HEROES OF THE WAR.

Their Old Comrades Honor Their Memory Appropriately.

THE STATE WOMAN'S PRESS ASSOCIATION.

Ann Arbor Will Entertain Bright Michigan Women.—The Program of the Week.—Annual June Festival of St. Thomas' Conservatory of Music.

To Mr. Nobles Memory.

The University Musical society has passed the following resolutions on the death of Mr. A. L. Noble:

By the death of Adelbert Lewis Noble, the University Musical Society has lost one of the most active and useful of its board of directors. Wise in council, strong in hope, prompt in action, he was an earnest advocate of everything that promised to further the best interests of the society. He was a man of high ideals and a delicate sense of honor. His practical knowledge of business affairs and his sound judgment made him always an invaluable adviser, and especially in connection with the establishing of the University School of Music. It was largely through his efforts that the building erected last year for the use of the school was secured. His untiring service will ever be held in grateful remembrance.

In this hour of affliction the society extends its deepest sympathy to the bereaved family.

Heroes Remembered.

As usual on Decoration Day our city honored herself by fittingly honoring the memory of those who perished in the service of their country. This is a sacred duty imposed by the teachings of all ages, of all religions and of all ideas of patriotism.

Life imposes no higher obligations than that of focusing our thoughts occasionally on the nation's heroic dead and bedecking with flowers the graves of those who laid down their lives a willing sacrifice for a cause they valued so highly. He whose devotion to his conceptions of right and loyalty to principle would impel him to such sacrifice deserves to be remembered. The benefit to the living resulting from these commemorative exercises is inestimable, for "he who is taught to be true to the memory of the dead is never recreant in his duty to the living."

The program as announced in our last week's issue was carried out in detail. About 2 o'clock in the afternoon members of the G. A. R., S. of V. and W. R. C. assembled at the court house where conveyances were in waiting to carry them to the cemeteries. On arriving at the Fifth ward cemetery and in the presence of the graves of the veterans there resting, Commander W. K. Childs made some fitting remarks and was followed by Col. H. S. Dean. Then the school children of the Fifth ward sang several national songs and strewed flowers about the soldier's monument. The poem, "Cover Them Over With Beautiful Flowers" was then rendered by Mrs. Moore, of the W. R. C. Then came the ritual exercises conducted by Chaplain Perkins and the firing of a salute by a squad of the G. A. R.

A return was then made to the starting point for more flowers and about 4 o'clock the procession started for Forest Hill cemetery where the singing of "The Vacant Chair" was given by the school children of the first and sixth wards. The ritual exercises followed, and then Edwin E. Hallett, of the S. of V., recited "The Red, the White and the Blue." A salute was then fired, the graves were decorated, and lastly all joined in singing "America." This closed the afternoon exercises.

In the evening a magnificent audience assembled in University hall to listen to the singing of patriotic music by the school children, an address by Hon. James O'Donnell, of Jackson, and other exercises. Commander W. K. Childs said in opening the program that the evening exercises were especially for the children. No grander opportunity for instilling in the minds of the hundreds of children there assembled, patriotic sentiments could be imagined. The surroundings and the exercises could not fail to make a vivid impression upon their youthful minds. They performed their part in the program beautifully and well and reflected much credit upon their teacher, Miss Cole.

The address of Mr. O'Donnell was carefully prepared, and read from manuscript. It contained many beautiful thoughts and patriotic sentiments. He said that Decoration day had not the fullness of meaning that it should have. Even those who were bereaved by the war did not always remember the day to observe it in fitting manner, as time was clever in healing and mellowing sorrows. Nevertheless it was the duty of the living to see to it that the dead of the nation were never forgotten and that the day never went unobserved. He gave many impressive statistics of the war, and tried to picture its cost in years of human life. It was a good address throughout, and fitting to the occasion. After the address Mr. E. F. Hall recited the "Battle of Gettysburg," and did it finely. He was roundly applauded. The exercises closed with "America" by the audience.

A NEW POSTOFFICE.

The Prospects are Good for a New Building Here.

CONGRESSMAN GORMAN AT WORK AGAIN.

Our Regular Washington Letter will Prove Interesting to Our Readers.

—The Tariff on Iron.—Views on the Early Convention.—Etc., Etc.

Special Capitol News Co. Correspondence.
WASHINGTON, D. C., May 29, 1894.

It now seems self-evident that instead of leaving iron ore on the free list, as was at first expected, the majority in the United States Senate will pass the tariff bill with a duty of 40 cents per ton on that product, in which Michigan is so largely interested. In making a vigorous fight for 75 cents instead of 40, Senator McMillan recently made his second speech of the past few weeks. What he said was not intended as a set speech, but he made a strong argument in favor of his claim that the tariff agitation of the past year and a half, had seriously crippled that great industry—in fact had almost stopped it for the time being. The Senator made a strong plea that the rate of duty might be fixed at 75 cents, the rate in the present McKinley law. Those in charge of the bill could not see it in the light he saw it, and decided that 40 cents was high enough, and there it will remain in all probability.

In his recent annual report, Labor Commissioner Morse, of Michigan, devoted a chapter to Michigan iron mines and miners, and that chapter Senator McMillan incorporated into his speech as published in the Congressional Record.

As before stated in this correspondence, the house committee on public buildings and grounds some time ago assured Congressman Gorman that if it was decided to pass any public building bills during this congress, his bill for a building at Ann Arbor should have precedence over all the other bills or a similar sort for Michigan cities. For all the months of the session, nothing has been done by the committee, at least not a single bill for a building in any state, has been acted upon and reported. Word was given out that Uncle Sam was out of money and hard up, and that until his finances picked up a bit, the building of public buildings could be considered as having gone into "innocuous desuetude," or words to that effect.

