OFFICIALLY COUNTED.

The Exact Vote Cast in this County Last Week.

GRAND RATIFICATION MEETING SATURDAY

Gorman, Enright and Whitman to Speak. The New Jury Drawn—Why Two Hundred Votes Didn't Count, &c. &c.

Talking Over McKinley.

Son.—Papa, what did Mr. McKinley mean by saying before election, "My tariff bill speaks for itself." Did it really talk?

Father.—Yes, my son, it talked very loudly election day.

Son.—What did it say, papa?

Father.—It said, "The tariff is a tax." "A protective tariff is legalized robbery." "The tariff must be reformed on the lines of justice and a revenue basis." These are some of the things it said.

Son.—Will it keep on talking, papa, now that election is over?

Father.—It is singing now.

Son.—What song is it singing, papa?

Father.—"And down goes McKinley to the bottom of the sea." This is one line, but, my son, I can't be interrupted further, I have the Ann Arbor Courier and I want to see what Mr. Beal has to say about the "free trade toad," "wild cat money" and corruption of Tammany.

They Couldn't Count Them.

As is stated in another column, there were a number of votes in this county at the last election which the inspector couldn't count, because they were either not marked at all or so marked as not to count for anyone.

Grand Ratification Meeting.

Let the Democrats of the county turn out in a body tomorrow, Saturday evening, and indicate their pleasure over the result of the election last week.

After the parade, our re-elected congressman, Hon. James S. Gorman; Hon. Charles R. Whitman and Hon. John J. Enright will address the victors and administer consolation to the vanquished, at the rink, in short speeches. Let every one turn out for a glorious night.

Humor of the Election.

Quite a few humorous incidents occurred during election, most of them in marking the tickets. One voter in the first ward placed his cross in the large O of the words, "Official Ballot," at the head of the ticket.

Another voter folded his ticket up and remained in his booth about three-quarters of an hour, waiting to be called out.

One voter carefully crossed out every name on the Democratic, Prohibitionist, and People's tickets, and neglected to put any cross or mark on the Republican ticket.

A number of voters drew marks down through three of the tickets but neglected to vote the fourth.

Two tickets, the head of which were marked as Democratic, in the first ward, was split to vote for men on all four tickets.

One Democrat carefully crossed off Bills' name on the Democratic ticket for attorney general, and voted for him on the People's ticket.

Other ballots were found with just one name erased, and with no other name on the ticket.

A number of tickets were found which voted for just one man.

The election demonstrated that the voters needed instruction on the Australian ballot law.

The Official Canvass.

The official canvass of the county makes but little change in the figures given in last week's Argus. The total vote in the county was 10,388, which is just 200 less than it was four years ago.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION. Yes, 306 No., 789- 403

In Memory of Mrs. Cora Schoff Randall. Tread lightly, friends, for one rests here Whose kindly eyes are sleeping The sleep that knows no waking; She is so far, and yet so near, The while our eyes are weeping Her hands we still seem taking.

Dear friend, we miss thee every where, Thy voice in song so winning Yet in our ears so ringing! Thy good-night kiss by loved ones— And all thy fond caressing That gave us daily blessing.

O could we draw aside the veil That hides thy face—in death so pale— Could we but know thou'rt happy there, Beyond the need of earthly care, And longed not to come home again, Thy voice could soothe away our pain.

A whisper seems to reach our ears, Bidding us wipe away our tears, And cast aside all doubts and fears; It saith, "I've found a joyful place, Where, hand to hand, and face to face, We'll meet again in fond embrace."

ELIZA S. SINCLAIR.

A Tribute to Mrs. Randall.

As an officer of the Ann Arbor Art Club, and a warm personal friend of Mrs. Randall, whose death occurred so recently, I wish to express most sincerely my deep sense of our loss—loss not only of the Art Club, but also of Ann Arbor.

Notwithstanding her delicate health for some years, she never lost her interest in artistic matters.

Her love of music and flowers and painting molded her life and gave her a keen, refined sense of truth and loveliness. Her home was an exponent of this feeling and I know her friends will miss her tender courtesies, and the cheerful atmosphere of one of the loveliest corners of Ann Arbor.

Those who have known her, only in later years, may not be aware of her musical culture. In early womanhood, her voice possessed a rare quality of sweetness and sympathy, which gave great promise for her future, but while she was studying in Boston an attack of bronchitis somewhat weakened her voice, and she used it afterwards almost exclusively for the pleasure of her family.

Among the last acts of her life was to place on top of all her music a piece entitled, "Life's Dream is O'er, Farewell, Farewell." It seemed like a delicate message to her friends. An educated gentleman told me within a few days that his appreciation of music was due to Mrs. Randall's exquisite voice and touch.

She was one of the original members and organizers of "The Ann Arbor Art Club," and worked zealously for its interest as long as she had strength to do so, often materially aiding in the management by her sound practical judgment. During the eight years since its organization she has painted much, in oils and water colors, which was worthy of her ideal and a credit to the club. Many of these have been seen and admired by many Ann Arbor people at the various annual exhibitions given by the Art Club in the Ladies' library.

Her mirth-loving nature and spirited sense of the humorous and forgetfulness of self, all combined to make her a most charming companion, and I'm sure all of her friends feel the most sincere sympathy for that home which has met with such a loss. The influence of her character was subtle and far-reaching, and very many have felt a tenderer love for the beautiful and a stronger love for truth from having associated with her.

In the midst of this practical, bustling world is it not helpful and inspiring to have known such a life.

Mrs. W. S. PERRY.

Pres. Ann Arbor Art Club.

Death of Mrs. Herbert Randall.

On Saturday morning last about nine o'clock, the happy spirit of Mrs. Cora S. Randall was released from all suffering.

Mrs. Randall was the only daughter of Nelson M. and Elizabeth E. Schoff, of this city, and had passed most of her life in Ann Arbor. After graduating from the High School in 1875, she spent some time at Boston, studying music and painting. In September, 1876, she was married to Herbert Randall and for three years lived at Wareham, Mass. In 1882, Mr. and Mrs. Randall returned to Ann Arbor, where they have since made their home. Mrs. Randall possessed a remarkably bright and happy disposition, and was very talented and accomplished both in music and painting. She was a valued member of the Ann Arbor Art Club. In August, 1890, while visiting in Massachusetts, she suffered a severe attack of peritonitis, from which she never fully recovered.

Her parents and husband have the heartfelt sympathy of many friends in their sad bereavement, and they have the great comfort of knowing that nothing that could give her comfort or relief in her suffering was left undone. The funeral took place at the home of her parents on Monday afternoon, Rev. Henry Tatlock officiating.

