several deaths occurred from exposure.

WHEN old Zack, then Senator Chandler, spoke his little piece at the Opera House in this city, preceding the last general election, he said, speaking of President Grant, of course, "We can elect him a third time if we want to, and we make up our minds to want to." And that is why old Zack is now Secretary of the Interior.

EX-SENATOR Sprague, of Rhode Island, is an inflationist of the first water. His political foresight, business tact and qualifications, and great statesmanship, make him a great acquisition to the greenback ranks; or would if he had not long ago lost, with his wealth, both that position and influence which supplemented his lack of brains and made him a valuable political leader.

CONTRARY to Republican predictions the Oregon election, held on Monday last, resulted in the election of Lane, Democrat, to Congress, vice LaDow, deceased.

At the recent election in Colorado for member of a Constitutional Convention the Democrats let all go by default and the Republicans are unnecessarily jubilant. A Democratic victory would only, it was feared, keep Colorado from being admitted as a State.

THE New York Evening Post makes a serious blunder in its brief item (see issue of the 22d) concerning the recent decision of the Supreme Court of this State, holding the liquor tax law constitutional. The Post says: "There is a prohibitory law in the State, but it has been long a dead letter, and its only effect is to render contracts for the sale of liquor in the State void." There was a prohibitory liquor law, which was a "dead letter," but it was repealed by the tax act just held constitutional. The constitutional clause which was relied upon by the opponents of the tax law and under which they sought to have it held void, simply prohibits the enactment of any law "authorizing the grant of license for the sale of ardent spirits or other intoxicating liquors." The court hold that this clause does not prohibit the sale; that without a statute of prohibition the traffic is as legal as any other business; and that the tax is in no way a license, but is legitimately imposed and for legitimate purposes.

ELECTIONS are to be held on Tuesday next, November 2d, in Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Mississippi. In all the States, except New York and Mississippi, Governors are to be elected. State officers are to be elected in New York and members of Congress in Mississippi; Legislatures in all the States. The greatest interest centers on Massachusetts, New York, and Pennsylvania. In the former State the Republicans hope to beat Gaston; in New York the canal policy of Tilden is on trial; and in Pennsylvania the Democrats are weighted by a heavy financial plank. We predict a Democratic majority of 75,000 in New York, the re election of Gaston in Massachusetts, and a close shave in Pennsylvania.

BEFORE the Detroit Tribune takes any great amount of stock in the proposition of the Board of Auditors of Wayne County to repudiate the action of the Board of Supervisors in redistricting the county, it will do well to put on its corporate or editorial specs, we don't care which, and read the following extract from the Constitution, art. IV., sect. 3: "In every county entitled to more than one Representative, the board of supervisors shall assemble at such time and place as the Legislature shall prescribe, and divide the same into representative districts, equal to the number of Representatives to which each county is entitled," etc. The legislative acts the Tribune cites can scarcely nullify so plain a provision, and the Legislature certainly did not mean to so stultify itself as to give the Auditors jurisdiction or duties assigned by the Constitution to the Supervisors.

THOMPSON (with a p), or Alderman Thompson, was nominated for Mayor by the Republicans of Detroit, on Thursday afternoon of last week. He is the leader of that portion of the Council who has persistently attempted to give the saloons a legal right to dispense drinks on Sunday afternoon and evening, and who declared that "the must enjoyment "he took on a beautiful Sabbath day "was to sit of an afternoon out in God's "free air, under God's green trees, "drinking his (God's) glasses of lager "beer," a personal right no one will choose to deny him, differing altogether from the right or privilege of running a saloon and dispensing intoxicating drinks during the hours of Sunday when all other branches of branches of business are closed by both custom and law. We fail to see anything in the nature of the saloon business entitling it to special privileges. In fact all, saloons, if allowed or licensed to do business six days in the week, should be hermetically sealed on Sunday, for the protection of young and old who through idleness may be the more easily led into temptation on that day than on any other.

—A very large meeting was held at the Opera House on Monday evening, composed mostly of leading Republicans, and resolutions adopted repudiating Thompson and pledging support to Lewis, the Democratic candidate. The Post and Tribune also both support Lewis. The issue being what it is, Detroit will be disgraced by the election of Thompson.

EX-SECRETARY McCulloch asks these pertinent questions: "Does any sane man suppose if the circulation of legal tender notes were increased, as some are desirous that it should be, to two thousand millions, that there would be any more real money in the country by reason of the increase? Suppose Congress should change our standard of measure and enact that 30 pounds instead of 60 pounds should be a bushel of wheat—would wheat thereby be advanced in value, or would the farmer get any more for his crops than he would get under the old measure? Is a man any richer by having $100 of the legal tender notes in his pocket than he would be if he had $85 in gold?" Let every advocate of inflation, that is every advocate of making an unlimited issue of promises to pay, mere notes of hand, substitutes for money, and even legal tenders, answer these questions, and then spout inflationism if he can.

THE New York Evening Post doesn't take kindly to the appointment of Mr. Chandler to be Secretary of the Interior. Before his acceptance was announced it said: "The country is at the mercy of ex-Senator Chandler. That is to say, it is for him to decide whether the country shall suffer the annoyance and reproach of his entry into the Cabinet. There was a time when the tender of a portfolio to Mr. Chandler would have occasioned wide excitement rnd lively indignation. It is a curious illustration of the low tone of the federal administration, so far as its appointments are concerned, as well as proof of the popular despair of its immediate elevation, that the report of the President's choice provokes so little remark. It would be easy to show why Chandler is unfit for Secretary of the Interior, but we shall not undertake to do so for several reasons—among others, because any information upon that subject would fail to influence the President. We prefer to appeal directly to Chandler and beg him to spare the country by declining the appointment." The Post appealed in vain. The ex-Senator has a hankering after office, and the opportunity was not to be let slip.

Board met pursuant to adjournment. Called to order by the chairman. Roll called; present a quorum. Journal of yesterday read and approved.

