Castoria.

"Cautoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

Dr. G. C. Osgood, Lowell, Mass.

" Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves.

Dr. J. F. KINCHELOE,

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription

Н. А. Апсиин, М. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

NEVER A FAILURE.

The Red River Valley of Minnesota and North Dakota has never had a failure of crops. It produced 30,000,000 bushels of wheat besides other cereals in 1890. Farms can be had on the crop plan, or long time cash payments. It is not an uncommon thing to pay for a farm from the proceeds of one crop.

It has all of the advantages of an old country in the shape of school, church, market, postal a ailway facilities and all the chances of a new country in the way of cheap lands, rich soil, and increase in values. It is one of the most fertile and promising regions in America not yet fully occupied.

In the rush to the far west, however, this rich valley has been over-looked. It has room for a

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY. Entered at the Post-Office, in Ann Arbor, Mich as second-class matter.

FRIDAY, APRIL 14, 1893.

The Courier keeps up its antielection nonsense. It reports Mr. Gilday's speech at the Dundee convention, using a gross preversion of what he really did say, and has "Many Democrats" write communications for it. "Many Democrats" should be retired for use in the next campaign. The Courier and neglect to tell against its beauty, but will need him then.

A Study of Election Returns.

A study of the official election returns develops a number of interesting facts, of which the following are a few:

There were 101 less votes cast in supreme court than there were for mayor.

Eugene G. Mann had 77 more votes than did Durand, the democratic candidate for justice, while Col. Thompson had 42 more votes than the combined republican and prohibition vote for justice.

Ann Arbor city gave Hooker, republican, 18 plurality for judge of the supreme court, while for regent Fletcher had 9 majority over Bunker and Kiefer had 32 over Harmon.

Judge Kinne had in Ann Arbor city 334 more votes than the republican and populist candidates for supreme court judge, and Mr. Gilday had 280 less votes than did the democratic candidate for the supreme court.

The total vote on the state ticket in Ann Arbor city was: Judge of the supreme court, Durand, D., 874; Hooker, R., 892; Grece, pop., 20; Walker, prohib., 60; regents, Harmon, D., 857, Bunker, D., 868; Kiefer, R., 889, Fletcher, R., 877; judge of circuit court, Gilday, D., 614, Kinne, R., 1,246; for county school commissioner, Cavanaugh, D., 905, Calkins, pop., 165.

The precinct giving the largest democratic majority for justice of the supreme court was the fifth ward, Ypsilanti, which gave 123, the second ward, Ann Arbor, giving 120. The precinct giving the largest republican majority was the sixth ward, Ann Arbor, 118.

The precinct giving the largest vote for Durand was Manchester, 246, the smallest vote for Durand being Webster, 36.

largest vote was Sylvan, 261, and wing was begun in 1811. The building the precipit giving Hooker the was burned by the British in 1814, and the precinct giving Hooker the smallest vote was Freedom, 27.

Judge Kinne's largest vote was in the first ward, Ann Arbor, 314, while Sylvan was second with 297. Judge Kinne's smallest vote was obtained in Dexter, 51.

Mr. Gilday's largest vote was obtained in Sylvan, 215, while Manchester was second with 212. His smallest vote was in Freedom, 19.

Mr. Cavanaugh's largest vote was in Manchester, 244, while his smallest vote was in Freedom, 33.

Gilday's vote in Ann Arbor city was 268 larger than Landon's six years ago, while Kiune's vote was 102 less than six years ago.

In the whole county, Gilday received 103 more votes than did Landon, while Kinne received 1,191 less than six years ago. The prohibition question was up six years ago, and over 9,000 votes were polled upon the question.

Compared with six years ago the democratic vote on supreme court judge was 798 less, the republican vote is 302 less, and the prohibition vote is 37 more.

In Ann Arbor city Gilday's vote showed an increase in every ward over Landon's vote of six years ago, the increase being as follows: First ward, 49; second, 49; third, 75; fourth, 64; fifth, 12; sixth, 19. The vote for Judge Kinne showed a decrease by wards as follows: First, 15, third, 53; fourth, 49; fifth, 58; and Journal. an increase in the second ward of 9, and 64 in the sixth.

The democratic vote this year in the county was 1,628 less than last fall, the republican vote was 1,017 less, the people's vote was 20 more, and the prohibition vote was 184

Comparing the vote on supreme court justice in Washtenaw with that of two years ago this spring, the democratic vote shows a decrease of 234, the republican an increase of 285, and the prohibition a decrease of 37. The total vote is 104 larger. cratic vote shows an increase over the democratic vote of two years ago are a fool!"-New York Tribune.

this spring: Freedom, 61; Lodi, 1 Lyndon, 12; Saline, 6; Superior following places the democratic vote hows a decrease: Ann Arbor city, o3; Ann Arbor town, 52; Augusta, o; Bridgewater, 39; Dexter, 27; lima, 24; Manchester, 36; Northfield, 39; Pittsfield, 28; Salem, 12; Scio, 25; Sharon, 14; Ypsilanti

A study of these figures should greatly impress the democrats with what might be done if the full vote was gotten out.

Old Silver In Paris.

The Rue de Provence is the home of the secondhand dealer in artistic wares. He is a greater power than the American pawnbroker and has a much cleaner reputation. To wander among these quaint stores is as much in vogue with the moneyed world as with the moneyless. Silverware is there in large quantities and includes every serviceable object from a souvenir spoon to a 5 o'clock tea set. All this mass has the tarnish of age a little polishing powder rejuvenates it, and it passes out to be recognized among its brand new fellows.