Mrs. Randall's death was a great shock to her friends who had entertained strong hopes of her ultimate recovery. But, in the words of the late Bishop Harris, "these sorrows bind us to the spirit world; it is not a shadow land to us; it is a real world with which we are connected and in which we have an interest, and our hearts are drawn to the 'sweet and blessed country' where our treasure is. Our dead are 'not lost, but gone before,' and so we gladly follow after." "Weeping may endure for the night, but joy cometh in the morning" when

"The night is gone And with the morn those angel faces smile Which we have loved long since and lost awhile."

Cleveland's Cabinet.

Politicians are already figuring on the personnel of President-elect Cleveland's cabinet. Although Michigan did not give him her entire electoral vote, it is loudly whispered that a place will be given one of her most distinguished sons, and that he will travel on one of the new 1,000-mile family tickets issued by the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan Ry. They are good for the purchaser and members of his family and are now on sale at all ticket offices of the company. Price, $20.00.

There was a "small" matter of importance which was accidentally overlooked in our last week's issue. As it is still a matter of news to some, and as the ones who are chiefly interested in the affair have hardly become acquainted with the new arrangement themselves, we hasten tardily to chornicle the event. It is this: On the morning of October 28th of the present year was born to Mr. and Mrs. George P. Whaley, a daughter.—Milan Leader.
Any Washtenaw man who could be guilty of such foolishness as was the man mentioned in this item ought to be cremated—after he is dead, of course: A Reading man died and left his money, twelve hundred dollars, in an old shoe. A quiet little company of near friends and neighbors assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Asel-Russell in Macdon, on the evening of November 3d, to witness the marriage of their only daughter, Miss Mary Cornelia Russell, to Mr. Herbert E. Boyd, of Ypsilanti, Mich. The marriage was solemnized by Rev. J. I. Gulick at 8 o'clock p. m. A bounteous supper, prepared by adepts in the culinary art, was enjoyed by all. After the hearty congratulations of all present, among whom was Mr. Cadmus, of Harvey, Illinois, and an evening of good cheer, the company separated with the best wishes for the happiness and prosperity of the young couple who have thus started out on life's journey together. Their future home will be in Detroit.—Tecumseh Herald.
John S. O'Brien, an old resident of the town line road between Bunkerhill and Stockbridge, came to the village Saturday with his daughter Mary, who was to attend the reading circle at the school house. At very near noon Mr. O'Brien went to call upon Dr. H. E. Brown, who for many years had been the family physician. He remained in conversation with the doctor for some time, the doctor giving him a small vial of medicine for urinary trouble. He left the house and in about half an hour the doctor heard a loud rap at the door, and very quickly another, and hastily opening the door found Mr. O'Brien had just pushed it open and was all of a tremble. He gasped out that he had taken carbolic acid by mistake. The doctor got him into his office, laid him on the floor, applied glycerine oil to his lips, and tried to administer him a dose, but he expired almost instantly. The only words he uttered were those he spoke at the door.—Stockbridge Sun.

THE EMPEROR'S HAREM.
"139 Unfortunates Held Captive in the Palace at Peking."
The "Palace of China holds her court and rules over the imperial harem, whose only glimpse of the outside world is what they can see in the imperial flower-garden. The present young emperor, in addition to his seven lawful concubines, has already no less than one hundred and twenty others in his harem.—H. O'Shea's article, in the Illustrated American. Such is the life of the most highly favored of Chinese women—prisoners within the palace walls they eke out an existence in real slavery. American women know no slavery but that which depends on themselves. Sometimes they are overworked, "run-down," weak and ailing—then is the time to turn to the right medicine. The one who takes Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription emancipates herself from her weakness and becomes a stronger and a happier woman—more than that—a healthy one. For all the weaknesses and ailments peculiar to womanhood, "Favorite Prescription" is a positive remedy. And because it's a certain remedy, it's made a guaranteed one. If it fails to benefit or cure, in any case, you get your money back. Can you ask more?

Improving pastures by reseeded is not a certain operation, but is often worth trying. Seeding liberally in the autumn or very early spring, harrowing pretty thoroughly and rolling in the spring, may give good results. In some cases a good application of either stable or artificial manures may be all that is needed.
At the Pennsylvania station results gained are in favor of thicker seeding of ensilage corn and the use of large stalked varieties, even when these do not fully mature.
Victory Over Disease.
GENTLEMEN:—I have suffered intensely from biliousness and rheumatism for over three years, and had tried so many remedies that I had lost all faith. Hearing of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup I bought a bottle and found it helped me. I have now used four bottles, and it has restored my liver and kidneys to healthy action, and done more to purify my blood than anything I have ever taken. I am pleased to recommend it as a wonderful blood medicine. Very truly yours,

WHAT IS CATARRH?
The Opinion of an Eminent Medical Authority.
Catarrh is the cause of more diseases than all other causes combined. There are very few diseases to which human flesh is subject that can not be traced directly to catarrh. Not only is catarrh capable of producing a great variety of diseases, but it also attacks any organ or part of the body. It causes in the ears deafness, in the eyes blindness, in the head and throat discharges and offensive odors, in the bronchial tubes and larynx cough and hoarseness, in the lungs consumption, in the stomach dyspepsia, in the kidneys Bright's disease, in the pelvic organs a host of derangements too numerous for mention. Pe-ru-na cures catarrh and all catarrhal diseases wherever located. Pe-ru-na is a systemic remedy, and hence cures catarrh of internal organs as surely as it does catarrh of external organs, as no local application to the affected organ is necessary. OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1892.

The Register consoles itself with saying that the recent defeat was not so bad as it might have been. How bad would the Register have the republicans defeated?

The prohibition vote in this county seems to be on the decrease. It increased from 23 in 1876 to 617 for St. John in 1884. Since then it has been on the wane. From 617 in 1884, it got down to 543 in 1888 for Fisk. From 543 in 1888 it has fallen to 448 for Bidwell this year. To put it in other words, there are 95 less prohibition votes this year than four years ago, and 169 less than eight years ago. Most of these prohibitionists who have fallen away have gone to the Republican party.

The Courier is game to the last. It lifts up its little voice this week to say "Hurrah for Harrison." But the Courier a little further on says that the whole trouble with the republican party is its lack of faith in the people. The Courier says:

"The people do not know how to let well enough alone. They never had a better president than Harrison, and never will have. After all, it is the flappadoodle politician, of the 'you are a liar' sort, that appears to take with the majority."

The republican party never did trust the people. Neither did the old federal party, of which the republican party is the lineal descendant. But the organs are not always so frank in telling the people that it does not trust them. The democratic party is the party of the people. It trusts the American people, and the people evidently trust it.

The democratic vote in Washtenaw has shown a pretty steady increase, as the following table shows:

Table with 2 columns: Year and Vote Count. Rows include 1836, 1840, 1844, 1848, 1852, 1856, 1860, 1864, 1868, 1872, 1876, 1880, 1884, 1888, 1892.