Mr. Robison, from the committee to whom was referred the matter of purchasing the surveyor's field notes, made the following report:

Your committee to whom was referred the question of purchasing or of approving of the purchase of certain minutes of surveys, diagrams, etc., beg leave to make the following report. The statute requires each county surveyor to record in a suitable book to be provided by him at the expense of the county, all surveys made by him or his deputy. The law also requires each surveyor to deliver to his successor all books and papers belonging to his office. Your committee find that no record of surveys, or book of diagrams belonging to the county, is now, or has been, in the hands of the county surveyor. Therefore your committee think the proposed purchase of certain minutes of surveys, etc, at this time unwise.

Board met pursuant to adjournment. Called to order by the chairman. Roll called; present a quorm.

Journal of yesterday read and approved.

Mr. Pierce presented a petition from the citizens of Chelsea and vicinity, as follows:

To the Board of Supervisors of the County of Washtenaw, in session assembled:

The undersigned resident tax-payers of the said county, respectfully represent that they are well acquainted with John Beam, a resident of the township of Sylvan, in said county; that they are well acquainted with his circumstances financially, and know that his property is considerably encumbered with mortgages.

Your petitioners would further represent that said Beam is a cripple and unable to work upon his farm, and that he is quite an old man and that if he is required to pay the judgments in full which have been rendered against him and Thomas Wilkinson, in the Circuit Court for said county, as bondsmen of one Leroy G. Beam, he will undoubtedly lose his entire farm and be without support of any kind.

Your petitioners would therefore ask your honorable body to remit all of said judgment except a sufficient amount to cover the actual costs which said county have expended in and about the suit against said Leroy G. Beam.

G. J. Crowell, Reuben Kempf, Chancy Howell, Christian Weber, Adam Kalembach, M. J. Knapp, Geo. S. Glazier, Thos. Jewett, W. E. Depew, P. C. Depew, A. Blackney, Gabriel Freer, A. M. Freer, A. L. McLean, Charles Canfield, James Gilbert, A. Burkhardt, G. H. Coleman, A. N. Morton, James R. Wood, M. M. Boyd, Isaac Taylor, H. L. Wood, J. M. Buchard, David Thomas, William Warner, J. Edwin States, Michael Foster, George Mitchell, and Fred'k Wedemeyer.

Mr. Pierce asked that Mr. Frazer be asked to explain if the Board has power to remit said judgment, in accordance with the prayer of the petitioners. The matter being referred to Mr. Frazer, Prosecuting Attorney, he asked further time to investigate the matter.

To the Honorable Board of Supervisors of Washtenaw County:

Your committee to examine the accounts of the Superintendents of the Poor would respectfully report that they have examined said accounts and compared them with the report made by said Superintendents and find them correct. We find the books and papers in plain and orderly shape, carefully tooted, well arranged, and easily understood. We examined somewhat particularly the prices paid for goods and supplies used in the County House, especially tobacco, and believe them to be fair and reasonable. We also examined as far as practicable many of the articles used there, and they appeared to us worth the price paid. All of which is respectfully submitted.

— If the new Chief of Police is to be a "terror to evil doers," in the language of the Evening News reporter (himself), there should be no such ill-mannered and rowdy gatherings as that in front of the Opera House last Saturday evening, blocking up the sidewalks and entrance, and bandying rude jokes as ladies elbowed their way through.

— Dr. Rexford, of Ypsilanti, was re-elected Superintendent of the Poor on Friday last, by a vote of 13 to 11 for Aaron Feldkamp, a sturdy farmer of Saline, who received the Democratic vote plus that of Supervisor Krapf of this city. The "independent" member, Mr. Leitch, of Ypsilanti, voted for Mr. Rexford. Mr. Feldcamp's election would have been a credit to the Democrats, and would have gratified his large number of German fellow-citizens and friends, but the Republican members were not ready for the new deal for which they were so extremely anxious last year.

—On the evening of the 19th inst. the barn of Mrs. Stellwagen, at or near Wayne, was fired by an incendiary tramp, who during the confusion entered the house and stole about $4,000 in money besides some jewelry. A little later the same tramp, probably, was detected in an attempt to fire the Junction Hotel, owned by Philip Stellwagen, pursued, and captured. He was saved from hanging by the intercession of Mr. Stellwagen, and after examination committed to jail in Detroit. He proves to be the man who fired the barn of Jacob April, in Scio, the night before, Mr. April having identified some silver coin found in his possession as that stolen from him, and also the man as having been hanging around his premises before the fire.

— After an absence of over five years from his "native land," Mr. J. B. Steere, of the class of 1868, during which he has visited almost every known and unknown land, reached this city on Thursday evening last, and has since been the guest of R. A. Beal. Mr. Steere says that during his entire absence the first familiar or known face he saw was that of Charlie Kintner, whom he met after leaving Detroit for Ann Arbor. Mr. Steere's enthusiasm as a naturalist made him persevere under every obstacle.

— A Sunday School meeting or institute is to commence its session at the M. E. Church in this city to-morrow evening and continue during Sunday, conducted by Rev. J. B. Atchinson, Detroit Conference Sunday School Agent, assisted by Rev. W. J. McCune, H. Hitchcock, Esq., and M. A. Billings. Saturday evening there will be "conversation" and a review of Sunday's lesson; Sunday morning, an address by the pastor; at 3 P. M., children's meeting; in the evening Praise service. An invitation to attend is extended to the public.

— Just before the hour of 11 o'clock Tuesday evenin, Pohcemang Johnson discovered smoke issuing from the front third story window over Watts' jewelry store, and immediately gave the alarm to night-watchman Clark. Investigation developed the fact that a fire had been kindled, it is supposed purposely, under a lounge which was burning lively. The wind was blowing strong and in a brief space longer a destructive fire would have been started, the store being in the center of one of the main business blocks of the city. The room was occupied by a colored woman, cook at the Leonard House. There ought to be a close investigation of the circumstances of the fire and the guilty party brought to justice.