A remarkable set of souvenir spoons came under my notice in one of these stores. The half dozen represented Napoleon and his generals. Only the heads of the famous men were visible on the handles, but they were wrought with a perfection that would have done credit Ann Arbor city for justice of the to a photographer. The bowls of the spoons were lined with gold, and the price of the whole combination was only equivalent to $7. It is worth a visit to the Rue to see the piles of small trinkets that gather dust in the windows. A number of seals are 3-inch pieces of silver that show up exquisite carving. I saw one that represented the birth of Christ, with the stable surroundings brought out in surprising detail.-Cor. Jewelers' Review.

The St. Gothard Tunnel Dethroned. The great St. Gothard tunnel, which was begun Oct. 1, 1872, and finished in 1880, is 91 miles in length and cost $196.40 per foot throughout. At present it is the Titan of all the world's tunnels. "These cannot last forever," however, and by the end of 1895 St. Gothard will be dethroned, the great Simplon tunnel, now in course of construction, coming in with the title of "largest and longest tunnel in the world." This new claimant for Titanic honors is being built to supersede the famous "route of the Simplon," a road over the mountains which was constructed by the first Napoleon.

The Simplon tunnel will be almost one fourth longer than the now celebrated St. Gothard, its total length from opening to opening being, according to expert calculations, 124 miles. In short, it is almost exactly three miles longer than St. Gothard. The old "route of the Simplon," which will be practically abandoned when the tunnel is completed, is about 38 miles in length. At present it takes 12 long hours to cross the Simplon route. When the tunnel is finished, less than a half hour will be consumed in making the trip. -St. Louis

The United States Capitol.

The United States capitol at Washington is one of the most majestic build ings in the world. It was first begun in 1793, when the north wing was founded. The precinct giving Hooker the This was finished in 1800, and the south rebuilding did not begin until 1817. Recreations of Great Men.

The favorite recreation of Pope's leisure hours was the society of painters Nothing was more agreeable to the poet than to spend an occasional evening with his friend Kneller, who, to use the words of Thackeray, "bragged more, spelled worse and painted better than any artist of his day." Warburton tells an amusing anecdote of the two friends. Mr. Pope was with Sir Godfrey Kneller one day when his nephew, a Guinea trader, came in. "Nephew," said Sir Godfrey, "you have the honor of seeing the two greatest men in the world." "I don't know how great you may be," said the Guinea man, "but I don't like your looks. > > Wall Papers.

Wall papers were little used in Europe before the eighteenth century, though they had been long before that applied to house decoration by the Chinese. Those that were first manufactured in the west were adaptations of design from Italian brocades, and at first they were used in an unobjectionable manner, just as hangings of the costlier material were employed—namely, to fill spaces between obvious structural lines-and so applied no objection could be made to their use. On the contrary, the invention brought it within the means of almost every householder to fill blank wall spaces with agreeable tracery and harmonious

The cornice, frieze and dado remained intact. Coigns were protected with molding or plaster work, and the inmate might feel that he was living in a built room and not in a bandbox. But gradually the wall features disappeared, paper crept over everything except window and door openings, even into the very angles of the walls, and it is nothing uncommon now on entering a saloon of considerable pretension and proportions to find the walls closely covered with paper from floor to ceiling. save a narrow skirting board to protect the plaster from the housemaid's broom and a cornice reduced to a meager molding.-Blackwood's Magazine.

Good Manners at Home.

The presence of good manners is nowhere more effective than in the household, and perhaps nowhere more rare. Whenever familiarity exists there is a tendency to loosen the check upon selfish conduct, which the presence of strangers involuntarily produces. Many persons who are kind and courteous in company are rude and careless with those they love best. Emerson says, "Good manners are made up of petty sacrifices," and certainly nothing can more thoroughly secure the harmony and peace of the family circle than the habit of making sacrifices for one an-

The Duration of a Dream.

Those learned and scientific gentlemen who have gone into the subject declare the longest dreams hardly last a few minutes. The following instance lends support to their views. One evening Victor Hugo was dictating letters to his secretary. Overcome by fatigue, the great man dropped into a slumber. A few moments afterward he awoke, haunted by a dream which, as he thought had extended over several hours, and he blamed his secretary for sitting there waiting for him, instead of wakening him or else going away. What was his surprise when the bewildered secretary told him that he had only just finished writing the last sentence dictated to him. -Petit Francais.

WRECKED BY STORMS. DETROIT, April 10.—The recent storm that raged in Michigan was one of the most severe and general of the season. The financial loss runs far into the thousands, in a great measure the result of electric bolts.

The losses reported from that source alone exceed $60,000. In the barns destroyed fourteen horses are known to have perished. The rain came down in torrents, varying the monotony at intervals with terrific showers of bailstones. At Grand Rapids telephone and electric lights and motors were burned out, and the electric cars were seriously interfered with. Trees and outhouses were blown down and the floods following the heavy downpour overflowed sewers and flooded cellars. Railroad traffic was somewhat interfered with by the numerous washouts.

BLOODSHED NEAR BANGOR. KALAMAZOO, April 8 .- Andy Camp bell, a farmer, was the chief actor in a double tragedy at his farmhouse 4 miles south of Bangor, Van Buren county, late Friday afternoon. For many years he had had domestic trouble with his wife, and on his request was granted a divorce. Mrs. Campbell had considerable property and the divorce did not end their quarrels. One of her houses was burned under suspicious circumstances. Campbell had his life insured for $2,000 in favor of his 8-year-old son, who was left to his keeping, and five daughters were left without support. Mrs. Campbell had just hired a man to work her farm, which did not please Campbell, and he called on the the and after a few hot words and two shots at her, one striking her in the forehead and the second in the neck. He then turned his revolver against his own forehead and fired a ball into his own brain. Both died instantly. A 16-year-old daughter witnessed the whole tragedy and notified G. H. TOBACCO IN ENGLAND.