As will be seen there have been only three instances of a decrease in the democratic vote in the county, all on a light vote, in 1848, 1872 and 1880.

The republican vote does not show a steady increase, but has been very fluctuating, as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Year and Vote Count. Rows include 1856, 1860, 1864, 1868, 1872, 1876, 1880, 1884, 1888, 1892.

A glance at these tables will show that the republican vote in the county is only 76 more than it was in 1860, while the democratic vote is 1,878 larger than it was that year.

Work on the Gymnasium.

The slow progress of work on the gymnasium has been attracting the general attention of the students and others interested in the big building on the northeast corner of the campus. The delay, as has been stated in the DAILY, is directly due to the Homestead trouble in Pennsylvania, and the inability of the Carnegie-Frick Company to fulfill its contract and supply the trusses and supports for the roof. The original contract for inclosing the building was let to a Cincinnati company, and for them the Carnegie-Frick Company has the contract for the iron portions of the work. The rolling of the long iron trusses for the roof is a piece of work of exceeding difficulty, and the only place in this country where it can be done properly is at Homestead; so that there is, to come down to cold facts, nothing to do but to "sit down and wait."

Of the 140,000 pounds of iron and steel which are to constitute the roof, 95,000 pounds are on the campus, and as soon as the remainder can be obtained, the work on the gymnasium will be actively pushed to completion. Everything else is on the ground, the men are here; and but for this unavoidable delay, the building would now be ready for work on the interior.

No provision has as yet been made concerning the furnishing of the gym. Of the $40,000 fund that was originally available, $36,000 will be required to inclose the building. The $4,000 left will probably be used to put the building in condition for the junior hop, and the other events which will occur in June. About $25,000 are necessary to finish the building, and the Board of Regents at their next meeting will probably decide to ask the legislature for an appropriation in entire. The newspapers of Detroit, Grand Rapids and other cities in the state have decided to take the question, and by agitating it properly considerable influence can be brought to bear upon the next legislature, which students hope will be more liberal than some of its predecessors.

Many comments are being made that the artistic effect of the building is destroyed by the big ventilator which stands out so prominently on the north side, but it must be remembered that the co-ed annex is to be built up close to the ventilator on that side, as the main building is on the south. The entrance is to be at the southwest corner and the whole structure, as seen in the plans and specifications, shows a handsome building, that cannot fail to reflect credit upon a great institution like the University of Michigan. It will probably be one of the finest college gyms in the world.—U. of M. Daily.

The Regents' Meeting.

Probably one of the most important actions was the appropriation of $700 for instruments and equipment for the homeop hospital. The salary of Carl W. Belser, assistant professor of oriental languages, was raised to $1,600. Geo. F. Metzger, Ph. D., and E. W. Dow, A. B., were appointed instructors in mathematics and history respectively, salaries $900. Paul H. Seymour, assistant in chemical laboratory, $150; Miss Alice Hunt, assistant in drawing, raised to $350; Simon Yutzy, assistant in anatomical demonstration; Archibald Muirhead, assistant to chair of materia medica.

New law quiz-masters were appointed as follows: J. W. Dwyer, F. A. Sheldon, F. M. Wells, M. F. Kendig and R. T. Thompson. Samuel Maxwell, of Nebraska, was appointed special lecturer on code pleading, and Wm. G. Hammond, of St. Louis, Mo., lecturer on the history of common law.

E. R. Raymond was recommended for the degree of B. S., and Mr. Bower for the degree of M. D.—U. of M. Daily.

Hobart Guild gives its opening reception at Harris hall, this evening.

The Choral Union holds its rehearsal this evening on account of vacation next week.

F. E. Janette left yesterday afternoon for Owosso, whence he leaves for Hancock, Mich., today.

C. E. Sweet, '91 law, was elected prosecuting attorney of Cass county by the largest republican majority of any man on the ticket.

The ladies of the S. C. A. will tender a reception to Miss Silver at Newberry hall, on Saturday evening. The gentlemen of the association are invited to attend.

Prof. Scott will relate several stories at the Baptist social this evening. Music will be rendered by a ladies' quartette. Members of the Choral Union will be just in time for the social after the meeting.

Prof. Scott is soon to deliver a lecture before the School of Music on "Music as an Hypnotic Influence." Yesterday he regaled his class in Aesthetics with several tunes from a music box, including "McGinty" and "Home Sweet Home." He quizzed the class upon the effect and will make use of his answers for data for the lecture.

The junior laws succeeded last night in electing a few of their class officers. The nominations for class president had been made at a previous meeting. The first ballot taken resulted in the election of H. E. Naegely, of Saginaw, by the following vote: Naegely, 75; Mills, 36; Crowell, 23; Moore, 12. For first vice-president, Mr. Kimball received 72 votes, Mr. Stoneman, the other candidate, receiving 51. The election of the remaining officers has been postponed until after Thanksgiving. Mr. Naegely is the first Michigan man who has been elected president of a law class during the past eight years. The orderly conduct of the meeting testified to his ability as a presiding officer.

HOW CAN WE DO IT?

THAT IS WHAT IS AGITATING THE PUBLIC MIND.

We All Know That Something Must Soon be Done About It.

How To Meet a Great Crisis Among Our People.

Something must be done about it. There is no doubt about that. And that something must be done quickly, or it may be too late.

On behalf of our readers we have made some very important investigations in this vicinity, and we have to report that our apprehensions were correct and are substantiated by the facts. We found that there is a greater proportion of our towns-people who are the victims of some form of nervous or chronic disorders, than ever before in our history. It is a fact beyond doubt, that these diseases are increasing in our midst at an alarming rate.

Feeling that something must be done at once in the matter, we have been in consultation and communication with several of New York City's most eminent physicians—all specialists in the treatment of nervous and chronic diseases, and we give our readers their opinions and advice as to how to effect a cure in these cases.

Dr. S. M. Reynolds, one of New York City's greatest specialists, says unhesitatingly and emphatically:

"Use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy in all such cases. I have never, in a practice of over twenty-five years, recommend a patent medicine. This great remedy, however, cannot be considered under that head, as it is a physician's prescription. I have used it among my patients and in my family, and I unhesitatingly pronounce it the most valuable remedy for the nerves I have ever used."

Dr. Henry P-fifer, also one of New York City's great physicians, says:

"Tell your sick people to use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, I have used it in my practice with wonderful results. I have found it a perfect and complete cure for patients in my practice who were suffering from all forms of nervous troubles, sleeplessness, u.e.s. aches, nervous weakness and debility."

The great New York physician, Emil Neum-r, M.D. physician-in-chief of the New York Lodge and Association Hospital, writes us:

"We are using Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy at the Hospital for our patients with good success."