Recently the committee has begun reporting bills again. This fact is very gratifying to Mr. Gorman, for it indicates that the powers that be intend to pass a few of those bills during this congress. If so, Michigan will surely be given at least one building, and, under the understanding, Mr. Gorman believes that one will more than likely be his Ann Arbor building. He surely has strong hopes that his confidence has not been betrayed, and that he may live to see a fine building erected at the university city by the government. Of course all the other members of the delegation, most of whom have from one to three similar bills before the committee, will kick vigorously against the claim that Ann Arbor is more deserving than their cities, but luck has been coming Mr. Gorman's way of late, and he believes it will not desert him now.

For years an effort has been repeatedly made to secure an appropriation for the construction of a steam fog-signal and pier head light and steam fog-signal station at Ludington, such a safe-guard against the loss of lives and property having long been a great necessity there. In fact at no point on the great lakes is one needed more than at Ludington. All efforts have, however, failed, and possibly may fail again, but it now looks as though Congressman Moon is about to succeed in his efforts to secure such an improvement for his district. Some months ago he introduced a bill appropriating $5,500 for the establishment and erection of the fog-signal and $4,500 for the station. The committee on commerce, having the bill in charge, has now reported it favorably and without amendment, and it is very likely to pass both houses long before the close of the present session. It is true that many bills are favorably reported and then fail to pass, but Mr. Moon has good reasons to believe this will not be one of that kind.

At least three of Michigan's democratic congressmen are of the opinion that the democratic state committee made a bad mistake when they called the state convention for such an unusually early date. Mr. Whiting is yet under the physician's care, and so his opinion can not be had, but as Chairman Campau was here and had several conferences with him, it is reasonable to suppose that he preferred an early convention, and helped to fix upon the date chosen. In conversation today Congressman Gorman said to the writer hereof: "Messrs. Richardson, Weadock and myself have talked it over, and we are of the opinion that the convention has been called too early. It is evident that the tariff and other important pending legislation will not be closed up and out of the way during June, and so we shall not be in a condition to submit to the people the best and wisest platform, because we shall not know just what will be done before congress finally completes its work and adjourns. Such an early convention will make the campaign unnecessarily long, and long campaigns are always tedious as well as expensive to all parties concerned, and no advantage is ever gained by such long ones as a June convention will give us."

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable, carefully prepared from the best ingredients.

Strange Names of Towns.

The maps of the United States show that the first settlers of many of the towns and cities must have been at a loss for names. Everybody has heard of Red Dog and You Bet in California, and Yuba Dam has been accorded a line in history, but when it comes to Dog Tooth of Illinois, Flea Hill of North Carolina and Fly Mountain of Ulster county, N. Y., their existence would never be imagined unless noticed on a map or in a gazetteer. But there are many other places with names just as striking—Bobtown, Pa.; Bug Hill, N. C.; Chewtown, Pa.; Cut Shin, Ky., and Fiddletown, Cal., for instance. Or if these are not sufficient there are Fussville, Wis.; Daddy's Creek, Tenn.; Calfkiller, in the same state, and Big Foot, in Indiana.

Ohio has a Belle Center, Iowa a Callopo, Indiana a Lilly Dale, West Virginia a Little Wild Cat, Maryland a Maiden's Choice, South Dakota a Minnehaha, Wyoming a Miser, Pennsylvania a Nazareth and Illinois a Prettyman. There are others, such as Young Blood, Ills.; Young Womanstown, Pa.; Whisky Town, Cal.; Ty Ty, Ga.; Big Neck, Ills., and Black Jack flourishes in Mississippi, Kansas, Arkansas and Tennessee. To reach Bliss one has to go to Wyoming county, N. Y., and the only state that has a Bird in Hand is Pennsylvania.—New York Herald.

The Reconciliation of Enemies.

Our observation of the reconciliation of persons who have once been enemies leads us to regard such a thing as usually nominal and superficial, rather than real and heartfelt. People who have quarreled before they were ever acquainted may learn that they had been mutually mistaken and may come to like each other very much. So also slight misunderstandings between friends may be healed and forgotten. But when old acquaintances seriously fall out, while they each forego all opportunity and desire for revenge, we doubt whether the warmth of the first affection is often, if ever, entirely renewed. The scars of the deep wounds remain. It is easier to keep the confidence of a hundred men than to regain that of one man who has once become estranged.—New York Ledger.

A POPULAR ELOCUTIONIST.

Mrs. J. W. Reynolds, of Elletts, Ohio, Restored to Health.

Mrs. Reynolds, the well-known elocutionist and authoress, says she has suffered with congestion of the lungs, catarrh of the head, and was troubled with a bad cough. She had tried a number of physicians, but they all failed to cure her. She was induced to try Pe-ru-na, and immediately a marked change took place. After using Pe-ru-na her cough ceased, and in a short time her other ailments were cured. She is now completely restored to health and gives all the credit to Pe-ru-na. Speaking of lung diseases, Dr. Hartman says in a recent lecture: "For the multitudes of people that I treat annually for every imaginable form of throat and lung disease, Pe-ru-na is my invariable prescription. People come hundreds of miles, at great expense, to consult me for acute and chronic coughs, to return home with some advice and a bottle of Pe-ru-na, which they can continue to get at the nearest drug store; and the fame I enjoyed in the treatment of such troubles comes from the use of this wonderful compound." A free book on chronic diseases of the lungs, chronic catarrh, etc., sent by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, of Columbus, Ohio.

WHERE HE FOUND HIS NAME.

Gentlemanly Dick, the Bus Driver Who Defended the Fair Sex.

"Gentlemanly Dick he was called," and the speaker took his pipe out of his mouth and glanced around the waiting room where he and two comrades were sitting watching for the night express with the hope of getting a few passengers for the hotels. They were all bus drivers, young and hearty looking fellows.

"Yes," mused one of the men, "I know who he is. I see him one day not long since. He had just rescued a poor, 'croppy' looking dog from the boys and said he was going to take it home to his gals. What was the reason of his being called 'Gentlemanly Dick'?"

"Didn't you never know?" asked the first speaker.

"Nope. Let's hear about it. I've had some curiosity to know," and the other two men lit their pipes afresh and settled themselves comfortably in expectation of the forthcoming interesting narrative.