AN ENGLISH MANUFACTURER'S VIEW OF THE SOLACING DRUG.

The Workingman's Contempt For Ciga-How They Are Made Up.

No workingman, said an English manufacturer to a London journalist, will smoke cigarettes, and he has a contempt for the lighter, milder, "boys' tobacco," as he terms the qualities which are most in demand by the middle classes. Their names are legion, often fanciful, and the get up of the packages in lead foil and gold printed wrappings varies with every.passing whim.

The tendency is to smoke the lighter kinds, and the run is upon navy cut, which virtually is the same as flake tobacco, which preceded it in popular fla-

Navy cut tobacco is simply tobacco which is partially manufactured, but the consumer persuades himself that a tobacco cannot be genuine unless he breaks it open himself by rubbing it in his hands. For flake and navy cut tobacco the leaf is pressed, and it is then passed under the knife and cut a little coarser than the ordinary sorts. A finely cut tobacco, of the milder kind, is hotter to the tongue than the stronger descriptions. It burns quicker, but the tobacco which is softer and slower in smoking is more potent. None is so powerful as cut cavendish, which is first made into a thick coil or cable, then pressed and afterward cut.

Descending into the cellars the visitor saw a number of presses, some of which contained in trays tobacco for flake or navy cut; others held blocks of cavendish and many more were filled with hanks of "negro head" in rows, square "nail rods" or rolls bound around with cloth and cord to sustain the pressure. Much of these tobaccos is consumed not in the pipe, but as a substitute for smoking when that luxury might be a dangerous one, as in mines, or not permitted by the regulations, as, for example, on board ship or in barracks at forbidden hours. It is not a pleasant thought, but the habit of chewing tobacco is increasing, and the trade has to meet the de-

A first acquaintance with the balls of tobacco was made in the spinning room, where in the course of a year thousands of miles of leaf are spun into stout twine and are then wound into balls, if intended for Irish roll, Limerick roll, pigtail roll or bogy roll, or if it is to be manufactured into negro head it is twisted into hanks, which when pressed are in a convenient form for biting a bit off the end.

Tobacco of a darker description left in the press for some time becomes perfectly black with its own moisture. The reason for this change lies in the fact that the "blood vessels" of the leaf, which contain the nicotine, are crushed and the oil is absorbed into the whole leaf, the surplus exuding from the press as thick and blacker than treacle

A hurried inspection only can be given to the cigars. The best of course are imported from Havana, whose manufacturers take care to retain the pick of the Cuban tobacco at home. But our imports of foreign cigars of all kinds do not represent more than £500,000 of duty, payable at the rate of 5s. 2d. per We do not receive, it is said, more than 4,000 cases of cigars from abroad. Each case contains 100 boxes, or 10,000 cigars. Compared to the enormous number of British eigars manufactured these imports are infinitesimal. Without entering into the details of the work it is sufficient to say that a man can make, by the exercise of skill alone, with the simplest tools, 240 cigars in one day, while a girl can turn out of the cheaper kind from 200 to 300, but the latter require to be pressed in wooden molds to acquire the form which the skill of the man's hand alone supplies.

"A British cigar," the attentive member declares, "should not be sold for more than threepence. We band the best only, for banding is equivalent to a loss of profit of 5 per cent. Some tobacconists have not a foreign cigar in stock to

It was the inspection of a snuff mill, closely resembling a mortar making machine, which suggested the remark: "Every snuff taker who dies lessens the consumption. We use the mill for grinding our refuse and sweepings into snuff, but not for sale. No. We return it to the customs to get a drawback or return of duty. The government authorities once exported this snuff to Jersey, but it came back. Then they tried to burn it, but it would not burn. They must get rid of it, and they want to make sure that it will not return to their hands again.

"What, then, does the custom house do with all the snuff, amounting to more than £150,000 per annum in value?"

"They must first analyze it, then ship it and take it down to the Nore, where they pitch it overboard loose, for if they threw the bags into the water, too, some body would fish them up again. The bags they burn in the government kiln lest some one should buy them and shake the snuff off."

The Best Position For Healthy Sleep.

A doctor writing in a medical paper says: "An immense number of people sleep on the left side, and this is the most common cause of the unpleasant taste in the mouth in the morning, which is generally attributed to dyspepsia. If a meal has been taken within two or three hours of going to bed, to sleep on the left side is to give the stomach a task form. The student of anatomy knows that all food enters and leaves the stomach on the right side, and hence sleeping on the left side soon after eating involves a sort of pumping operation, which is anything but conducive to sound repose. The action of the heart is also interfered with considerably, and the lungs are unduly compressed. It is probable that lying on the back is the most natural position, but few men can rest easily so, and hence it is best to cultivate the habit miles of finger nail in a generation.-St. of sleeping on the right side."

A Badge of Office.

Sylvanus Cobb, Jr., the author of ountless tales of romance and adventure, was a printer by trade, and on one occasion especially his printer's rule served him a good turn. At 17 years of age he had entered the navy, where his duties were arduous and monotonous. rettes-What the Different Kinds of He was serving on the sloop of war Fair-Chewing and Smeking Tobacco Are and | field when it was cruising along the African coast, and one day, desperately tired of his duties, he stood leaning against a gun, his old composing rule in his hand.