At a recent meeting of the Young People's Association of the Presbyterian Church, the following officers were elected for the ensuing six months: President, Don. A. Matthews; 1st Vice President, D. J. Higley; 2d Vice President, Miss Mollie Markham; Secretary, Miss Eliza Ladd; Treasurer, W. J. Warner. This association has just completed its second year, and during that time has been a means of much good among the young people of the church and congregation. Two prayer meetings weekly are sustained; one on Sunday evening in the lecture room of the church; the other, a cottage meeting, on Saturday evening in different parts of the city. Social entertainments of a varied nature, affording much interest, are also held at stated intervals.

—The Courier last week commended the report of the Superintendents of the Poor, as being nearly as the law intends it should be made, and adds: "Superintendent Rexford said at the close of his report that, if any one wished to ask questions, or were not satisfied, he should like to hear from them. No one responded. All seemed satisfied. This honest, straightforward, upright conduct will secure his re-nomination at some future day." At the risk of making the Courier crawfish (now that Mr. Rexford hrs been re-elected) we rise to remark that that report was made and read by Supt. Duffy, and that Mr. Rexford simply reviewed some points in answer to a call for explanations. The Courier should give credit where credit is due.

A small but appreciative audience gathered at the Opera House on Saturday evening last, to hear Mrs. Ann Eliza Young, the 19th fractional wife of Brigham Young. If any went to hear something either of the sensational or Woodhull type they were terribly disappointed. Mrs. Young bore herself like a modest and unassuming lady, put on no tragic airs either in manner or speech, but told a plain unvarnished tale in a natural and unaffected manner. She had something to say, something from the heart, something pulsating with life and earnestness, in which she differed from many lecturers who talk to fill an hour or two for which they are enormously overpaid. The story of her life could not be told without laying bare the damning enormities of polgamous mormonism, and it is safe to say that she won the sympathy and respect of every hearer, with their best wishes for her speedy success in laying the exact root of the ax at the root of the foul tree. Her closing appeal was very effective.

Prof. J. C. Watson gave the opening lecture in the course of the Students' Lecture Association, on Friday evening last, in University Hall. The audience was the largest ever convened in the hall since the opening exercises,—Commencement days not excepted, and numbered full 3,000 people. The subject chosen for the evening was "China and Japan," and in the discussion the speaker treated of country and climate and people, as seen. experienced, and viewed by him during his recent journeyings therein. He also narrated briefly his observations in other lands, India, Egypt, Palestine, etc. The lecture was interesting in its matter, and gave evidence that the Professor kept his eyes open wherever he was. We cannot give even a brief synopsis of his talk. One incident we refer to merely to show the arbitrary character of Chinese rule: When Prof. W. discovered his new planet, while waiting the transit of Venus, he was requested by the royal astronomical board to transmit intelligence of the discovery to the Emperor through them, before publishing it to the world, as otherwise they might lose their heads. It would not do for a barbarian to come into his majesty's realms and accomplish what his own astronomers could not. To the transit was also attributed the small pox, of which the Emperor fortunately did not die until after Prof. W. and party had gotten safely out of China.

ACCIDENT.—On Wednesday evening, about 7 o'clock, as Mr. Thomas Dolan, of the township of Dexter, was leaving the village, it being quite dark, he drove his team off the embankment opposite Evarts & Co.'s mill, and the vehicle was overturned His daughter, Miss Rosa Dolan, and Miss Coffield, were with him, and were both considerably injured by being thrown out. Mr. Dolan was only slightly injured. The horses were steady animals and did not run away, which prevented further damage.—Dexter Leader.

SOME QUINCES.—R. G. Smith, nurseryman of this city, has shown us a quince limb ten inches long, having on it seven large and well-ripened quinces, weighing 3 1-2 pounds. He says if anybody can beat it he will leave for Canada at once. Now is the time for growers to get rid of a troublesome competition.

The Senior class of the Literary department challenged the Laws to a game of base ball on Saturday morning last, but failed to put in an appearance.

"A Plea for Cheerfulness," was well received by an audience of one thousand people, at University Hall, on Wednesday evening, from James T. Fields.

The doctors are getting an abundant supply of cataracts to operate one at clinics. Three patients out of four are thus afflicted, and two of them are old ladies of seventy or thereabouts.

A game of base ball was started between the Pharmics and Laws on Saturday, but at the end of the fourth innings the latter withdrew from the field; for they were getting badly beaten. The score stood 27 to 4.

One of the most interesting games of base ball during the season, was played on the Campus last Friday between the University nine and the Unas of Kalamazoo. The game was won by the University club by a score of 5 to 2.

Season tickets for the remaining eleven entertainments before the Students' Lecture Association will cost $3.25 each. If any entertainment fails to come off, twenty-five cents will be refunded to the holder of such ticket. These tickets may be had at the bookstores.

A class of Juniors petitioned Prof. Adams on Friday last to dismiss them that they might enjoy the game of base ball then in progress. He said he thought it a good joke and must treat it as such; but as genuine wit flashes forth but once he hoped never to hear this repeated.

The Senior "Pharmics" elected the following officers on Thursday last: President, Joseph H. Ames; Vice-president, John R. Little Secretary, Henry B. Parsons; Treasurer, Chas. A. Dingley; Marshal, Lyman Beach; Orator, Monroe U. Green; Poet, ——Bower; Toast Master, James N. Buckland; Seer, Louis C. Fuller.

The Senior class in law held its third meeting on Thursday last, for the selection of their officers. There was a fine prospect for a time, for a grand hubbub, but order spread her wings over the assembly at length and after a three hours contest, a president was chosen. The other officers were more rapidly voted. The following shows the result: President, Moses P. Kinkaid; first Vice-President, Frank S. Jennings; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Mary E. Foster, Corresponding Secretary, Levi D. Haggerty; Treasurer, John A. Phillip.

The People Want Proof.