"Well, you see, he used to drive for the Brown House. Drove their best bus for eight years, and he allus tipped his hat to the passengers. Some of them he seen so often he got to know 'em, and they'd say some pleasant thing now and then to make a feller feel good. One night him and me was settin round this here stove, and there was four fellers come in. They sat down in that there corner," and the speaker jerked his thumb toward the spot indicated, "and begun to talk. I was settin here smokin and Dick was smokin too. He wasn't sayin much, but seemed to be doin some deep thinkin. Every little while he would run his fingers through his thin gray hair.

"All of a sudden one of them fellers let out a string of oaths as long as my arm." And the speaker held out a good brawny specimen for illustration.

"Dick didn't say nothin, but he looked up sudden and scowled; then he puffed away on his pipe again. Finally one of them made a remark. Well, it was pretty sweepin. 'Twas about women in general, and there wasn't no gettin round it. It made me hot. Well, sir, Dick got right up and walked over to them.

"'Boys,' he sez, 'I've lived nearly 60 years, and in the same space of time I've never heard so much profanity, vile talk and slander as I've heard from you fellows tonight in 20 minutes.' Then he went on: 'I had a mother and a wife, God bless 'em, and I've got one sister still livin, though I hain't seen her for years, and it makes me shiver in my boots to hear the way you speak. You are all good lookin chaps and seem well dressed and respectable. For the sake of your mothers, sweethearts or wives quit talkin such wickedness. I don't mean to be harsh. I only speak with the privilege which comes of old age.'

"Then fellers, sir, if you'll believe me, set still and never spoke all the while that Dick was a-talkin. Finally one feller, who knew Dick, the biggest one in the crowd, said in a hearty way: 'Thanks, old fellow. I say, boys, three cheers for Gentlemanly Dick.' And they were given with a hearty will. Then one after another got up and sneaked out in the night. Hello, here comes the express! Hope she's loaded for this here town." And the men all left. The little waiting room which had served as a lecture room was vacant.—Chicago Tribune.

It May Do as Much for You.

Mr. Fred Miller, of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a severe kidney trouble for many years, with severe pains in his back, and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so called kidney cures, but without any good result. About a year ago he began the use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to the cure of all kidney and liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c. for large bottle. Symptoms of Cancer Removed—Rheumatism Cured

A Chicago Clergyman's Faith In Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.: 'Dear Sirs: I am profoundly impressed with the medical virtues of Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was threatened with cancer, and disagreeable eruptions on my back and other places. The cancer was appearing on my lip. Providentially I obtained a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and by the time it was gone, the bad symptoms had nearly disappeared. I have used four bottles, and I believe it has Saved Me From Premature Death. I am now almost 73 years of age and I work like a tiger. And I know that Hood's Sarsaparilla has had much to do with my vigor and strength. I recommended it to my wife, who had suffered so much with rheumatic troubles, as the young people who live with us. Do you want the afflicted to know what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for us, and I feel it a duty to let people know in this way of the help obtained. With grateful acknowledgment to C. I. Why Chinamen Change Signs.

A Washington street Chinaman changed his sign the other day, name and all. One of his customers, after the sign had been changed, stopped in to see if a new Chinaman had taken possession of the place. He found the same laundryman as had been there for a good many months.

"What did you change the name on your sign for?" was asked of him.

"Oh, that nothin. Only sign name. That's all."

"Why don't you put your own name on the sign?"

"Oh, see if I sellce place, can't sellce sign. See? Any name good sign. That's all."

He then explained that it was a common practice among Chinamen to change their signs frequently, and that by so doing they believed that it encouraged trade and thus reimbursed them for the expenditure in red paint and unpronounceable characters.—Buffalo Express.

Forty Winks For Insomnia.

"I have a new remedy for insomnia," said the nervous member as he entered the club rooms.

"If it is good, tell us about it."

"It is very simple. Just go to bed and take the most comfortable position for sleeping. Then slowly open and close your eyes. If, after 40 winks, you are not asleep, then try 40 more. The great difficulty with victims of insomnia is that they almost always fall to thinking of the events of the day. This may be prevented by persistent counting, but that is itself a mental effort and wakes one up. Not so, however, with winking. I defy any of you to think of anything else while you are engaged in this simple exercise."—Utica Observer.

A Homemade Sign.

On Lexington avenue near Eighty-third street there stands in front of a shoemaker's shop a home painted sign that is pitifully comic. It would be a painfully deformed man indeed who could wear a boot shaped like the one thereon displayed, beneath which is the announcement that "Laddies shoes" will be "half soled" and healed for one price; "Childrings and mans" for another. Apropos of this subject, I saw a shoemaker's sign the other day bearing the euphonious and appropriate name of Shintog.—Polly Pry in New York Recorder.

Thousands Visited the Cemeteries In Detroit—Grand Rapids Unveiled a Monument to Her Soldier Dead—Appropriate Address by Rev. Washington Gardner. The Day Generally Observed.

DETROIT, May 31.—The soldier dead of this city rest principally in Woodmere, Elmwood and in Mt. Elliott cemeteries. To these places many thousands of people went yesterday despite the rain. At this season of the year the cemeteries are in the warmest and greenest colors of bright and smiling nature. The rolling lawns, the beds of flowers, the wooded slopes, dotted by thousands of gravestones, which gleamed the whiter after the shower, gave rest to the eye and peace to the heart. Many a soldier's widow was here yesterday. She found that her husband's resting place had not been overlooked. The women of the Relief Corps had taken the matter in charge, and had left some souvenir of remembrance on each veteran's resting place. A small American flag made it possible to pick out these graves very easily.

At Woodmere a pleasing and pathetic ceremony was going on all day long. When the women arrived to place their flowers, they found about 150 school children there ahead of them strewing garlands, and as they did so at each grave singing a verse of some patriotic hymn. Fairbanks post jet was made noticeable by a large bed of petunias. In this cemetery there are 78 graves of veterans.