"What's that?" asked an abrupt voice, and turning with a start young Cobb saw that the captain was watching him. "It's a printer's rule, sir," was the re-

What are you doing now?" "I am on duty here, in charge of your cabin, sir, and of the ship's time."

'Yes, I know. Mr. Dodd," he called to the officer of the deck, "will you have this man relieved? As soon as you are at liberty," he added, addressing the young man, "report to me in my cabin."

The youth did so and was given a mass of notes referring to various voyages and travels in foreign lands to be sorted and arranged for the printer, This work occupied him during the entire voyage. Thus he had found, thanks to his printer's rule, the easiest berth on board the ship.—Youth's Companion.

A Clever Advertiser.

A gentleman advertised for a wife. and one of the answers to his advertisement was from Preston. After a lot of loving correspondence a meeting was arranged at Preston station. The agreement was that he should carry a light blue silk handkerchief in his left hand, but being suspicious of a sell he went to Preston by an earlier train, and, as he suspected, he found that a few choice spirits had arranged a warm reception for his benefit.

A short time before the train he was expected by was due the lady, accompanied by several young fellows, arrived at the station, and the fellows made themselves scarce when the train was signaled. The advertiser followed them to a hotel to watch the development of the play. The young fellows were awfully disappointed when the young lady reported that their intended victim had not turned up, and they proceeded to appoint a judge, jury and counsel to try him, although he was absent.

The gentleman was asked to be one of the jurymen. All the letters were read, and counsel made their speeches. After he trial was over the company spent a jolly evening, and at its conclusion they accompanied the advertiser to the sta-When his train was just starting, he leaned out of the window and waved his blue handkerchief in the faces of his thunderstruck escort.—London Tit-Bits.

Our Knowledge of Insects.

In England we have about 12,000 species of insects, and it is perhaps not to be expected that the ultimate total, when all the smallest species have been collected and studied as assiduously as the larger ones, will exceed this estimate by more han a few hundred, or at most 1,000 or But with foreign countries it is very different, and I must confess that I was surprised when I lately received a fine new species of phasmida from Mado find that barely half a dozen species had yet been recorded from that sland. If this is the state of our knowledge of such insects as phasmida, how imperfect must it be of the smaller speries of coleoptera, hymenoptera, diptera, etc., many of which are of almost microscopic dimensions!

Many insects are so local and so closely connected with plants which disappear before civilization that the same fate of extermination which has fallen on so nany of the larger animals during the ast century cannot but fall heavily upon these also. It is not too much to say that t is highly probable that a large proporion of the insects at present existing in the world will become extinct before their existence is even known to scientific men.—W. F. Kirby in Knowledge.

Palestine Under the Caliphs.

In the first century of the decline of the great caliphs of Bagdad, Bernard, a Breton monk from the celebrated monstery of Mont St. Michel, set out for the Holy Land, traveling first to Rome. He found the Saracens in possession of Bari and transporting thousands of Italian Christians captives to Egypt and Barbary. After a month's sailing he reached Alexandria, where heavy tolls were levied, and so entered Palestine from the south by Gaza. His account contains the first known notice of the miracle of the holy fire, which must have been a recent custom, or Antony and Willibald, Sylvia and Paula would not all alike have been silent on the subject. He also speaks of the hospice for pilgrims erected by Charlemagne in Jerusalem near the sight afterward famous as the Hospital of the Knights of St. John.—Edinburgh Review.

He Liked to Be Late.

Brignoli never was known to be ready to go on the stage to sing his part. He had to wait one minute or several minutes before appearing. In this he was a great trouble to managers. "Just give me one minute more," he would beg, and which is difficult in the extreme to per- when that was up he would plead for another and another till all patience was exhausted .- New York Tribune.

WHY THE INTERVIEWER EXISTS.

A Few Reasons to Account for the Popularity of One Form of Journalism.

Why do persons of notoriety admit the domestic interviewer? Probably a number of reasons may be assigned. The most respectable is indolent good nature; it is easier to say "yes" than "no;" to have the tiles in your fireplace described as "Persian," and, at the same time, as the work of an Englishman, than to keep your drawing room for your acquaintances. This is the fairest plea for permitting your person and furniture to be exhibited to the suburban citizen who, honest man, probably never heard of you and cares very little about you.

Again the patient may really like being talked about in public-may enjoy the idea of permitting all the world to know, as Mr. Allen says, "curious little details which might be left to your conscience, your cook and the commissioners of inland revenue." It is an odd taste, but it is possible that "the animals enjoy it." The interviewed may pretend to complain, but may really rejoice. The public does not mind it, the patient is pleased, the interviewer earns his fee in the way he has been inspired

All this may be admitted, but the plea of necessity cannot be admitted. Again, probably many of the patients think an "interview" a good advertisement. They are brought before the public notice; therefore the public will read their books or buy their pictures. This is a sad mistake. The public which reads interviews knows nothing about the interviewed author and his works, cares nothing about them nor about anything of the sort. "Here is gossip about somebody whose name I have seen in the papers,' says the reader, so he reads the gossip, but there his interest ends.

The theory of advertisement, of profit to accrue from a little more of personal notoriety, is a blunder. The public of this kind cares to know that an author squints, weighs 12 stone 10 or has a broken nose, or uses a thick handled pen; but as to what he writes with that pen this kind of public is serenely in-different. Where, then, is the necessity for admitting the interviewer? Necessity there is none, but indolence, vanity, love of notoriety, are likely to keep the author of interviews in full employ-

Mr. Blathwayt has added to his volume a defense of his art, in which he says practically that "Zenophon" in-terviewed "Socrates." An author who talks of "Zenophon" falls a little short of the universal knowledge which it seems is necessary for the ideal interviewer.-London Saturday Review.