There is no medicine prescribed by Physicians or sold by Druggists, that carries such evidence of its success and virtue as BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP for Severe Coughs, Colds settled on the Breast, Consumption, or any disease of the Throat and Lungs, a proof of that fact is that any person afflicted can get a Sample Bottle for 10 cents and try its superior effect before buying the regular size at 75 cents. It has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wonderful cures are astonishing to everyone that use it. Three doses will relieve any case. Try it. Sold by Eberbach & Co.

Correspondence of the Argus.

ON BOARD THE BOLIVIA,
ANCHOR LINE, OCT. 4, 1875.

MY DEAR EDITORS—It is not always easy to write legibly on ship board and yet I feel conscious that unless I begin my memoranda of travel before landing I may not be able to give you, and those who may perchance wish to hear from us, any early notice of our transit across "the Deep."

We came aboard the steamer at New York about 12 o'clock Saturday the 25th ult., accompanied by kind friends to see us off, and two hours passed swiftly by, in the conversation natural to the occasion and the circumstances surrounding us. The ringing bell and notice of the fact that in five minutes the steamer would leave the dock caused a sudden exchange of hand-shakings, kisses, and kindly wishes, and the separation was partly effected. But it is ever a most interesting sight to see the crowd of friendly up-turned faces on the wharf, and to hear the pleasant interchange of cheerful jest during the few brief moments ere yet the vessel glides silently away amid the flutter of kerchiefs from deck and shore. As long as the eye can distinguish the crowd the white signals of friendship are waving till at last we turn reluctantly, almost sadly, away, and we are under way.

Americans leaving New York for foreign lands have the proud satisfaction of beholding, as it recedes in the distance, the most magnificent bay and harbor combined in the world. Others may be as beautiful by nature, some may be as busy, and a few may claim the vicinity of even as large a city, but New York and its surroundings combines all these features in an unusual degree.

In the first day there was little to disturb the somewhat sober feelings induced by these farewells to friends and native land; though after nightfall we fortunately fell in with the Ethiopia, a sister steamer of the Anchor line, which had met with an accident to her machinery in mid ocean, and instead of reaching New York in ten or eleven days had been crawling at a snail's pace, with the aid of sails, for 21 days. Our steamer answered her signals for fresh provisions, and stood by her back to Sandy Hook, and there with parting rockets and two guns bade her good-by. This friendly act caused the loss of five hours time to us, but must have been very cheering to the many passengers imprisoned on the Ethiopia. With the above exception scarcely aught has occurred to vary the usual routine of an ocean voyage, but fortunately we have a very agreeable lot of passengers in the cabin, 36 in all, of whom six only are ladies. Of the 100 in the steerage we scarcely see anything. We have more of Scotch and English than of all others together. Fifteen of the total are a party who have together made a a tour from Glasgow to New York, Washington, Philadelphia, the oil regions, Niagara, Toronto, Montreal, Boston, and New York again, at a charge per ticket of £50, including all expense of passage and of hotels and railroad fares, occupying fourteen days on land. The trip was very brief, yet they were all business men, and comparatively young, and at a small expense have added much to their stock of experience. They seem well pleased with their trip, but all still prefer their own misty land of perennial fogs and rains. One young Miss is returning alone from California to her home at Stockholm, Sweden. A young wife and child are returning from a visit to her home, Chicago, to Glasgow, her adopted home. Two gentlemen from Illinois are going to France to purchase blooded horses in Normandy. An old Scotchman of 62 has been to St. Louis to assist his older bachelor brother of 73 to close up a successful business of forty years duration, and is returning with the latter, now quite feeble, to his "native heath" to die. One man of perhaps 45, born in Scotland, has for many years had his home in the States, but within a year has placed an only daughter, and soon after the wife of his bosom, beneath the cold clods of our great valley, and is now seeking rest and hope for a broken heart among the loved highlands of his youth: may it not be in vain, We have lawyers, doctors, merchants, students, idlers and mere travelers in our number, and it is this variety brought into a ten days intimate fellowship which assists so much to enliven the time. Playing at shoveboard and quoits on deck, and cards, draughts, and other games within, reading, singing, writing, and conversation, promenading on the main and hurricane decks, watching the posphorescent sea and filling up our diaries are intermingled according to inclination, and these with eating and sleeping rapidly consume the hours, so that there is no tediousness incurred.

Here is our eating programme: At 7 A. M. a plate of porridge is served at our state-rooms; at 8 1-2, breakfast with a great variety of dishes; at 12 lunch with cold meat and sweet potatoes baked; at 4 P. M., regular dinner, and at 8 supper. Very little wine is drunk on this line or at least on this steamer, nor, I should perhaps say, is Scotch whisky substituted.

Our progress has been very good indeed, from 285 to 306 miles per day, and we are to see land to-morrow morning, and reach Glasgow Tuesday night.

OCT. 5.—Sure enough, land was seen early this morning, Tory island off the northwest corner of Ireland. Soon afterward the mainland, with the Donegal mountains in the background, began to come into view, and presented bold, rocky headlands quite barren for the most part, with occasional gentler slopes dotted here and there, with small cottages and pasture lands, until the fine old ruins of Greencastle came in sight, with the really beautiful panorama of highway and hedge, farm land and cottages stretching far upward and back from the shore, extending southward as we proceeded into Loch Foyle to land passengers and baggage at the neat little bathing resort of Moville. By our entrance into this Loch we fortunately escaped the only real squall of wind that has shown itself during the voyage—the weather having been uniform and steady for the most part, with a good breeze and not too cold, with the exception of one day.

After parting with Mr. Day, an Irish gentleman from Sligo, who had become an universal favorite by his genial humor and easy affability, we returned to the ocean world again, and rounding the point opposite Greencastle in about an hour afterward, passed in fair view of the Giant's Causeway at a distance of about two miles or less. The basaltic columnar structure could be easily seen, and occasionally isolated portions made its peculiar formation still more distinct, but on the whole the view was not quite what we had anticipated. The headland formed by the Causeway is so uniformly abrupt and solid—the top so level, unbroken, and extensive, that our general and somewhat distant view was doubtless less satisfactory than a closer inspection would have given. But to-day it would have been quite impossible to have passed along their front in the small boats used for the purpose, or to have penetrated any of the caverns—so we got the best view the occasion admitted and are content.