At Elmwood the decorations consisted of bouquets. According to a rule of the place potted plants are not allowed. In addition to the bouquets there were crosses and wreaths. In this cemetery are found by far the largest number of soldiers' graves. They represent 350 veterans.

At Mt. Elliott potted plants and bouquets were placed upon the tombs. There are 130 interments of old soldiers here.

Among the special designs was a flag sent by New York post for the grave of General Romeyn, also a bunch of roses and narcissus. Upon the grave of Major Fairbanks in Elmwood was a maltese cross, roses and carnations. On Colonel Farquhar's grave were sweet peas and ferns.

Business Generally Suspended.

PORT HURON, May 31.—Yesterday being Decoration day, business was generally suspended. A procession under command of Marshal Karrer, headed by the K. O. T. M. band and the Port Huron guard, marched through the streets intending to hold exercises at Pine Grove park. The heavy rain made that proposition unpracticable and the exercises were therefore held in the Baer block. Mayor O'Sullivan presided. The memorial address was made by L. A. Sherman and a memorial poem read by Chester Benedict. Addresses were also made by Rev. McManus and Thomas M. Crocker, and music was furnished by the Glee club and K. O. T. M. band.

Rain Prevented a Parade.

GRAND HAVEN, May 31.—A cold north and a rain set in just as the procession was formed, sadly interfering with carrying out the program for memorial services here. Instead of going directly to the cemetery, as was originally intended, the procession proceeded to the opera house, where the orator of the day, Hon. G. J. Diekema of Holland, delivered a rousing address before a crowded house. After which Weather-wrx post and Company F, Michigan national guards, went to the cemetery and decorated the graves and a detachment of Company F fired a salute over the soldiers' graves, and then returned to the city.

Soldiers' Monument Unveiled.

GRAND RAPIDS, May 31.—Memorial day was more generally observed than ever before, all business being suspended in the afternoon. The morning's observance included a parade and address by Fred A. Maynard. In the afternoon hundreds visited the soldiers' home to witness the unveiling of the soldiers' monument. General L. G. Rutherford was president of the day at the home, General B. R. Pierce, chief marshal, and Rev. John L. Jackson, chaplain. Department Commander Louis Kanitz made a brief address and officiated at the unveiling, and the address of the day was by Rev. Washington Gardner.

The Day at Lansing.

LANSING, May 31.—Notwithstanding the inclement weather, Memorial day was very generally observed here. In the morning there was a commendable parade, participated in by the state troops, Charles T. Foster post, G. A. R., city officials and numerous societies. The procession proceeded to Mt. Hope cemetery, where the Grand Army exercises were held and the graves were decorated. In the afternoon Rev. L. D. Temple delivered an eloquent address to a large audience at Representative hall.

Memorial Day Observed.

KALAMAZOO, May 31.—Memorial day was observed here in the usual manner. In the forenoon the graves of soldiers in Mountain Home and Riverside cemeteries were decorated by Orcut post, G. A. R., and in the afternoon there was a parade participated in by Company C, Michigan, national guard, Orcut post, the typographical union and civic societies. Hon. A. H. Cavanaugh of Canton, O., was the orator of the day.

Fittingly Observed at Holland.

HOLLAND, May 31.—Memorial day was fittingly observed here and attracted a immense crowd. The procession was a grand one, consisting of several bands, drum corps, Grand Army post, Sons of Veterans, Woman's Relief corps, council, fire companies, Hope college students, scholars of public schools and citizens. The speaker of the day was Hon. George A. Farr of Grand Haven.

Laid the Cornerstone.

BAY CITY, May 31.—The cornerstone of Bay City's new city hall was laid Wednesday, an immense crowd witnessing the exercises. Fully 25,000 strangers were in the city. The parade, made up of civic and military societies, was two miles long. The ceremonies were in charge of Masonic societies, the cornerstone being placed in position by W. H. Phillips of Menominee, grand master, assisted by other grand officers.

Memorial Exercises at Charlotte.

CHARLOTTE, May 31.—Despite threatening and rainy weather all day, Memorial day exercises here proved quite a success. Early in the afternoon a column composed of the G. A. R. post, the Women's Relief Corps, the city fire department and the pupils of the schools, marched from the G. A. R. hall to Hook's theater, where Justice Grant delivered a very able memorial address to a crowded house. The line of march was then resumed to Maple Hill cemetery, where the soldiers' graves were decorated.

A Long Procession.

COLDWATER, May 31.—Memorial day opened very cold and uncomfortable, with occasional showers. Notwithstanding this, the procession to Oak Grove cemetery, where the ceremonies took place, was an unusually long one. Upward of 100 graves were covered over with beautiful flowers, and then Hon. P. L. Palmer of Big Rapids delivered one of the most powerful and patriotic addresses ever listened to in this city. Following this was music appropriate to the day, closing with the benediction.

Strewed Flowers on the Graves.

PONTIAC, May 31.—Decoration day was observed in this city by the G. A. R. They met at their hall at 7:30 and marched first to the Hope and thence to Oak Hill cemeteries, where they strewed the graves of their comrades with flowers. In the afternoon an address was given them at the Pontiac Opera House, at which there was about 600 present.

Honored the Nation's Dead.

SAGINAW, May 31.—Although the day broke with a pouring rain, and the inclement weather in a measure continued all day, Saginaw did honor to the nation's dead with an imposing street parade and impressive exercises at Brady Hill cemetery.

Services Largely Attended.

ST. LOUIS, May 31.—Memorial services were largely attended here by the soldiers and citizens. From 300 to 500 were in a line of march.

TEFFT FOUND GUILTY.

The Jury Brought In a Verdict of Murder In the Second Degree.

HASTINGS, May 31.—The jury in the Tefft murder case arrived at a verdict at 2 o'clock Wednesday morning, after being out six and one-half hours, finding Tefft guilty of murder in the second degree.

Tefft took the verdict coolly, never losing the nerve which has sustained him during the whole trial. He has been surrounded from the beginning to the end with a chain of circumstantial evidence which it was impossible to break.