Gibraltar and Spain.

It may be objected that, although Gibraltar might be useless to us as against Spain, it would still, in wartime, be useful to us as against any other power. It certainly might be useful to a very mod-fied extent. It is nevertheless a matter of notoriety that Spain ardently desires to regain possession of the fortress, and it is scarcely conceivable that, unless we were actually fighting for the protection of Spanish interests, Spain would remain rigidly neutral while another power was attempting to expel us from the rock.

In order to secure the more or less active co-operation of Spain the other power would merely have to give some secret pledge that, having once gained possession of Gibraltar, she would hand it over without charge to its ancient owners. France, there is no doubt, would, with things standing as they do at present, be very glad to see Spain

Man and Wolf Surprised.

A hunter and a wolf had an interesting mutual surprise party to themselves in the hills near Helena a few days ago, The hunter, arrayed in a heavy wolfskin overcoat, fur side outward, was examining some traps set the previous night. He was stooping over one, rearranging the bait, when there was a fierce growl, and a heavy weight fell suddenly on his back, so that he barely missed being caught in his own trap. He managed to shake himself free, and recovering his feet found facing him a full grown buffalo wolf. The wolf seemed quite as much surprised as the hunter, and they looked at each other some seconds before the fight, which ended in the death of the wolf, began. The brute evidently was fooled by the coat and the hunter's stooping position and mistook him for another wolf.-Big Horn County Rustler.

Curious Mode of Catching Turtles.

A curious mode of catching turtles is practiced in the West Indies. It consists in attaching a ring and a line to the tail of a species of sucker fish known as the remora. The live fish is then thrown overboard and immediately makes for the first turtle he can spy, to which he attaches himself very firmly by means of a sucking apparatus arranged at the top of his head. Once attached to the tur-tle, so firm is his grip that the fisherman on drawing the line brings home both turtle and the sucker .- Exchange.

A Creature From the Fire.

Aristotle believed that some creatures were capable of supporting life even though confined to the devouring element. He says: "In Cyprus, when the manufacturers of chalcitis (lime) burn it many days in the fire, a winged creature something larger than a great fly is seen emerging from the stone and leaping and walking about in the fire. These creatures perish immediately upon being removed from the furnace."—St. Louis Republic.

Good Authority for "Boughten."

"Boughten" has the authority of age, example and well-considered use by Coleridge, Southey and others. Still more weighty authority is found in a story told to us by Roscoe Conkling, who was present at a fashionable hotel in Philadelphia thirty years ago, when a lady asked for tea. The reply was, "Will you have sassafras tea or boughten tea?"—New

Sentenced to Matrimony.

A young man and a young woman were contesting possession of a piece of property, the one claiming under an old lease, the other under an old will.

"It strikes me," said the justice, "that there is a pleasant and easy way to terminate this lawsuit. The plaintiff seems to be a respectable young man, and this is a very nice young woman. They can both get married and live upon the farm. If they go on with the law proceedings, the property will all be frit-tered away among the lawyers, who, I am sure, are not ungallant enough to wish the marriage not to come off."

The lady blushed, and the young man stammered that they "liked each other a little bit," so a verdict was rendered for the plaintiff on the condition of his promise to marry the defendant within two months, a stay of execution being put to the verdict till the marriage ceremony should be completed.

This is about the first couple ever sentenced to matrimony in a court of law. -Gripsack.

A Woman Superintendent.

The momentous question whether it should be a lady superintendent or wom-an superintendent has been decided by the trustees of the normal college. The executive committee had recommended that the bylaws of the college be amended by designating one of the professors woman superintendent.

Commissioner Lummis said he preferred lady superintendent. While there was no doubt that woman superintendent was correct, still he thought the term was not generally applied in institutions of as much dignity as the normal college. He made an amendment that lady be inserted instead of woman.

Commissioner Hubbell said woman was better form than lady. Mr. Lummis withdrew his amendment, and it is now woman superintendent .- New York

The mighty wind, the breath of God, Struck Ypsilanti yester eve; It raved and tore. While neonle swore.

It smashed the glass in house and store, And left the town to grieve. It struck the "Hawkins" at the rear: The Opera House demolished quite; The Cleary College in its wrath It swept in fragments from its path, And with a cold, sardonic laugh, And left it "out of sight."

It struck the Occidental, too, It scattered brick and sash and glass: The inmates stricken were with awe, And dropped was every lower jaw, They stared at what they heard and saw The crash—the debris mass.

It hit the Carriage Factory "square," It swept the roof adown the street, It played with lovely maidens' hair, It tossed their ringlets in the air, Hoon-skirts presented pictures rare, Exposing pretty feet.

It raved among the lofty trees, Whose infant foliage kissed the sky, It tore their branches in its rage, Which naught but havoc could assuage. It seemed that devils from the "cage" Were celebrating high. It spared the churches and saloons,

But still the people in them trembled, In one the people praised the Lord, In one the people whisky poured, The while the wind in tury roared And frightened those assembled.

It passed a whisky shop and smelt The rank decoctions that it sold, And with a murmur of disgust It spread its wings-away it rushed-And in a moment all was hushed. Thus is the story told.

Ah! little Babylon, beware! Be pure, as is your sister, Ann, Else God will sweep you through the air Like devils dancing the Kan-Kan.

Legends About the Moon. "In Ceylon," says John Fiske, "it is said that as Sakyamuni was one day wandering half starved in the forest a pious hare met him and offered itself to be slain and cooked for dinner, whereupon the holy Buddha set it on high in the moon that future generations of men might see it and marvel at its piety.'