The dashing surf and spray along the "rock bound coast" was really magnificent, and as we near our first port we feel that for a really enjoyable trip across the Atlantic we have the utmost reason for thankfulness. As we proceed, passing Rathlin Island and Ballycastle, we enter the North Channel and our course is southward, rounding the Moll of Cantire on the Scottish side, we go northward into and up the Firth of Clyde, passing Ainsly Crag, 1,000 feet high, and rapidly near Glasgow. But this must suffice for a first report, and it may be several days before I can resume the tale.

We do not intend now to stop at Glasgow, but may remain at Edinburgh until Saturday, and then on again, to Copenhagen and Hamburg; and now to you and your readers, our friends, a short good-bye. J. M. W.

METEOROLOGISTS note the fact that the past summer was cooler by five degrees than the average seasons for eighty years.

THE yield of precious metals in the United States, which has for some time fluctuated from $60,000,000 to $70,000,000 per year, will, it is estimated, in 1875 aggregate very nearly $100,000,000.

WE read in an Eastern paper that two men near Troy have averaged $400 a month during the past summer, catching frogs and selling them in the New York market at 30 cents a pound. And it hasn't been a good season for frogs either.

JOHN J. GEGHAN, the author of the famous "Geghan bill" that passed the last Ohio Legislature, and the man who was responsible for the introduction of the religious issue into the late canvass, was defeated for a re-election, receiving the lowest vote of any candidate on the Democratic ticket in Cincinnati.

IT is stated that Jewell and Bristow both strenuously opposed the appointment of Mr. Chandler as Secretary of the Interior, and some Washington correspondents are predicting that there will be trouble between Bristow and Chandler, as both are bluff, headstrong men who like to have their own way.

THE overworked bakers of New York clamor for less work and more pay. They allege that they are compelled to work eighteen hours daily, with no respite on the Sabbath, for which they receive on an average but $11 per week. At some establishments they are paid $6 per week, with board—two meals a day, mainly of bread and coffee.

HERE is a warning to artists. A painting on exhibition in the hall of the House of Representatives at Washington, which the Appropriation Committee was recommended to purchase, and representing "Abraham Lincoln's First Earnings," has been mutilated by some vandal who cut out of the canvas the representation of a silver half dollar in Uncle Abe's hand.

H. S. HOWE, a citizen of Chicago, who had refused to put his fare in the box of a bob-tail car, or to pay it except to an authorized conductor, was ejected by a special policeman, and charged with disorderly conduct, in that his refusal to pay fare was a breach of the peace. Mr. Howe was acquitted, and now several counter-suits are to be instituted against the street-car company.

SENATOR HAMLIN, of Maine, explains now that the newspapers were included in the increase under the Postal law for which he stood sponsor, "by inadvertence." In other words, the Senator was in so great haste to oblige his clients, the opponents of cheap postage, that he hadn't time to see how the change they wanted would affect the public. The Senator proposes to have the law amended when Congress meets, but he hardly need trouble himself. The matter will be promptly attended to, whether he takes any action or not.

MR. CHARLES COLLINS, editor of the Sioux City Times, in a letter to his paper from Washington, says there is no doubt that a general Indian war will be inaugurated this fall. The Indians, he states, are generally dissatisfied with the way the Black Hills treaty terminated, and it is a matter of regret with them that they did not commence then by killing the Commissioners. Mr. Collins says Gen. Crook, commander of the Department of the Platte, has for some time been preparing for a conflict with the Indians, and will be ready when the necessity arises.

THE Indians of the Creek Nation are taking steps to rid themselves of the worthless and rascally pale-faces who have taken up their abode in that country. Through their National Council they have enacted a law forbidding citizens of the nation, under penalty of $300 fine, to give employment to emigrants from the States. The class of people seeking a temporary hiding place, from the surrounding States, to avoid arrest from the authories in those States, has long been a matter of complaint to the Creeks, and it is supposed they will be obliged to leave if they are not allowed to work for their board, as many have done heretofore, for a few days in a place, then steal a horse and leave.

A LIVELY battle between college boys and Odd Fellows—who proved themselves to be fighting fellows as well—occurred at New Haven, Ct., the other day. A procession of the order was marching by the classic precincts of Yale, when the students, moved by a spirit of devilry, commenced pelting them with stones. The Odds retaliated by charging upon the collegians with drawn swords, which they used to some effect, as we are told that several of the students were wounded. The latter, who have been accustomed to riding rough-shod over everybody and everything, were somewhat astonished at the vigorous manner in which the members of the mystic order met and repelled their attack. It is hoped the youngsters will profit by the lesson taught them.

THOSE fast railway trains bowling over the country at almost lightning speed are very nice things to look upon, and very nice things to travel on for people who have a fancy for rapid traveling; but there is danger in them, nevertheless. This mile-a minute travel will be the death of somebody yet, an affirmation which finds ample corroboration in the hair-breadth escape which a directors' train on the New York Central had the other day. The train referred to was made up of a locomotive and palace car, the latter containing William H. Vanderbilt and several other railroad magnates. At one of the stations on the road one of the switches had been inadvertently left open and they were thrown over to the branch. At the extravagant rate at which they were going it was impossible to remedy the mistake or slacken the speed, and it was almost a miracle that they were not thrown from the track and dashed to pieces. The only thing that saved them from such a fate was the fortunate fact that at the other end of the branch the switch, although open, was supplied with a patent self-adjusting arrangement calculated to set the switch in an emergency. Although considered unreliable, often failing to work satisfactorily, in this instance it did its duty well. As the train struck the switch it was lifted to the main track and the danger escaped. The concussion ejected all the passengers in the coach from their chairs, barking shins and smashing decanters, dishes, etc., but occasioning no serious injuries. Had the switch been such as are in common use on the line, or had the patent "frog" failed to operate, the result would certainly have been most disastrous.