Tefft made no attempt to show where he was on the night of the murder. The verdict gives universal satisfaction. Great sympathy is expressed for the aged parents and young sister of the prisoner.

Will Wed a Millionaire.

GRAND RAPIDS, May 31.—Four hundred invitations have been issued for the wedding at St. Mark's church next Wednesday morning of Miss Alice McGowan, daughter of J. W. McGowan, a meat dealer of this city, and Otto P. Meyer, a son and heir of C. F. G. Meyer, the millionaire druggist of St. Louis, Mo. Miss Lillian McGowan, sister of the bride, will act as maid of honor, and Dr. Burgess Whinery of this city will be Mr. Meyer's right hand man. Immediately after the ceremony a wedding breakfast will be served at the residence of the bride's parents, after which the couple will leave for a tour of the eastern watering places and settle down in St. Louis.

Disappeared From Home.

ALBION, May 31.—William Green disappeared from his home last Thursday and is still missing. He was subject to fits of mental aberration. Green is 45 years old. He has a sandy mustache, light hair and a peculiar staggering gait. When last seen he wore a dark blue slouch hat and a dark brown checked coat.

SOMETIMES FATAL.

In Their First Stages Piles Seem Insignificant—Neglect Them and Results are Often Fatal.—Pyramid Pile Cure Cures Them so They Stay Cured.

At least one-fourth of all mankind are afflicted to a greater or less degree with piles.

Very often the disease is of irregular recurrence. Maybe the trouble comes only once or twice a year. Even so it unfits a man for business while it lasts. Seems like a little thing, but it produces more bad feeling than even serious sickness would. In severe cases there is no comfort obtainable. Various salves and ointments afford temporary relief, but in a few minutes the pain returns. Each attack is a little bit worse than the last one. Itching is followed by bleeding and protrusion. Fistula follows—surgical treatment—death possibly. And all this can be avoided.

The discovery of Pyramid Pile Cure has made suffering unnecessary, even foolish. By its use relief is instantaneous. It soothes the inflamed parts, heals the broken membranes, reduces the swelling and brings comfort at once.

The cure is permanent and the trouble will not return unless new conditions arise which produce an entirely new case. This, of course, cannot be helped, but if you will use Pyramid Cure immediately on the appearance of the first symptom, the trouble will vanish.

Druggists sell and recommend Pyramid Pile Cure. There may be some who do not have it, in which case they will get it, or you can get it yourself from the makers, the Pyramid Drug Co., Albion, Mich. The price is one dollar per package.

Mark Twain's Way.

The Rev. J. Hyatt Smith, says the Kansas City Times, relates the following story: When I was living with my brother in Buffalo, Mark Twain occupied a cottage across the street. We didn't see very much of him, but one morning as we were enjoying our cigars on the veranda after breakfast we saw Mark come to his door, in his dressing gown and slippers, and look over at us. He stood at his door and smoked for a minute as if making up his mind about something and at last opened his gate and came lounging across the street. There was an unoccupied rocking chair on the veranda, and when my brother offered it to him he dropped into it with a sigh of relief. He smoked for a few moments and said:

"Nice morning."
"Yes, very pleasant."
"Shouldn't wonder if we had rain by and by."
"Well, we could stand a little."
"This is a nice house you have here."
"Yes, we rather like it."
"How's your family?"
"Quite well—and yours?"
"Oh, we're all comfortable."
There was another impressive silence, and finally Mark Twain crossed his legs, blew a puff of smoke into the air and in his lazy drawl remarked: "I suppose you are a bit surprised to see me here so early. Fact is I haven't been so neighborly perhaps as I ought to be. We must mend that state of things. But this morning I came over because I thought you might be interested in knowing that your roof is on fire. It struck me that it would be a good idea if"—

But at the mention of fire the whole family dusted up stairs, trailing language all the way up. When we had put the fire out and returned to the veranda, Mark wasn't there.

DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION.

The Democrats of Michigan will meet in state convention in the city of Grand Rapids on the 28th day of June, at 12 o'clock noon, for the purpose of nominating party candidates for the following state offices: Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, State Treasurer, Auditor General, Attorney General, Commissioner of the State Land Office, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Member of the State Board of Education, and also two candidates for United States Senators; for the selection of a State Central Committee to serve for the ensuing two years, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before it.

According to the rule adopted by the Democratic State Convention, held in Detroit in 1880, and since followed, every county in the state is entitled to one delegate to the State Convention for each 500 votes cast for Governor at the last general election, and one additional delegate for a fraction of not less than 250 votes. But each county is entitled to at least two delegates. All delegates must be residents of the county they represent.

The delegates from each congressional district are requested to meet in caucus on the day of the convention at quarters to be hereafter designated by the Central Committee and select candidates for recommendation to the convention as follows, to-wit: Two members of the State Central Committee, one Vice-President of the Convention and one member for each of the following committees of the Convention: Credentials, Permanent Organization and Order of Business and Resolutions.

It will facilitate the working of the Committee on Credentials if the Secretary of each County Convention will promptly forward to the headquarters of the State Central Committee in Detroit immediately after the convention, a full and accurate list of the delegates chosen to the State Convention.

Renewing our allegiance to the cardinal principles of Democracy, we cordially invite all those who have voted in the past with the Democratic party, and all others who are desirous of associating with it in the future, to participate in the caucus for the election of delegates to this convention.

DANIEL J. CAMPAU, Chairman.
FRANK H. HOSFORD, Secretary.
By H. G. COBURN, JR., Acting Secretary.

Washtenaw County is entitled to 21 delegates.

Every day the signs of the times indicate more strongly that the party of great moral ideas will have about all it can attend to here in Michigan in keeping within control the fierce flames of faction which threaten to devour party supremacy in the state.

The fight among our republican brethren for the leadership of the machine promises to be of the bitterest kind. Those who have undertaken the task of butting McMillen and Rich off the track have a large contract on their hands. Still no one doubts the nerve of the men who have joined the opposition forces under the leadership of Pingree. We shall see what we shall see.