Reading Aloud.

The possession of the marvelous and intricate faculty of articulate speech eems no more miraculous to the unthinking than do the eternal varieties of eating, drinking and sleeping. Yet the former is arbitrary and conventional, the invention of man-perhaps not confined to him, if Professor Garner of monkey speech fame is to be believed-while the latter are natural, absolute common, and the sine qua non of existence.

The office of speech—the celebrated French diplomat to the contrary notwithstanding—is to convey thought. How important, then, that this vehicle of thought transference, this common carrier of ideas, this carriage laden with the most delicate and elusive of burdens, nothing less than the very essence of the soul-perishable freight, indeedshould be carefully watched and developed to its highest and best capacity.

The comparative ease with which the average individual may be taught to express the thoughts of himself or others in an intelliget, intelligible, even pleasing fashion, makes it seem almost criminal to neglect such a vast possible addition to the general good.

In none of the arts-for reading is not only an art, but the noblest of them all -does general information, education mediately all the other scientists and intelligence count for so much .- A. P. Burbank in Godey's.

Resolutions of Respect.

The following resolutions of respect were adopted at the meeting of J. T. Jacobs Camp, No. 90, on Friday evening last:

Whereas, We are again called to bow in humble submission to the decree of the Supreme Commander, who in his divine wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst our comrade and brother, Ernest E. Woodmansee;

Whereas, We feel his loss as only those can whose friendship and frater-nity has been sealed by the blood and sufferings of brave and noble sires on the battlefields of the Republic; Whereas, We shall ever sadly miss him from our earthly encampment and broken ranks as only a kind and faithful friend, a true and loyal brother, can be missed; therefore be it Resolved, That we unite in expressing our sincere sorrow at so early a loss of so valued a comrade, even though we cannot but feel that he has been detailed to a higher and a grander life where the harmony of heavenly music is unbroken by clash of arms and contentions of earth. Resolved, That we extend our heart-felt sympathy to the members of the bereaved family circle in whose aching hearts we feel there is a void that can never be filled, and that such further action be taken as becomes our order in memory of our sacred dead.

A VISION OF THE PAST.

Strange dreams of what I used to be And what I dreamed I would be, swim Before my vision, faint and dim As misty distances we see In pictured scenes of fairy lands; And ever on, with empty hands, And eyes that ever lie to me, And smiles that no one understands, I grope adown my destiny.

Some say I waver when I walk
Along the crowded thoroughfares.
And some leer in my eyes, and talk
Of dullness, when I see in theirs—
Like fishes' eyes, alive or dead—
But surfaces of vacancy—
Blank disks that never seem to see,
But glint and glow and glare instead, The ragged shawl I wear is wet
With driving, dripping rains, and yet
It seems a royal raiment, where,
Through twisted torrents of my hair,
I see rare gems that gleam and shine
Like jewels in a stream of wine;
The gaping shoes that clothe my feet
Are golden sandals, and the shrine
Where courtiers grovel and repeat Where courtiers grovel and repeat Vain prayers, and where in joy thereat, A fair prince doffs his plumed hat,

And kneels, and names me all things sweet. Sontetimes the sun shines, and the bill Sometimes the sun shines, and the lull Of winter noon is like a tune
The stars might twinkle to the moon
If night were white and beautiful—
For when the clangor of the town.
And strife of traffic softens down.
The wakeful hunger that I nurse,
In listening, forgets to curse,
Until—ah, joyl with drooping head
I drowse, and dream that I am dead
And buried safe beyond their eyes

THE WATER DOCTOR.

"My well has went dry this summerplumb gave out last month, an the river three miles away. Hed to rig up a barrel on runners an haul all the water for the wimmen folks,"

California, far from the great irrigation ditches and prosperous orange growing colonies. He was talking to a neighbor whose land claim was just over the ridge in a more fertile district. Gloriana, as the new settlement was named, had only two things to recommend it—the climate was fairly good and the land very cheap.

Otherwise it was a sorry place. The soil was shallow and very poor, the hills were low, barren and without streams, so that any irrigation system was impossible. Nevertheless the Morisons had given up their little home in northern Iowa and moved to California, actuated by the same motive that often led millionaires—the daughter could not stand the winters. They and dozens of other families were scattered through the hills trying to make a living by chopping wood, keeping bees and doing a little farming. And now the well had gone dry, adding another burden to those al-

"All the wells hereabouts give out dry seasons," was the answer that Morison received. "There doesn't seem to be any water in the hills this side of the range.

"I don't see what to do, then. Bees was beginnin to pay, an I thort of plantin an orchard down on the beach. There's about an acre of good land down that way. The chickins is doin pretty well, too, but it do take a dreadful lot of water

"Well, Morison, mebbe Crane, the half cracked water doctor down at Sespe, might fix it up. He claims that he can find water; in fact, he does more than meeting of the Detroit Presbytery than that. He's queer and crazy, but for 20 years people haven't been goin to his cabin after dark, there's so many electric wires and things that might explode underfoot and overhead

"I don't care," said Morison, "I'll go shaggy, broad shouldered, massive, with an immense hooked nose and piercing eyes. He lived alone in a cabin at the who has been visiting Mrs. Eugene head of a ravine, and he had arranged bell and wires along the narrow path so that he had ample warning of the ap-

He received Morison with grave po-

"That's all right," he said, "you new President Austin Scott, of Rut-Certainly you do. But it isn't a little river-that I might be able to find. If one of my inventions was only a trifle nearer completed, I would make the river for you settlers.