Other physicians gave us the same advice for our people, and from the unanimity of opinion of the doctors, we are assured that this great and widely-known remedy is just what our sick and suffering citizens require to restore them to health. All the doctors say that it does cure, and all sufferers from nervousness, weakness, poor blood, debility, stomach, kidney or liver troubles should give it an immediate trial. We know that it is purely vegetable and harmless remedy, and our druggists have it for sale at $1.00. Another thing of great consequence is this, that it is the discovery of Dr.

Greene, of 35 W. 14th Street, New York who is a renowned specialist in curing nervous and chronic ailments, and he can be consulted free of charge concerning any case, personally or by letter.

How to Polish Seashells.

If the shell is one that has a certain amount of natural polish, the best way is to thoroughly cleanse it with hydrochloric acid, which is to be rubbed on with a rag. It should then be carefully washed in hot water and dried in hot sawdust, after which chamois skin and "elbow grease" only are necessary. If the surface is naturally dull, but smooth, the shell may be either varnished or rubbed with tripoli powder and turpentine applied with wash leather. After the first rubbing, rub with the powder alone and then with olive oil, after which chamois and rubbing will produce a polish. If, however, the outside stratum of the shell is rough, and must be removed before polishing, it is best for an amateur not to undertake the work, for the grinding of shells is a dangerous as well as a difficult work and often results in crippling the hand.

How to Make Koumiss.

There are people who profess to like koumiss, and there are many more people who, being invalids and unable to drink milk in its fresh state, find koumiss a refreshing and nutritious drink. The Arabs make it of mare's milk, but cow's milk is used in America. Have the milk pure. Add to a quart of it two tablespoonfuls of white sugar previously melted in a little hot water. Add a small quantity of compressed yeast. Repeated experiment will tell how much or how little is best liked by any individual. Fill a bottle with the mixture. Cork tightly and tie the cork firmly. Shake vigorously. Place it in a temperature of 50 to 55 degs. Fahrenheit for six hours, and then put on ice over night. Open carefully, for it is very effervescent. If curdled it has overfermented and must not be used.

How to Use Plaster of Paris.

Small cracks in a plastered wall can be filled up smoothly at an expense of a few pennies. Buy a little dry plaster of paris. Pour enough water on it to make a thick paste and fill up the crack smoothly with an ordinary tableknife. It must be done as soon as the water is poured on, for the plaster will harden in two minutes.

How to Treat One Dangerous Nuisance.

The person who carries a stick or umbrella under his arm, or horizontally over his shoulder, is a nuisance. If he does it going up or down stairs in a crowd he becomes a dangerous nuisance. A person who does this in Berlin finds out at once that he is doing wrong, for the nearest person behind him will strike the stick sharply, either knocking it out of his grasp or striking the point down. And everybody around will support the striker in the rebuke. If Americans would adopt this rule it would do away with one discomfort of city life.

Celery for Home Use.

For home use or for special customers who are willing to pay a fancy price for a superior article a Vermont correspondent of The American Gardening advocates this method: Set the plants in rows four or five feet apart, and about seven inches apart in the row; plants thus grown on the surface have the advantage of direct sunshine, make a rapid growth, and are easily kept free from weeds. One very essential point is to keep all soil out of the heart of plants until they are large enough for blanching.

When the plants are well grown, wrap each plant in a paper jacket, and then hill up almost to the top of the papers. For this purpose buy common straw paper and cut it into strips from twelve to fifteen inches wide. After a little practice the wrapping can be done as quickly as the ordinary tying up. The loose end of the wrapper may be kept in place by a handful of earth thrown in with a trowel, or if the plants are very bushy it is less work to fasten the ends together with an ordinary pin. It will pay to place a light protection over the celery rows when rainstorms are imminent. Light weight oil paper, similar to that used for building purposes, may be used in place of the straw paper. The space between celery rows should always be used for some quick growing crop, like radishes, kohlrabi or early cauliflower. Care should always be taken in billing to give a broad base to NOTE, AS THE SOIL TENDS TO BE HEATED up higher later in the season. Personal supervision of all these details is important.

Seed Potatoes.

A dealer in seed potatoes makes these suggestions in a circular sent out to his patrons: 1. It is always best to go north for seed, unless living in the extreme north ourselves. 2. Nothing is benefited by change of seed more than potatoes. Any farmer makes money by changing every few years. 3. Potatoes are best for seed which are grown on sandy or gravelly land. 4. Potatoes soon deteriorate, and it is necessary to introduce new and vigorous varieties.

The Mystery Solved.

Mrs. Yerger is not handsome, and her voice when she sings is dreadful, but Colonel Yerger is very demonstrative. "Why is he always kissing her?" asked a friend of the family of another gentleman.

"I can't imagine, unless it is to keep her from singing."—Texas Siftings.

Hardening Plaster Casts.

A new method of hardening the various plaster ornaments so largely used in the arts has been suggested. The process consists in saturating the article to be hardened with a solution of silica, and following this by the application of a baryta solution.—New York Journal.

 William Donner, formerly of Chelsea, but for two or three years past a resident of this city, died at the University hospital on Tuesday evening. He was a member of the Ostening lodge, I. O. O. F., of the Encampment, the Canton, and of Welch Post, G. A. R. An autopsy was held, but failed to reveal the exact cause of his death. The funeral occurred yesterday.
 The Ann Arbor Art Club will give its annual exhibition in the Ladies' Library the week following Thanksgiving, on Nov. 31, Dec. 1 and 2. The work of the club has been unusually vigorous and enthusiastic. A large number of sketches from nature have been made during the summer, which, added to the regular studio work, will make an exhibit of more than ordinary interest.
 T. E. Howard, the newly elected judge of the supreme court of Indiana, is a native of this county, having been born in the township of Northfield, and also a graduate of the University. He is now a practicing attorney in South Bend, Ind., and a professor of law in the University of Notre Dame. He is a brother of Frank and Julia A. Howard, of this city, and was a member of the 12th Michigan regiment during the war. While in the army he was a correspondent of the Argus, and our files show a number of letters from the newly elected Democratic judge.
 William Gillett Tibbals, a resident of Ann Arbor since 1860, died November 13th. The funeral was held Wednesday morning at his late residence on State street. He leaves, besides his widow, a son, Charles E. Tibbals, of Chesaning; a grand-daughter, who has always made her home with him, Mrs. B. Lane, of Batavia, New York, and three other grand-children: Dr. Frank Bun Tibbals, of Detroit; William I. Tibbals, of Buffalo; and Mrs. John S. Thornhill, of Danbury, Connecticut. Mr. Tibbals was born in Milford, Connecticut, in the year 1812.