The political couch of his excellency, John T. Rich, is not one of roses these days. The disaffection of the Scandinavians of the upper peninsula on account of the turning down of Jochim and Hambitzer, upon whom the party has always depended for its majority across the straits, together with the disturbances caused by the faction Captains, Pingree, Luce, Turner, et al., is not calculated to induce sweet and refreshing political rest.

Farmer Luce is grieved because farmer Rich, whom the said horny handed Gilead agriculturist helped to boost up the political ladder some years ago, forgot his old patron in naming a United States senator. Luce will, therefore, attach his political fortunes to the tail of the Pingree kite. Well, the staid farmer will need pretty steady nerves if he expects to accompany the pyrotechnic mayor on his political gyrations.

The recent utterances of Mayor Pingree while in New York, whatever their significance to the party whose label he wears, show him to be an intelligent student of existing conditions and their causes. While it is a great surprise to find this professed republican laying down and vouching for such sound democratic doctrine, this fact but adds potency to his words. His speech was a scathing assault upon abuses in government, especially upon monopolies, trusts and combines, and incidentally perhaps upon certain party associates for whom he is said to lack that warmth of affection always supposed to exist among members of the g. o. p. Among the many good things that he said, the following is perhaps the best.

"The trouble is not so much to find good men who cannot be used by designing persons as it is to arouse people to an understanding that the remedy for the abuses in government is in their own hands. I am a firm believer in the people. Those who want good government are in the majority in every community. The same trouble exists in municipal government which does in state and national. It is the tyranny of the powerful few over the many weak by means of which the few rob the many—suck their life-blood—live on them. The few combine themselves under various names—rings, corporations, trusts, or what not. They buy common councils and legislatures, and even suborn courts of justice to accomplish their ends."

The herring democrats in the senate who have so basely betrayed the party and caused the failure to carry out platform pledges, try to excuse their treachery by claiming that it is necessary at least to have sufficient protection on our products to cover the difference between wages here and in Europe. They insist for instance that we must have a protective duty on our iron or our iron industry would be irretrievably ruined. They say that with the wages paid here it would be impossible to compete with the pauper labor of other countries. The dishonesty and hypocrisy of their position, however, is made manifest from the following figures which show the value of the iron and steel and the manufactures thereof exported during the past fiscal year:

Pig iron	335,239
Band hoop and scroll	7,897
Bar	68,856
Car wheels	106,403
Castings, n. e. s.	570,841
Cutlery	148,550
Firearms	733,271
Ingots, bars and rods	22,301
Locks, hinges and other builders' hardware	2,648,919
Machinery	10,467,091
Nails and spikes, cut	330,554
Nails and spikes, wire, etc	158,063
Plates and sheets, iron	65,768
Plates and sheets, steel	20,459
Printing presses	205,805
Railroad bars, iron	11,113

Railroad bars, steel	471,230
Saws and tools	1,902,423
Scales and balances	406,430
Sewing machines	2,476,446
Fire engines	75
Locomotives	1,704,770
Stationary engines	254,398
Boilers and parts of engines	607,758
Stoves, ranges and parts of	216,463
Wire	1,189,219
Various other	4,896,401

The above table of statistics shows conclusively that our manufacturers not only can but do compete with the manufacturers of other countries in their own markets. Nor is this competition confined to the above products but includes a great variety of others as well. Now, if our manufacturers can ship their products thousands of miles and still be able to undersell foreign manufacturers, whose products are produced with so-called pauper labor, it is downright dishonesty to claim that protection is necessary in order to enable our manufacturers to pay the wages they do, and still sell their products at a profit in our own markets. Our labor saving machinery is the latest and best, our labor possesses as high a degree of skill as any in the world, and considering the product produced the labor cost is the least. The claim that protection is necessary, therefore, on account of the rate of wages paid here is manifestly untrue, and is set up to deceive workmen. Protection is laid for the benefit of the trusts and combines, and not for the purpose of keeping up American wages.

WANDERING WILLIE.

Late in the afternoon of a golden September day a canalboat was traversing the Erie canal at the sluggish rate of progress peculiar to that manner of navigation...

Had any one read this inscription on that September day he would have thought it a most absurd mienomer. "Willie" was unsuitably light and tender...

No one, however, bestowed any scrutiny upon the stern of the old boat that afternoon, for it was passing through and then a distant farmhouse, with its red roofed barns...

There were five persons connected with the boat. One man was lazily guiding the mules some 200 feet ahead; another was dozing in the bow of the boat...

Presently she broke a long silence by saying to her companion: "You haven't told me 'bout that there letter you got yist'day."

"I've been wanting to, but I hardly knew how to begin," said the young man, with an effort to speak lightly.

"Mother!" he said with a passionate earnestness he strove in vain to conceal, "you must see for yourself that I am not fitted for the life on a canalboat."

you and father to send me to school and college."

"Don't say that, Joe!" cried his mother in quick reproach. "Yer father an yer gran'father often felt shamed o' havin no education. They allus earned a fair livin, to be sure, an had everybody's good word. But it's a fine thing to have schoolin, an we was bound you should have it."

"I know you did," said Joe gratefully. "And I know how you worked—like slaves, like tigers. I only meant that it would be a mistake for me not to get the best results from your work and father's and my own."

"I thought, mother, you would enjoy living in Chicago in a little house with a furnace perhaps and stained glass in the hall and curtains in the doorways."

"She turned upon him with absolute terror in her eyes. "Joe!" she cried in a voice of intense pain. "Surely you won't make me do that? Surely there's no law that'd help you to drag me away from here to a place like that?"

"Mother—dear mother!" said Joe soothingly. "I wouldn't for the world ask you to go if you did not wish to do so. I only wished to offer you a pretty home, and you know you have never had a home."

"Never had a home?" she echoed scornfully. "What do you call The Wandering Willie, then? There's no woman in America that's prouder of her home than I be. I know every mile of the 300 an more between Buffalo an Albany as well as most people do their own miz'able little weedy dooryards."