GEN. SOL. Denver, Col., is reveling in a first-class sensation. The people of that city were horrified a few days ago, at the discovery of the mangled bodies of four persons in the cellar of a building, their throats cut from ear to ear. The bodies were those of an old Italian, his two sons and a nephew, and they had evidently been murdered some days. The whole matter is involved in a deep mystery.... A young German, Fritz Kaiser, committed suicide, in Chicago, the other day, by jumping from the top of the water-works tower, a distance of 187 feet.

THE election of a Bishop for the diocese of Iowa is yet in an unsettled condition. It was at one time thought that Dr. Eccleston was to be chosen, as a number of Standing Committees had voted in his favor; but new the delegates from seventeen of the thirty-three parishes in Iowa solemnly protest against the election of Dr. Eccleston, stating that upon the sixteenth ballot in the Cedar Rapids Convention they voted for Dr. Knickerbocker. For the present, therefore, Iowa will be without a Bishop.

ELMER WASHBURN, Chief of the United States Detective Service Bureau, has succeeded in breaking up a formidable band of counterfeiters whose headquarters were at Centralia, Ill. Six boxes of the queer were unearthed in the woods, aggregating some $150,000 in fifty-cent fractional currency and $5 national bank notes, and $1,000 in $50 national bank notes. The $5 notes were on the Traders' National Bank of Chicago, First National Banks of Peru and Aurora, and the Paxton and Canton National Banks of Illinois. Several of the counterfeiters were arrested. The St. Louis Journal, of a recent date, says that the great bridge across the Mississippi at that place, from which the people expected so much in breaking down oppressive monopolies, is not only a grinding monopoly itself, but is in league with other great monopolies for oppressing the people. Recently the Bridge Company refused to give permission to the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Company to cross the bridge with their wires. The telegraph company, however, believing themselves right, laid their wires, which were torn town by the bridge monopolists, and the Journal thinks the Bridge Company is working in the interests of the Western Union Telegraph Company to prevent cheaper telegraph rates.

HALF a dozen failures are reported in New York, on Saturday of last week, the principal one being Hoffman & Co., dry goods dealers, liabilities amounting to $200,000. The Ames Plow Company, at Chickopee, Mass., and Robert Tilton, woolen manufacturer, of Cavendish, Vt., have also suspended, the liabilities of the former being $218,247 and the latter $140,000. The extent of the destruction on land and sea caused by the recent storms in England and Scotland is even now but partially known, though the latest advices tell a fearful tale of flood and shipwreck. The floods in Lincoln county, England, are the most destructive known for years, the River Trent having overflowed its banks, washing away the railroad at that point and doing much other damage. Nineteen lives are known to have been lost by inundation at Nottingham and other towns in the Valley of the Trent, and it is feared that the worst has not been told. Over fifty lives were lost on the Scottish coast.

Free Versus Slave Labor.

George W. Adair, of Atlanta, says: "Before the war I kept four negroes on my lot—Wash., a man-of all-work, valued at $1,500; Sarah, a No. 1 cook, $1,400; Harriet, a house-girl, $1,200; and Nancy, a nurse, $900. The legal interest (seven per cent.) on the value of these slaves was $350 per annum, and I had to feed, clothe, pay doctors' bills, etc. Now I have the same service performed at $300 per annum. I feed these hired servants, but furnish no clothing nor pay doctors' bills, and get the same service per month for less than when I owned slaves, and if they die I lose nothing. Now, when I acquire my capital I can put it in other property, instead of locking it up in slaves. This, I think, illustrates the whole question. The landowner can avail himself of negro labor to-day at less cost than when he had to pay for the slave and take care of him. This labor cannot be controlled so absolutely as slave labor, and more or less irregularities grow out of it; still it is available and susceptible of being used to great profit by the landowner. Planters who owned slaves, who now remain upon their land and give personal attention to their crops, can make more clear money from the soil than under the old system. The South is becoming every year more familiar with free labor, and understands better how to manage it. She is becoming more self-reliant and self-sustaining."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

EARTHQUAKES.

A Scientific Theory of their Cause—Some Interesting Facts About the Phenomena.

The Popular Science Monthly for October has an interesting and instructive paper on the phenomena of earthquakes, and the causes that produce them, from the pen of Prof. John J. Lake. The origin of earthquakes, says Mr. Lake, has been assigned to many causes, as the falling in of caverns, steam, the combustion of gases, volcanic and electric action.

Great subterranean noises and reports resembling thunder constitute the first features to be noticed concerning earthquakes. Father Kircher describes them as "a horrid sound resembling that of an infinite number of chariots driven fiercely forward, the wheels rattling, and the thongs of the whips cracking." At Colares, near Lisbon, in 1755 the sound of an earthquake is said to have been like "that of chariots, which increased till it equaled the roar of cannon." At Lisbon it resembled "a rattling of coaches in the street, with a frightful noise underground, resembling the rumbling of distant thunder." Various earthquakes have been said to resemble in sound empty carriages and the rolling of heavy vehicles.

A second feature of these phenomena is the upheaving of the ground during their prevalence, which is one cause of the sea retiring. During the great earthquake at Lisbon the bar at the mouth of the Tagus was laid bare. Other results of the upward movement were observed elsewhere. The water in a pond at Dunstal, in Suffolk, was jerked into the form of a pyramid. At some places the water was tossed out of the wells. At Loch Lomond, in Scotland, a large stone was forced out of the water, and at Riobamba, South America, on the 5th of January, 1797, the bodies of many of the inhabitants were thrown by this vertical action upon the hill of La Cullca, which is several hundred feet high on the opposite side of the river.