The price of single tickets to this concert will be one dollar, and will be sold only to holders of associate membership tickets.
 In "Josephine, Empress of the French", Rhea's successful historical play, which appears at the opera house, Wednesday evening next, all the interesting characters that figured in those stirring times between the divorce of Josephine from Napoleon Bonaparte and the former's death, are said to be very cleverly outlined by the author of the play, Albert Roland Haven. Napoleon is shown in all the strength of his imperious, domineering, ambitious manhood; Josephine in all the nobility of her patriotism and sympathetic and loyal womanhood. She is represented as loving Napoleon well, but France and the Emperor more. Talleyrand is shown as he was—a diplomatic schemer whose brain never seems to weary of intrigue. The character of the valiant Murat is cleverly cut, as are also those of the wily Fouché, the devoted son Eugene, the mischief-making Pauline Bonaparte, the heartless second Empress, Marie Louise, of Austria, and the good natured Duke of Dantzig.

At the meeting of the Mathematical club tomorrow evening E. R. Cole will read a paper on "Brooks Taylor." Problems will be discussed by the club.

Rev. J. T. Sunderland will begin next Sunday a series of six morning sermons on "Religion and Evolution." The dates and subjects of the series will be as follows: Nov. 20, The Evolution of the World; Nov. 27, The Evolution of Man; Dec. 11, The Evolution of the Bible; Dec. 18, Evolution and the Idea of God; Dec. 25, Evolution in Relation to Christ and Christianity; Jan. 1, Evolution and Immortality. Next Sunday evening he will speak on Thomas Paine, giving the second lecture in his course on "Some Great Skeptics."

Competent instruction will be provided by the Hobart Guild for its lady members, and for the ladies of St. Andrew's parish in two courses of physical culture. The first in Calisthenics, will consist of 20 lessons given on Saturdays, at $1.50 for the course. The second will be a course in Delsartean Culture, given on Friday afternoons, 15 lessons, for $5.00. Applicants should give their names at once to the curator, who may be found in Harris Hall from 10 to 11 a.m., and 3 to 4 and 7 to 8 p.m. The gymnasium has just been put in excellent condition, and baths will be ready soon.

Last Sunday evening the Presbyterian church was crowded to its utmost capacity at the meeting of the Christian Union, which consists of the members of all the Young People's societies of the various churches. The meeting was addressed by President Walker, Mr. Bowen, and the Misses Gebbard and Buck. They presented a vivid and interesting picture of the necessity for and workings of the Union. The music was excellently rendered by a choir numbering over one hundred. Mr. St. John, the soloist, in the song, "Throw the Life Line," captivated the entire audience, as did also the chorus which followed him. The B. M. Q. very impressively rendered the Lord's prayer. It was announced that there are now thirteen hundred church members in the University.

The Theodore Thomas Concert.
 The strong artistic face of Theodore Thomas, wherever seen, brings back to musical people memories of many happy hours spent under the spell of his magic baton. It reminds one of the great treat in store for us next Monday evening. As is well known he will give the first concert in the Choral Union series this season, and we predict a larger crowd than listened to him a number of years ago, when he appeared under the auspices of the graduating class in University hall at a commencement concert. His present orchestra, in the opinion of competent critics, is superior to any of his former organizations, and his programme is a very attractive one indeed. When we look at the prospectus of the Choral Union series and see Theodore Thomas and Arthur Nikisch's names it seems as though we had reached the highest point possible in the line of concerts, but in addition to these two great conductors and their orchestras we have a great pianist, and that prime favorite here, Max Heinrich, besides two great chorus concerts. We sincerely trust that the sale of tickets will be so large that University hall will be packed. Secure tickets immediately is the duty of all who believe that enterprise and hard work should be rewarded. We print the programme below:

WIVES SOLD CHEAP.

LOVELY MAIDS OF NEW GUINEA BOUGHT FOR AN AX PIECE.

Adventure of an American Scientist Among the Papuans—How a Brave Native Lover Earned a Spouse—A Pressing Invitation to Marry.

Such opportunities for matrimony as we offered me in New Guinea a few years ago I never expect to enjoy again. My journey through the island of the Papuans was made for the purpose of collecting specimens of all sorts, such as a naturalist seeks to gather, but the people themselves are the most interesting savages I have ever met.

"You are young and strong," said I. "Why do you not go to work and earn enough to support yourself and your sweetheart?" "You do not understand," he replied.

"I have a good garden that would supply what food we wanted; besides, I can throw the spear further and truer to the mark than any other man in this district, so that I can get plenty of kangaroos and pigs. But they will not buy the girl. Her mother wants an ax for her, and that I cannot grow in my garden or hunt in the forest with my spear."

The poor fellow groaned, made several despairing remarks on his prospective mother-in-law, and finally said that if he did not love the young woman so dearly he would go away and never come back again.

HELPING A NATIVE TO MARRY. "But, my boy, you need not despair," said I. "If the possession of an ax will secure your happiness I will give you one. I want my paradise bird, for in my country people think more of them than of axes. If you will help me get as many birds with the long plumes as you have fingers on both hands you shall have an ax on the day we get the last one."

He accepted this proposition delightedly. At length, with his assistance, the ten good birds were procured and the ax earned. I was present when Rabor bought his wife with it. They were married the following evening, the ceremony being concluded with a wild dance and singing by a chorus of girls.

As we were preparing our dinner one afternoon a titter and a giggle were wafted to our ears. Looking around we beheld Lohier in the midst of a group of fifteen or twenty girls, many of them of superior beauty, who were laughing and peering at us over each other's shoulders.

They all wore flowers in their hair and bands of green leaves adorned their arms and ankles. Each maiden had on her best striped petticoat and some wore necklaces of dogs' teeth.

At length Lohier, one of my recent guides, stepping forward, said that he had been a long way, had visited the biggest towns of his country and had brought back with him the most beautiful women of his nation. He hoped we would each select one that would please us, marry her and settle down in New Guinea. The parents of some of the girls had come also and were standing in the background. Our friend explained to us that the prices were high, as they were the finest girls in the land.

LINING UP FOR PROPOSALS. He arranged them all in a giggling line, that they might be seen to the best advantage. Beginning with the first, he told their names and gave their different accomplishments.

I noticed a beautiful girl whom I had met while out shooting among the number of maidens, and I was anxious to hear what Lohier would say of her. She still wore the string of beads I had given her, and looked as pretty and modest as a violet. When he came to her he said: "This is Lucena. Is she not lovely? Her arms are round as bamboo; her form is supple as the climbing vine; her skin is smooth as a young banana leaf; her hair is soft as spiders' webs; her eyes are bright as dew in the morning. She can sing like a bird and run fast as a kangaroo; she is a good housekeeper, an affectionate daughter and comes from a good family, for her father is a great warrior."