"I've come by these fields fur 50 year an seen 'em brown an bare in the spring, an then a faint light green, an then yaller as the sunshine, an then bare again, like they be today. An sometimes I've come by when the first snow has covered 'em all up warm for the winter. An I know the very birds' nests in the trees, Joe. An there ain't a town as we go through but what I've got good true friends in. How kin you say this ain't a home, Joe? It's been a place to love in, to work in, to live an die in. What more do you want?"

"Forgive me, mother," said Joe humbly. He dared not speak again for fear of unwittingly giving her fresh pain. It was some time before she spoke.

"I've told you so often all about The Wandering Willie that I don't s'pose you'd keer to hear it all over again, would you, Joe?" she said wistfully.

"Indeed I should like to hear it," said Joe, with so much apparent interest that his mother was visibly flattered and without urging plunged into a sea of retrospect.

"The very first thing I kin remember is sittin by my father on the deck of a boat like this, tied into my little cheer. My mother was dead, an my father was all wrapped up in me. He was as good a man as ever lived, though rough in his ways. He did swear dreadfully sometimes, but then all canal men do mostly. But he was gentle as a kitten with me an would watch me in my little cheer an tell me by the hour 'bout the places we was passin. Sometimes he would talk o' sendin me to school, but he couldn't bear to part with me, an I hated to go. Winters we lived in a tavern at Lockport, an there I got a little schoolin, so I could read, write and cipher some, an when I was only a slip of a gal I und'stood all about freight an managin the boat better than you ever will, I'm afraid, Joe."

"Now, Joe, 'bout the name o' this old boat—you do think it's a pretty name, don't you?" "I think it's the sweetest ship's name that ever was invented!" said Joe, with conviction, for he knew that not all the mythical ships of song and story had for him the significance of this one. The Wandering Willie would always represent to his mind the truest love, the tenderest fidelity.

"Well, your grand'father sot a great deal o' store by it. He called four boats by it, one arter another, and finally I give the name to this one. He'd got it out o' some play or poem or book—he never rightly knew where himself—an it riled him to have any one make fun of it. One evenin we was lyin to at Buffalo. It was about 7 o'clock, an the dock was full o' people walkin up an down to git the lake breeze, fur it had been a very warm day. I was talkin with some gals forward, an father was sittin in the stern, smokin. He had been drinkin some an was that ugly no one dast speak to him but me. Presently we see a young man sturin at the name on the stern an kinder smilin to himself. He was a strong, good lookin young feller, with laughin blue eyes—you never see such eyes nowadays, Joe! Pretty soon he speaks up to father, an says he, very perlitte:

"'Could ye give me a job o' work sir?' "I could if I wanted to," says father, with a snarl, "but I ain't a-goin to give no one a job that pokes fun at my boat."

"'Why, I wan't a-pokin fun at yer boat!' says the young man very respectful. 'Only I see The Wandering Willie there on the stern, an my name's Willie, an I'm a-wanderin round lookin fur a job, an it seem'd kinder cur'us.' "Well, there's never no relyin on what a drunken man will do—I'm mighty glad you don't keer fur liquor, Joe. My father got hoppin mad at them innocent words an began swearin an takin an awful. The young feller jest turned round an walked off, sorter discouraged. Father kept shoutin to him that if he didn't come on board an git polished off he'd come on shore arter him. An all o' a sudden, while he was a-shakin his fists an a-stampin his feet, he give a crazy lurch and went right over the stern into the water!"

The old woman's voice trembled with excitement as she recounted this one thrilling incident of her life. "The canal's an awful place to fall into. It's not so deep, but it's very wide, an even if you kin swim to the bank there's nothin to cling to. You never see a mule drown, did you, Joe? You wouldn't believe how quick it's over. There's a little running an shoutin an somethin dark comes slowly up an rolls over jest under the water, an there's a kind o' gurgle cry that turns you sick all over, an you feel wild to help the poor critter. The somethin dark comes slowly up once more an sinks agin. A few big bubbles rise, an it's all over, but the thought o' it sticks in yer mind fur days."

"It was as quick as that with father. He was a good swimmer, but when he arose his head struck agin the rudder an he never took a stroke—he jest sank like a stum. Everybody screamed an yelled an called fur ropes an boats, but none o' all his old cronies standin round dast wet their skins to help him. Would you believe it, Joe, that young feller he'd jest been abusin so mean was the very one to save him? He run back, tore off his coat an dived right where father had gone under. He was out o' sight so long the men began to say he was drowned, too, but arter awhile he come up coughin an chokin, but draggin father by the shirt collar jest as he'd grabbed him under the muddy water. They got 'em into a scow an laid father on the dock an worked over him 20 minutes afore he come to. He was sick two weeks with the blow he had got, but whether he was out o' his head or not he kep' allus a-callin for Willie, 'the chap what's named arter my boat,' he would say. So Willie helped me nurse him, an when father was well he worked with us the rest of the season. When I was a gal, Joe, I was called good looking, though you wouldn't believe it now."

"Of course I believe it—you know I do, mother!" interrupted Joe, with such fervor that the pleased, unready color—there anything in the world so dear and pitiful as an old woman's blush?—crept into her cheek.

"An so Willie took a likin to me, an on our last trip that season when we was a-lyin to at Lockport a minister that ran a little mission on the dock came down to the boat an married us. Father would have us married on The Wandering Willie. I had a green merino dress—it's in the little trunk with your baby clothes, Joe—an the next day me an Willie had our dagerrytypes taken together. It hangs over my bunk, yer know—it ain't bad of me, but it don't do justice to Willie."