A third peculiarity is the frequent horizontal and circular motion of the soil walls that had served to divide fields have been completely changed in direction, but without having been shattered or overthrown. Houses have also exchanged situations with each other.

It has been observed that clouds have become fixed or suspended over particular spots affected, or about to be affected, by earthquake, as in London in 1149.

Explosions of great violence frequently attend these convulsions, often with disastrous results. When Millitello was destroyed there was a great explosion heard in the fog that enveloped it. A similar explosion was heard in 1783, at Castel Nuovo, in Calabria, when that place was overwhelmed.

A further peculiarity is the exemption of certain spots, although the shocks were felt at all the surrounding neighborhood. Thus at Manchester, in 1777, St. Paul's Church and the Dissenting Chapel escaped.

Earthquakes are very frequently attended by thunder and lightning. At Munster, in 1612, thunder and lightning were heavy during an earthquake; and in Sicily, in 1693, it caused very great mischief. This conjunction of lightning with earthquake was noticed by Luke Howard, and constitutes what he designates "spurious earthquake." Peculiar rushing noises have also at times been perceived. These convulsions are attended by the disturbance of the magnetic needle, and compasses on board ship are for a long time useless.

The theory of the falling in of caverns being the cause of these phenomena cannot be maintained, and the hypothesis that they are caused by steam or the explosion of confined gases has scarcely a better foundation. The volcanic and igneous theory is not so easily to be disposed of, for it appears very clear that volcanic eruptions do produce earthquakes. Volcanoes produce these disturbances in two ways: 1. By their own direct motion. 2. By disturbing the electric equilibrium in their neighborhood. By far the most prominent agent seems to be electricity, and the Italians, who suffer so much from these calamities, consider it to be the only cause. On the 10th of January the castle of Augusta was blown up by the lightning firing the powder-magazine. At Minco, on the 11th, the shock was attended by "a mighty storm of lightning, thunder and hail that lasted six hours." The Archbishop's palace at Montreal was set on fire by the lightning. Ætna emitted great noises, flames and ashes during the shocks that overthrew Catania, but there does not appear to have been eruption. Furla, situated among limestone quarries, disappeared, and at several parts of the hill the rocks, which were previously almost as white as Geneva marble, had changed, and in the clefts made by the earthquake had become of a burnt color, as if fire and powder had been employed to rend them asunder. Millitello seems to have been destroyed before the 11th of January, for the country people, who dwelt on the neighboring ridge of mountains, affirmed that it was not to be seen on the morning of that day, to which time, from 12 o'clock on the 8th, it had been concealed in a thick fog. During the interval the mountain that lay on the north side of town had been split asunder—one portion overwhelming Millitello, so that not an inhabitant escaped. Francofonte, built chiefly of wood, escaped with little damage from the shocks, but was fired by lightning; the spire of the church—wood covered with lead—burnt down, and the nunnery of the Carmelites entirely destroyed so suddenly that five of the nuns were stiffed in their beds. The largest part of the inhabitants of Luochela escaped by flying from the town on the sudden disappearance of the castle, situated on rising ground. Ragusa experienced shocks on the 8th, with violent thunder and lightning. At Specufurno, on the 10th, "from morning till night there was never heard so violent a storm of thunder and lightning, as if heaven and earth had been mixing together;" the townhouse and several other houses were destroyed by it. The peasants on the neighboring hills observed that this lightning had burnt the vines so that no crop could be expected for the season.

A Wonderful Column.

A correspondent with Prof. Jenney's Black Hills expedition gives the following description of "Bear Lodge," one of the most remarkable natural formations in that land of wonders:

The most remarkable object seen by the members of the expedition during the entire summer, is Bear Lodge itself. Seen at a distance, it resembles in outline an Indian lodge; but, upon a nearer approach, it proves to be a column of gray porphyry, that resembles granite in every particular, excepting the absence of mica. The column is composed of seventy-six smaller columns, that stand close together, as if quarried and carefully set upon its milk-white clay pedestal by a hand as strong and mighty as Jove's. The clay pedestal is about 1,500 feet in the diameter of its base, and rises 500 feet above the waters of the Belle Fourche, on the west bank of which it stands. Its sides slope with a handsomely-rounded curve that corresponds well with the broad base of the column that rests upon it. This column of rock, or rather this many-columned column of rock, is 900 feet across the base and 300 feet across its top, and rears its head 1,126 feet above the level of the Belle Fourche river. The topographers determined the measurement by triangulation, as, owing to its smooth and steep sides, not even a mountain-sheep could have climbed it. Imagine this solitary column standing on the level plain, five miles from any elevation descerving the name, and it will be readily understood why the Indians call it the "Bare Lodge." Some of the Indians, however, say it means Bear Lodge, on account of the holes seen in the clay-pedestal, and the bear-tracks around its margin. Let this be as it may, I give such authority as I can find, and do not feel disposed to question its appropriateness; but upon one point all must agree, and that is the strangeness and the beauty of this natural pillar, that has stood a solitary watch over this distant plain for hundreds of centuries, braving a million wintry blasts, and defying the gnawing of seas, to be seen at last and admired by civilized mankind.

Honesty.

We have somehow learned to make a difference between those obligations which we owe to one another as men, and those which we owe to the government and to corporations. These ideas are not a whit more prevalent among office-holders and directors than they are among voters and stockholders. Men are not materially changed by being clothed with office and power. The radically honest man is just as honest in office as he is out of it. Corrupt men are the offspring of a corrupt society. We all need straightening up. The lines of our morality all need to be drawn tighter. There is not a man who is willing to smuggle, and to see customs officers betray their trust while he does it; willing to receive the results of the sharp practice of directors of corporations in which he has an interest; willing to receive the patronage of the government in the execution of schemes not based in absolute necessity; willing to take an exorbitant price for a piece of property sold to the government or to a corporation, who is fit to be trusted with office. When we have said this we have given the explanation of all our public and corporate corruption, and shown why it is so difficult to get any great trust managed honestly. All this official corruption is based on popular corruption—loose ideas of honesty as they are held by the popular mind; and we can hope for no reform until we are better based as a people in the everlasting principles of equity and right-doing. If we would have the stream clear we must cleanse the fountain.—Dr. J. G. Holland, in Scribner for November.