The value set upon the beauty was an ax, a knife, a piece of calico and a string of beads. We stood admiring her, and Lohier thought he had made a bargain. We realized that the affair might turn out seriously, perhaps, but we turned the matter off by declaring that we were unable to make a choice among so many lovely creatures and proceeding to distribute presents liberally. To most of the girls we gave gay colored handkerchiefs, with a brass ring and a brass button in each. To Lucena we offered a looking glass, and the young women danced for our amusement while we ate our dinner, and sang a song, which they composed as they went along, describing the whole scene and complimenting us upon our generosity. Toward evening they bade us goodby and started for their homes.—Fish Commissioner Sherman F. Denton in Washington Star.

WHY SHE LEFT THE FLAT.

She Could Submit to Snubs, but "Neighboring" Was Too Much for Her.

They were coming down town together in a Broadway car, and the woman in the plush jacket was pouring her tale of woe into the sympathetic left ear of her neighbor in the sealskin coat. "Yes, I've moved," she said. "We've given up flat life and are going to live in a hotel for awhile. No, it wasn't the traditional causes that drove me out, either. I'd grown used to the dumb-waiter, had established fairly friendly relations with the janitor, and my servant agreed beautifully with the other servant, who washed on the same day she did."

"We had lived in the flat almost six months. No one had called, and I, being used to the ways of smaller cities, had decided that the people meant to snub me. I didn't mind it. Harry and I were very comfortable. I had mother with me part of the time, and—well, everything was lovely."

"One evening I was in the bathroom, which opened off the court. I had a severe cold in my lungs, and I confided the fact to Harry, who sat in our 'den,' further down the hall. I suppose that I must have raised my voice just a little, when Harry suggested that I use goose grease and I replied that I hadn't any in the house."

"Well, my dear, in just ten minutes the bell rang and my maid came to me with a saucer and a message from the old lady who lived in the flat above me. The saucer contained goose grease and the message was to the effect that the dear old lady had heard me express a wish, etc., and begged I would accept it."

"I was pleased. It was so sweet and nice of her that tears came to my eyes as I took the saucer and retreated into the bathroom again. The door had hardly closed when—another ring, another maid, another saucer, this time from the young married woman on the top floor."

"How ungrateful I had been! How kind and truly good were all these people! My meditations were interrupted by another ring, another maid, another supply of the goose grease. The maiden lady who kept house for her brother had sent it up, and would I please rub it in well and go to bed at once. Then the Irish servant girl across the hall brought some in and gave it to the queen of my kitchen, and I had to take in and shelter two more consignments while they were exchanging the courtesies of the evening."

"All were represented before the evening was over, except that the offerings varied. The widower on the first floor said his Maria had died of a neglected cold on the lungs, and he sent me a bottle of the Consumptive Sufferer's Relief, which she had found very soothing in her last hours. A sweet old grandmother on the second floor sent me a mustard plaster all ready for application, and the widow who boards with her contributed a box of four-grain quinine pills and a medical journal."

"Martha and I spent the entire evening receiving these neighborly offerings, while Harry sat still and chuckled. By 11 o'clock we had ample stock for a small apothecary shop. "From that night everybody in the block regarded me as a being snatched from death by his or her remedy. Harry was waylaid in the hall, Martha was intercepted on her way to and from the clothesline, I myself was subjected to various medical questions by the widower, the grandmother and the young married woman on the top floor."

"I was growing thin and pale. I simply had to have a change of scene—and people. So we moved. No, I'm not exaggerating. I haven't even done the subject justice."

But the woman in the sealskin coat thought she had.—New York World.

A Barber and Poet.

Jasmin, the Gascon poet, who was also a barber, had many a strange adventure arising from the incongruity of his two professions.

At one time, when he was visiting the mayor of a French town, and had promised to give an informal recitation to the townspeople, the hour arrived and his host did not appear. Several important personages assembled to accompany them to the hall, but the mayor remained invisible, busied with his toilet.

Finally, fearing the impatience of his guests, he opened the door of his chamber to apologize, and showed his face covered with lather.

"Just a moment," said he: "I am finishing my shaving."

"Oh," said Jasmin, "let me help you!" He at once doffed his coat, gave a finishing touch to the razor and shaved the mayor in a twinkling, with what he called his "hand of velvet." In a few minutes he was in the hall receiving tumultuous applause for his splendid recitation.—Youth's Companion.

A Warning as to Flower Beds.

Against one thing let me warn the reader, and that is the indiscriminate use of formal foliage or flower beds on most lawns. They are apt to lend a garish and vulgar air to the place. Close to the house you may sometimes use one or two of these beds, but their bright red and yellow colors should be set a little on one side and not allowed to glare at one too much. I respect the universal delight in rich color, but all formal patches of color should be used carefully and in proper relations to the whole picture.—Samuel Parsons, Jr., in Scribner's.

The American Apple in Europe.

Apples form a considerable part of our exports to Europe. They command higher prices, proportionately, than any other American fruit. Those which can be bought here for ten dollars a barrel sell for twenty-five dollars on the other side. A year ago Prince Bismarck paid thirty dollars for a barrel of Newtown pippins which would have sold here for fourteen dollars. Europeans acknowledge that in apples and several other things the United States cannot be equaled.—New York Evening Sun.

ROADS AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

John Y. Caylor Proposes an Exhibition of an Instructive Kind. In a letter to the editor of the New York Tribune, John Y. Caylor says: An important subject is that of roads, roadmaking and maintenance. If I could make the roads of a country, good law-making would be sure to follow. This free paraphrase is intended to be impersonal. There will, no doubt, be provided an exhibition of machinery and appliances of all sorts for use in constructing roads, and for their repair and maintenance; machinery for breaking stone and otherwise preparing material required for roadmaking; steam rollers, excavators, scrapers and apparatus and tools a plenty, a convenient and practical exploiting of which will be greatly to the advantage of the exhibitor and of those who seek information.

Contiguous to such exhibition there could be provided an open area, where, within the compass of a couple of acres, there could be arranged many examples of road construction, so varied in detail and material as to afford, in the most simple and comprehensible way, information to thousands seeking knowledge on the subject everywhere throughout the country. We would admit, if you please, street pavement in use in cities, as inapplicable for the purpose discussed, but in all else short stretches of roadway, showing an open end section which would disclose all details, and including in one form of construction or another all classes of material—earth, gravel, broken stone and combinations of these, and of widths and depths intended to meet local requirements and exigencies.

Drainage and the care of water should be illustrated. Countless machines and apparatus could be practically exhibited, and here the visitor from Vermont, from Kansas and from Texas, could in a day get more ideas on this most valuable feature of the public economy than town committees and supervisors absorb during a term of office. As a people we are only awakening to an appreciation of the importance of a substantial and intelligent system of road service, and of the business end, affecting the interests of all, of a proper system of repair and maintenance.