"I hope so, doctor," said Morison,

"Yes, I will, and pretty soon too. I'll tell you all about it some of these days. It's only electric action makes water, and the earth is a great electric battery. There's a way to make gold, or diamonds or mineral water by electric action. I know all about it."

Morison had driven to Sespe, so Dr. Crane, "the world famous water de veloper," as his circulars stated, rode back to Gloriana that afternoon, carrying with him a long brass tube filled with clustered and tensely strung wires. He also had a simple galvanic battery to which the wires could be attached.

A number of the settlers of the mountain region assembled the next day to witness the operations of the necromancer, who fully appreciated his importance and surrounded his mystic art with every accompaniment of surprise. He showed the wondering company that as he approached a vessel of water the wires grew tenser and fairly sang like violin

"I must say it's providential we heard of you," said Mrs. Morison, with heartfelt earnestness and entire conviction.

The water doctor finally began active operations at the lower corner of the Morison land claim and walked back and forth across it in various directions. At last he paused high up on the hillside and told his followers to observe the behavior of his instrument. There certainly was an electrical disturbance of a very violent sort, he said, and they were standing over an underground reservoir. He marked the exact spot, and the men began digging with violent energy, while the women and children sat on the slope and awaited results.

The doctor encouraged them by stories of his previous exploits. "There's no chance of failure with this electrical machine of mine. I call it the infallible water indicator.' The old forked stick of hazel will sometimes turn over water.

Within a year after its discovery thousands of farms will be taken up, and the desert will become one of the gardens of the world." but my way is a heap better. I know exactly how far you have got to dig and exactly how much water you'll find. I always know. Then, too, this machine tells me when I am over any mineral. such as gold and silver, and how far off it is; also how large the quantity. 1 should have been a rich man long ago if I wasn't so honest. I know of one man down at Sespe who has a mine on his land worth $1,000,000. I offered to show it to him for half, but he offered me only 10 per cent, and of course I let him simmer awhile. But I came out to give you newcomers a lift without any charge, except nominal, because you're a differ-

After awhile the strain of excitement grew too great for speech. The men were far down in the pit they were sinking, and every few minutes they were relieved by others. Ten feet, 20 feet, 30 feet—a rude windlass had long been brought into use. Suddenly a hoarse cry rose from the well: "Water! Water! An ample spring in a channel of rock had been uncovered in such wise that it was certain that a cut could be made so as to let it flow to the very door of the Morisons.

The old doctor's eyes fairly blazed with excitement. Any physician trained in obscure mental disorders would have recognized cerebral trouble in his look and manner. He burst forth into a shout of victory.

"Edison ought to be here!" he cried. "The man is all wrong on electricity. So are the rest of them. They have no system. I can make power direct from raw material. I can take the electricity straight out of the coal without burning it. I can set a machine at making The speaker was a new settler in one water whenever a man wants it. This of the coast range valleys of southern is the way nature does in the heart of the earth. Rivers are being created by electrical action in caverns where not a drop of rainwater can ever sink. This spring we have found has nothing to do with the surface and is not fed by rains. It is created by electrical action between two kinds of rock, and it will flow alike at all seasons.

The settlers listened in dumb amazement, but with full faith in every word, They named it the "Crane spring" and praised him with hearty enthusiasm. They feasted him on the best they had, escorted him back to Sespe and went way firm champions of the water doctor. Dr. Crane was a man of more than ordinary ability, but his education had been slight and his powers were entirely unbalanced. Whether he really had the sensitive organization of the true seer. whether he was deceived or deceiver, sane or not wholly himself, no human being will ever know. But the records of whole districts, and even counties, remain to attest to the wonderful discoveries of hidden water that he managed to make at intervals, in many places, far apart. He made some egregious failures also, and in time the community was divided into two nearly equal bodies respectively arguing for and against his honesty. Meanwhile he still dwelt in his lonely cabin, brooding over a larger

What was the use, he argued, of finding a spring now and then, or telling some poor settler where to find his well' Why not develop at one stroke a rivera large river in the Mohave desert-and so reclaim hundreds of thousands of acres of rich land? By dint of earnest representation of the fortunes to be obtained he succeeded in enlisting the help of a number of poor settlers in the vicinity of Sespe, Gloriana and other places They agreed to go with him to the Mo Dr. Orlando Crane was very tall and have desert, dig a great pit in the spo the hidden river. Then, filing claims on the adjacent lands, they would lay out a town and establish a colony.

Thus it happened that a few weeks later The Weekly Venturan published an article that startled the people of three counties. It was headed in fullface screamers:

ORLANDO THE PROPHET. HE SUCCUMBS TO OUR INTERVIEWER.

ARE WE ON THE VERGE OF A VAST INDUSTRIAL REVOLUTION?

THE SAGE OF SESPE SAYS WE ARE.
These sentences, printed in the largest available type, loomed over a 3-column article that was in its way a master-piece. Whoever wrote it had a fresh, vivid genius for expressing the situation Crane's personal appearance, the very tones of his voice, his mingling of charlatan and fanatic, his whole nature and history, stood out as under a calcium nght.

"Dr. Crane," said the reporter, "consented at last to disclose the scientific principles on which he worked, yielding to the argument that no one but himself could apply them."

"The cbb and flow of electricity makes and unmakes from the simple elements all forms of the animal, vegetable and inferral world. My discovery that the mineral that we call water is formed in immense quantities in the earth by electrical currents was followed by the greater discovery that all inheren's are earth by electrical currents was followed by the greater discovery that all minerals are made in the same way. By modifying my ap-paratus for ascertaining the presence of water, I was able to discover the exact distance of de-posits of minerals, also their nature and quan-ity. Proceeding a step farther, I became able to find certain places in caves and narrow can-yons, where the natural flow of the electric current caused the slow deposit of various minerals. There are mines in the Sierras where gold is regularly and consistently formed in the lower levels.

where gold is regularly and consistently formed in the lower levels.