Big Salaries.

The raising of Beecher's salary to $100,000 a year gives him the largest compensation in the Union. But one salary in the world transcends it—that of the Viceroy of India, which is £50,000, or $250,000 a year, though it is possible the salary of Lord Dufferin, as Governor-General of Canada, is £30,000, or $150,000 a year. The ambassadors of Great Britain at Paris and Vienna receive but $50,000 a year. We are told that H. B. Claflin pays his "creditsman," formerly President of the Bank of North America, Mr. Donaldson, $100,000 a year on account of his unprecedented knowledge of credits. The firm do a business of $70,000,000 a year, and this business is entirely a credit one; therefore a skillful knowledge of the buyers, their standing and personal habits, is of more value than ten per cent. upon this amount—in other words, it is profitable to Claflin to pay less than two per cent. upon his sales to Mr. Donaldson. There are many salesmen in the leading houses in New York with salaries reaching as high as $30,000, while the leading journalist must content himself with $10,000.

The Boys' Room.

In Scribner for November, in the "Home and Society" department, we find the following:

"We wish especially to urge upon mothers the propriety of giving up to the boys, as soon as they reach the age of 12 or 14, one room (not a bedchamber), for whose (reasonably) good order they shall be responsible, and which they shall consider wholly their own. The floor should be uncarpeted, of oiled wood; the furniture of the same material. Let it be papered, curtained, decorated according to the boys' own fancy; if the taste is bad, they will be interested after a while in correcting it. There should be plain book-cases, a big solid table in the center, by all means an open fire, and room after that for Joe's printing press, or Charley's box of tools, or Sam's cabinet of minerals; for chess and checker-boards, or any other game which is deemed proper. To this room the boys should be allowed to invite their friends, and learn how to be hospitable hosts even to the extent of an innocent little feast now and then. Father, mother and sisters should refrain from entering it except as guests; and our word for it, they will be doubly honored and welcomed when they do come."

MR. ANDREW MILLER revives the old theory of Mr. Adhemar that the earth will topple over one of these days and send the oceans sweeping over the continents. The theory is that owing to the greater preponderance of water in the Southern Hemisphere the greatest accumulation of water is round the South Pole; when the accumulation has reached a certain point, the balance of the earth must be suddenly destroyed—the center of sphericity abruptly change far from the center of gravity, and the whole earth almost instantaneously must turn transversely on its axis, move the great oceans, and so produce one of those grand cataclysms which have before now altered the whole face of the globe.

WILHOFT'S FEVER AND AGUE TONIC.—This medicine is used by construction companies for the benefit of their employes, when engaged in malarial districts. The highest testimonials have been given by contractors and by the Presidents of some of the leading railroads in the South and West. When men are congregated in large numbers in the neighborhood of swamps and rivers, Wilhoft's Tonic will prove a valuable addition to the stock of medicines, and will amply reward the company in the saving of time, labor and money. We recommend it to all. WHEELOCK, FINLAY & CO., Proprietors, New Orleans.

1,500 per cent. profit was realized upon a "put" on 500 shares Mo. Pacific R. R. stock during the first week in October; then why go to the silver mines of Colorado or the gold mines of California, when you have a mine of greenbacks at home. A MISSIONARY, just returned, says he regards Johnson's Anodyne Liniment as beyond all price, and efficacious beyond any other medicine. It is adapted to a great variety of special cases, and is the best pain curer in the world.

THOUSANDS SPEAK.—Vegetine is recommended by physicians and apothecaries to be the best purifier and cleanser of the blood yet discovered, and thousands speak in its praise who have been restored to health.

FEVERS seldom make an attack without warning, and may often be thrown off by soaking the feet in warm water, wrapping up warm in bed, and taking two or three of Parsons' Purgative Pills.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED.

SCHENCK'S PULMONIC SYRUP,
SCHENCK'S SEA WEED TONIC,
SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS,

Are the only medicines that will cure Pulmonary Consumption.

Frequently medicines that will stop a cough will occasion the death of the patient; they lock up the liver, stop the circulation of the blood, hemorrhage follows, and, in fact, they clog the action of the very organs that caused the cough.

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia are the causes of two-thirds of the cases of Consumption. Many persons complain of a dull pain in the side, constipation, coated tongue, pain in the shoulder-blade, feelings of drowsiness and restlessness, the food lying heavily on the stomach, accompanied with acidity and belching up of wind.

These symptoms usually originate from a disordered condition of the stomach or a torpid liver.

Persons so affected, if they take one or two heavy colds, and if the cough in these cases be suddenly checked, will find the stomach and liver clogged, remaining torpid and inactive, and almost before they are aware the lungs are a mass of sores and ulcerated, the result of which is death.

Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup is an expectorant which does not contain opium or anything calculated to check a cough suddenly.

Schenck's Sea Weed Tonic dissolves the food, mixes with the gastric juices of the stomach, aids digestion, and creates a ravenous appetite.

When the bowels are costive, skin sallow, or the symptoms otherwise of a bilious tendency, Schenck's Mandrake Pills are required.

These medicines are prepared only by

The Biggest Bet of the Missouri State Fair.

Five thousand dollars against a two-thousand dollar wager was offered by the Proprietors of the Jilz Well Auger that it would bore a hole of the same size faster and easier than any other well auger on exhibition, and we learn that this is a standing offer for one year. Who will accept it? See their advertisement in another column.

THE SALES OF WEBSTER'S DICTIONARIES throughout the country in 1873 were 20 times as large as the sale of any other Dictionaries. One family of children having WEBSTER'S UNABRIDGED, and using it freely, and another not having it, the first will become much the most intelligent men and women. Ask your teacher or minister if it is not so, then buy the book and urge your children to use it freely.