More money is yearly wasted by ignorant and dishonest use in this branch of the public expenditure than would, under intelligent and honest management, with a moderate accession of funds, make and maintain fair roads. The value of continuous and intelligent maintenance, the keeping of the surface in order and the proper disposition of water, which is the greatest enemy of roads, are hardly understood, let alone practiced, in any of our rural districts.

It is the experience of many engineers, as it certainly is my own, that it rarely happens but that fairly good roads may be constructed out of material readily available at a very small part of the cost usually supposed to be necessary. To make every dollar tell in construction, and proper attention thereafter, is the simple secret in more than enough instances to justify it as a rule. It may be that the project may be deemed to be impracticable. I think not. Possibly some such plan has already been born in the brains of the commissioners of the fair, but no harm can be done in submitting through your columns the suggestions herein contained.

A Road Improvement Magazine. Good Roads is the name of a monthly magazine which has just been started under the management of the League Roads Improvement bureau. Its managing editor is Mr. Isaac B. Potter, author of that excellent and valuable pamphlet, "The Gospel of Good Roads." The new magazine is to be conducted on the general plan followed in this pamphlet. It will illustrate with photographic cuts the good roads and bad roads of the world, and will tell how the latter can best be superseded by the former. The "general aim of the magazine will be to stimulate the interest of the public concerning the advantages of good roads and streets and the best methods of constructing and maintaining them." Special attention will be given to road laws and legislation, and to supplying farmers and suburban residents with practical information as to the best way of improving existing roads. The first number is a handsome publication of fifty pages, containing in full Mr. Potter's "Gospel," with its striking illustrations and much other valuable matter. The price is twenty cents a copy, two dollars a year, and the address is Good Roads, Potter building, New York city. Every person interested in the important subject of improved highways ought to subscribe for this magazine, and thus help forward a worthy and public spirited enterprise.—New York Evening Post.

Hints on Roadmaking. The gravely places in the roads are full of instruction to the road builders. They are hard, dry and compact. That isolated stones will sink into the soil by their own weight has always been well known. Every bit of soil that is permitted to intrude itself between the stones of a road is a divider that is destructive to good results. A flattened ellipse is the best shape for the foundation of a durable road; but sand and gravel without any suggestion of loam makes the best roadbed. The permanence of a road depends upon the care which is taken in making the bed. Broken stone is liable to be rolled about by heavy teams until the rough edges are worn off, producing dust and mud, and the road is soon full of ruts and holes. A road made of six ounce or egg sized stones alone will be loose and rough. There should be small stones mixed in with them. They should be carefully spread widely over the road so as to give uniformity. Our system at the present time is to have the tops of our roads porous to let in the water, and a loam bed into which the stone and gravel sink. But this is an improvement over the past, and we may hope for better methods in the future.—Address by J. R. O'cott.

CULTURAL NOTES ON WHEAT.

Suggested by Results Gained at the Indiana Agricultural Experiment Station. Here are some important points concerning wheat, set forth in a bulletin sent out by Director Plumb, of the Purdue university station, at Lafayette, Ind. He says: Velvet Chaff, Michigan Amber and Fultz varieties of wheat have been grown for nine years on the university farm and rank in order as named, though Michigan Amber surpasses Velvet Chaff as a rust resisting variety. Red Clawson and Jones' Winter Fife are the two most promising recently introduced varieties.

For eight years six pecks of seed sown per acre have given the most satisfactory results. In the region of Lafayette a higher average yield has been secured from wheat sown Sept. 20 over other dates of sowing. Judicious rotations, including grass, have given better returns than constant grain cropping. Heavy applications of manure and fertilizers to a worn soil, growing corn and wheat alternately, have given paying returns. The average results of all experiments at this station with fertilizers and manures upon wheat during the past three years, in full or two-third doses, have not been profitable.

The use of hot water or copper sulphate failed to destroy the spores of loose smut. Bunt, or stinking smut, in wheat was successfully destroyed by using hot water or copper sulphate. Early and late harvesting of wheat had practically no effect on yield or weight of grain. Yield of grain and straw was considerably reduced by mowing wheat on certain plats in spring to check rankness of growth. In comparing forms of nitrogen for fertilizing the wheat plant, sulphate of ammonia gave rather better yield than nitrate of soda or dried blood. As the plants fertilized with nitrate were slower to mature than the others, these also suffered more from rust than did the others.

HARVESTING POTATOES.

Cheapest and Simplest Ways of Handling and Storing for Winter Use.

If the soil be clean and mellow, the patented potato diggers do good service, saving as these do both time and labor. On the majority of farms, however, these diggers are not available, and in their absence a shovel plow will answer very well. Where the crop is dug by machine or plow, it is well after the bulk of tubers have been picked up to run a smoothing harrow over the ground. This will bring to light potatoes that have been covered up or hidden from sight.

As a rule, the potatoes are left on the ground for a short time and then drawn to the cellar, roothouse or pit. A correspondent writing to the New York World says: "I aim to harvest my potatoes as soon as I find they have stopped growing. This can be easily told by the appearance of the tops. As long as a portion of the tops remains green it shows that the roots are at work and the tubers are increasing in size. After the tops die down and the skin remains smooth and firm on the tubers, as shown by rubbing them after they are dug, I prefer to have them in a cool cellar rather than in the ground where they grew. Potatoes should be dug in dry weather and be stored away in a dry condition. They should, however, be air dried and not sun dried, for exposure to the sun for any considerable time is injurious both to their quality and color. On the average I consider the potato as profitable a crop as I can raise, and about the only one where it pays me to buy fertilizer for it."

In a bulletin issued from the North Carolina station a summary of the replies given by a number of southern growers about their methods of winter storing of Irish potatoes makes it appear that all agree that the late crop is easy to keep. Many prefer to store in barrels or crates in an outbuilding; some spread on barn floors and cover with straw, but the majority prefer storing in hills outdoors and covering with earth. Nearly all agree on the necessity for keeping the potatoes cool and dark.

A Five Years' Rotation.

A correspondent writing to The Rural New Yorker says:

We practice a five years' rotation, sowing timothy in the fall and clover in the spring. After the wheat has been harvested, the portion seeded down lies in grass for two years. By mixing red and alsike clover, some of the latter is found alive the second year, but nearly all of the red disappears after the first season. After two annual crops of grass have been cut, the piece is manured and plowed in spring. A part is planted to corn, the rest to potatoes. Cuts follow in the spring of the next year, followed by wheat in the fall. Two hundred pounds per acre of commercial fertilizer on the wheat is the only fertilizer used, except stable and hen manure. The latter is the most lasting in effect of all I have ever used. It is most excellent for corn. It can be spread on the sod which is to be plowed the following spring at any time after the grass is cut, or it may be applied after the plowing and harrowed in. Its effect on grass was plainly visible in one place four years after a portion of a corn field had been thus manured.