"After the hidden river of the Mohave is revealed, I shall find mountains of the precious minerals. The next thing will be to make trees grow to full size in a day or an hour. That will take larger machinery, but it can be done. The full control of animal life will take still longer."

"But what is the underlying principle, doctor?" asked the reporter.

"Haven't I made it as plain as a primer? Don't I say it is electricity, and nothing else? If I can handle it, I can get away with all the rest of them."

rest of them."
"You certainly will. But how do you handle

"To tell you the truth, it is a personal git spin fine wires of steel and stretch them with ther metals into an instrument that I call my other metals into an instrument that I call my 'diviner.' Then I tune it with whatever! want—water or iron or gold or any other metal—and fix it permanently on that keynote. After that wherever I take it it responds to that and that only. This is the way I make my instruments, and as I don't really suppose any one else can do it I have never applied for a patent. Of course if I said much about these matters people would think I was crazy; so I expect to find the river first, then I can do more."

"Tell me about the river."

"I heard it a few weeks ago on the Mohave

The Venturan explained at much length the inventor's theories of colonization and ended by advising those who had leisure and a little money to spare to "take a trip to the Mohave to watch the modern Moses perform his great transformation act.'

November saw 100 pioneers gathered at the mouth of a rocky ravine at the end of a chain of rocky mountains that thrust themselves far into the desert. Their horses were staked out in the midst of cactus and yuccas; wagons full of hay, water, provisions—hauled 25 miles from the nearest oasis-were scattered about the camp. Dr. Crane had chosen the place and marked the exact spot where he said the river was hardly 50 feet underground.

The men dug through several feet of hard sand, then reached a tough, red clay. They toiled in a great pit that steadily descended until one nightfall the doctor announced that on the morrow the river would be reached. He marked the course of the coming river across the barren desert and far out on the plain; the wagons were moved to a place of safety, and every thought was given up to rejoicing.

At midnight the wind changed, the temperature fell sharply; an old prospector who had spent half his life in the Arizona deserts woke and went from man to man rousing them to bring in the animals and seek shelter among the higher rocks away from the mouth of the ravine. "There is a storm coming!" he cried. "I have seen storms in such places before now." By dint of much energy he was at last able to move the party out of the direct sweep of the canvon. Presently the storm arose, terrible as the desert itself, heralded by a mighty wind, darkened by wild clouds and blinding sheets of rain. Just at break of day, when the storm was at its height, while the desert for miles was under water, while the railroad track was being swept away, and the hills were being furrowed by thousands of new channels, there came a loader noise from the deserted pit in the ravine. The men, clinging to shelters among the great bowlders on the hill, saw a high, white wall of water moving like a flash across the flat, as if new risen from the chasm they had out with their shove

"It is the river bursting out!" cried Dr. Crane, leaping forward to meet it and stumbling into the forming current. "It's a cleadburst, boys, and the old doctor's gone forever!" should the pros-

A mile distant upon the drenched sand the body of the water doctor was found and laid to rest on the hillside. Date and a refollow, and that is all,

The followers of the dead man continued to sink the pit until it was far below the assigned depth. Some of them gave up then; others continued to toil on in dogged despair; a few declared roundly that they might bore to the middle of the earth before they found water. One after the other the followers of the late Orlando Crane collected their horses from the plain, gathered up their belongings and abandoned the water claim in the Mohave. They drifted back to the fertile valleys of the coast, and little by little the memory of the episode pass d out of the thoughts of men, until even in Gloriana the waters that once gushed from beneath the magician's rod have lost their earlier name and are now the "Morison springs."-Charles Howard Shinn in Argonaut.

Balaam and the Ass Up to Date.

The sun of the golden May morning was streaming through the branches of the trees that lined the walk, and the sweet spring air, just touched with a fading memory of frost, caused the blood to rush through the veins and rendered my Sanday morning walk pleasant and invigorating.

I had just passed a stately church, from which the school children were emerg ing, some running and romping, some quiet and erderly and some clustered around their teachers. Ahead of me was a little group composed of a teacher and seven or eight scholars, among which was the regulation bad boy.

The subject of their conversation was "Balaam and the Ass," evidently the school lesson for the day. The teacher, a sweet faced young lady, was busy answering the questions of the children. Finally one of the youngest placed himself in front of her, walking backward, and said:

"Miss Anna, you said the ass spoke to Balaam. What did he say?"

"Why I am surprised that you don't know," answered the teacher. "Now, Jimmie," she said, turning to the bad boy, "you tell Frankie what the ass said to Balaam.

"He said 'Come off.' " answered Jimmie as he tripped one of his companions

"Why, James," said the horrified in structor. "What do you mean? What makes you think he said 'Come off?' '

"'Cause," answered the hopeful as 1 passed the group, "he knowed dat Balaam was onto him."-Chicago News.

The Wisdom of Fools. Folly, in the abstract, has been denounced alike by Scripture and ancient heathen sages. "If I wish to look at a fool," says Seneca, "I have not far to look. I have only to look in a mirror." The Emperor Maximilian distinguished the dullest of his counselors by the title of the king of fools. Once when he addressed a prosy adviser by this title the gentleman neatly enough replied: "I wish with all my heart I were king of fools. I chould have a glorious kingdom, and your imperial majesty would be among my subjects."-Youth's Com-