When to Cut Corn Fodder.

The usual practice is to cut corn for fodder, also for silage, when the kernels begin to glaze. From the Pennsylvania station the report comes that, while small varieties increase in food value until nearly mature, in large varieties the gain is so small that it is considered better to cut when the leaves are tender. At this station, according to the bulletin quoted, fully one-half of the total food material in corn fodder was found in the ears, one-fourth to one-third in the leaves and husks (stover) and the rest in the stalks. As the cobs contained one-tenth and the butts of the stalks contained four to five times as much as the tops, it is inferred that there is considerable loss when the stalks are fed whole, which might be saved were they cut fine before feeding or preserved in silos.

Hatching Double Barreled Eggs.

Six experts recently expressed opinions in The Rural New Yorker as to the possibility of hatching healthy chickens from double yoked eggs. P. Williams did not think it possible to get two perfect chicks from a double yoked egg. H. S. Babcock had set such eggs, but does not know that one ever hatched. P. H. Jacobs had endeavored to secure hatches from double yoked eggs, but had failed. M. K. Boyer related that failures had attended his efforts in the same direction. He cited, however, an instance of a double yoked egg which hatched out in an incubator run by W. H. H. Bradbury, of Hammonton, N. J., two well formed chicks that lived until they were broiler size, when they were marketed, all of which seems to make it possible, and that's all.

Salting Hay.

A correspondent in the New England Homestead who has had experience in the matter claims that salting hay is a bad practice. This is what he says about it: "I claim that hay should never be salted, as salt causes the hay to become wet and afterward moldy. I care not how much or little salt is used on hay, it will not come out of the mow as bright and sweet as where none is used. I was once a firm believer in salting hay, and also in opening all the doors in the barn when I began to get in my hay and leaving them open until cold weather set in. I have since learned that both are injurious to the hay. For the last eight years I have not salted any hay nor left my doors open at night, and have had no moldy hay."

WINTER WHEAT.

Two Ways of Protecting Young Wheat from Injury by Inclement Weather.

There are two ways even in the most exposed country of saving young wheat from the worst injury by the weather, according to American Cultivator. One is to make the soil rich, the other is like to it, and that is to so manage the preparation of a seed bed that most of this fertility will be near the surface, thus insuring a spreading habit of growth both of roots and top. It is often said that wheat needs to get a large top to protect itself during the winter. But the character of the top is more important than its size. If wheat is sown during hot weather and spires up without spreading, as it will in such cases, it will kill out in winter worse than wheat sown so late that it scarcely had any top. The latter had more root than top. The first had more top than root. Some of the worst failures of winter wheat have resulted in pieces that to the inexperienced eye looked best the fall before.

Practical growers agree that the land for seeding with wheat should be well compacted, with a seed bed made moist and mellow near the surface. As most wheat is now grown on stubble ground of spring grain there are only a few weeks possible in which to prepare the seed bed. What can be done to bring such land under the most favorable conditions for seeding? First, plowing should follow the harvesting of the grain as soon as possible. Keep a drag and roller in the field as the stubble is turned under, and each day toward night drag and roll down all that has been plowed that day. There is generally some moisture in newly turned furrows. If you wait until the whole field is plowed before dragging and rolling down, most of this moisture has dried out of the up-turned furrow. Once out there may not come rain enough before the proper seeding time to germinate the grain.

There is always some green herbage—weeds if not clover—in grain stubble when it is plowed under. If soil is compacted about this green herbage it rots at once, not only giving out all the fertility it contains, but enabling the soil to be much better compacted than it would otherwise be. Moisture is all important for compacting soil. It presses closer together the particles of earth, but without preventing progress of the roots through them, but rather aiding it. Care should be taken not to work heavy land while very wet, as this may make it cloddy.

The authority quoted in the foregoing says on the subject of fertilizing: "Making the surface soil rich is best done by mineral manures. Their effect is also to harden the soil, as some part of the mineral soon unites with its sand and thus becomes a silicate. It is, however, soluble in the carbonic acid gas which is always present in land where recent showers have brought moisture down. All know how soft newly fallen rain-water is, and how easily it removes dirt from the person. This is due to the carbonic acid gas it contains, which it has absorbed in passing through the air.

This carbonic acid gas is of the greatest importance in making any kind of seed start vigorously. The sprouting seed furnishes some carbonic acid gas, but every farmer knows that a succession of light rains, enough to wet down one or two inches deep, is of the greatest importance not only to newly sown wheat, but to newly planted seeds of any kind."

Apples for Stock Food.

Apples are not a strong food for live stock, and the lack of "strength" may be shown by a short table of comparison. The leading compounds for which a fodder is valued are the albuminoids and carbohydrates. The former contains the substance for the making of the vital juices, muscle, etc., while the latter are to do the work of the animal machines, the fuel for the engine, so to speak. Of these groups of food elements the following familiar food stuffs contain the averages as given after each:

| | Albuminoids. | Carbohydrates. |
|-------------------------|--------------|----------------|
| Potatoes, per cent..... | 8.54 | 84.22 |
| Turnips, per cent..... | 9.40 | 69.54 |
| Pumpkin, per cent..... | 17.32 | 56.02 |
| Beets (field)..... | 8.90 | 45.78 |
| Apples (fresh)..... | 1.43 | 91.51 |
| Pomace..... | 4.30 | 76.39 |

Thus far we have said nothing as to the relative value of the albuminoids and carbohydrates, but when it is understood that the former are much more important, therefore expensive, it follows that fresh apples are a weak food. The pomace is much better because there has been a condensation of the albuminoids. But as the albuminoids are mostly in the skin and seeds and these are the least digestible, the actual feeding value is not what the table would otherwise represent. Apples are a poor food unless "wormy" and the wish is to destroy these insects by feeding them.—American Agriculturist.

Agricultural Brevities.

It is said to cost less to send the product of an acre of wheat from Dakota to England than it does to manure an acre in England so that it can grow good wheat.

A recent bulletin from an experiment station says, "Whenever potash has been applied in experiments the clover is clearly much stronger than on any other plots, not excepting those where manure has been used."

There are creameries now at work in Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, South Carolina and North Carolina.

Poultry News says: "To make a good and cheap turkey roost get four forked posts from the woods, about ten feet long. Put them in the ground two feet. Then drop two worm fence rails in the forks and throw two or three cross poles on these, and you have a good roost for them."

Asparagus beds ought to be mowed and the tops removed before seed is scattered.

Now is the time to get cold frames and forcing pits in readiness for the coming season.

Sow spinach seed for spring greens in rows a foot apart.