"The next year you come along, Joe, an how proud we all was of you! I felt kinder sorry you didn't have big blue eyes like yer father, but there, we can't have everything! It seemed as if the world had gone back 25 years when I see you a-sittin by father tied into my little old cheer. Father never seemed to git rightly over his accident. He was more civil an didn't swear an drink so much, an some time he'd look at the foul water an shudder an then look at Willie so grateful it'd bring tears to my eyes. One winter, in the old tavern at Lockport, when he'd been ailin fur a week or so, he says to me, 'My gal, you will soon have two Willies to look arter—Willie yer husband an Willie the boat!' I told him not to talk like that, but he jest turned over in bed an didn't seem to hear me. He didn't speak nor stir when the doctor come, nor till the next mornin, when he springs up in bed an calls out loud an sharp, 'Low bridge, low bridge!' Them was the last words ever he spoke."

She paused to wipe her eyes on her apron.

"Well, I'm makin a long story out of it, ain't I, dearie? But it seems every time I tell it as if it might be the last time. There ain't much more now. We worked on, year in, year out—fur you, Joe. It was only two year ago last spring, though it seems like 20, that Willie began to fail. He had doctors an medicines, but they didn't do no good. They said he was kind o' wore out with hard work. They said the fresh air would be the best thing fur him, so we staid on the boat all summer as usual, only he sat an rested while the men worked. We couldn't very well have spared the profits of even one trip, fur you were at college, you know, Joe. But he got worse an worse, an at last I made up my mind as soon as ever we got to Buffalo I would take him to the tavern an telegraph fur you."

"One afternoon in August we was goin into Buffalo, jest passin along under the bluff, with the lake an river on the other side, so broad an blue you couldn't tell where the lake ends an the river begins. Willie lay back in a big easy chair under an awnin, jest where we're sittin now, an I was holdin the tiller—I hain't ever had the strength to do it sense, Joe; I've been all broke up lately. There had come an awful gray look on his face in the last mile or two that frightened me so I didn't dare ask him how he felt, but now an agin he'd smile at me with his big blue eyes, that was jest as pretty that day, Joe, as they was the fust evenin I saw him. At last I says, as the cool, strong wind off the lake blew over us, 'It's a nice breeze, ain't it, Willie?' An he says, 'Yes, lass, but it's takin my soul along with it.' An I had only time to drop my knees by him an kiss him once before it was all over. An ever sense, when we slip along by that bluff, I feel the same breeze that took his soul away with it."

Her tears ran unchecked for some minutes before she resumed.

"That's all, Joe—that's why I can't never leave the canal an this old boat. I sometimes feel as if I cared more fur it than I do fur you. Of course 'tain't so—I only jest feel so. The boat belongs to my whole life some way—but you're so young an such a stranger from bein away so much—but there, I kep' a-sayin in all these years it'd be all right when you was home fur good, we'd be jest the same as if you'd never gone away! Such store as your father sot by your fast fingers an writin, Joe! I don't know what he'd have said, nor your grand'father with, to see the French an Latin an Greek books in yer cabin now!"

And her brown eyes, so like Joe's own, smiled on him with innocent pride, only to cloud suddenly.

"But it would have shamed them, Joe, an angered your grand'father most terrible, to think their work wan't good enough fur you to follow in. An I'm a lonely old woman, Joe—say that you'll stay an keep me comp'ny. 'Twon't be fur very long."

"Mother," said Joe very gently, "I want to do what is right by you and by myself. Give me an hour or so to decide. I don't want to be a bad son to such a good mother."

"You couldn't be bad if you tried, Joe," said his mother fondly. At that moment Jenny's young voice called merrily, "Supper, supper!" and Joe, having aroused the sleeping man and relinquished the tiller to him, sat down with the two women and ate the plain, carelessly served meal. Then the man on the towpath came on board for rest and refreshment, surrendering to Joe the guidance of the mules.

He could have laughed at his situation, only that its grotesqueness was so inseparably mingled with pain and perplexity. He thought as he walked along of the ill matched team Ulysses drove, of Apollo's magnificent coursers, of the snowy Paphian doves that bore Venus through the blue ether, and the more of these classical steeds and drivers he recalled the more incongruous and absurd his own position seemed. He felt that he was better fitted to teach mythology than to drive mules. And yet it would break his mother's heart if he left her. She had said he would not need to stay long. He shrank from speculating on her death, but if she were to live 10 years, for instance? What high hopes and aspirations might he not forget, what vile habits of thought and speech and manner might he not acquire in 10 years?

At 9 o'clock he gave up the lines to one of the men, who walked and drove till 12. Then, as their working force was not sufficient for an all night journey, the men moved the boat on the heel path side and put the mules into their quarters, there to rest till daybreak. The two lanterns fore and aft, which would serve to reveal the boat's presence to captains who pushed on throughout the night, were attended to, and the two men turned into their bunks. Jenny and her mistress had long since retired, and only Joe was left awake. He paced up and down the deck in the starlight, trying to come to a resolution. Should he go—and kill his mother? Should he stay—and kill his own pride and ambition and bright prospects? Finally all his learning seemed to resolve itself into the memory of Captain Lawrence's noble words, "Don't give up the ship!" And at last he said aloud, "I will not," and the long struggle was ended. The canal life, with its small, slow gains, its homely duties, would be his while his mother needed him.

He went straight to her bedside. She heard him and reached out a hand through the darkness to clasp his.

"Mother, I have decided—I'll stay and help you," he said, bending to kiss her withered cheek. To his surprise it was wet with tears. "What, you're crying—you haven't been awake all these hours?"

"I couldn't sleep, Joe, but I will now. Thank you, my boy. You'll never be sorry. Good night, Joe."

"Good night, mother," he said tenderly, and then, tired out, he sought his bunk and fell soundly asleep.

An hour or two afterward he found himself sitting up in bed, tearing the clothing from his throat and gasping for breath. In a moment he discovered that the cabin was full of a dense smoke. Hurrying on some garments, he dashed out and saw that the whole after part of the boat was in flames, but all chance of saving. The lantern had exploded, and the ignited oil had scattered far and wide. He loudly called Jenny and the men, and taking his mother in his strong young arms carried her on shore. Then he went back for a quantity of bedding, folded it carefully round her and put her gently down on the ground, her head against a tree. Jenny sprang ashore. Joe helped the two men to release the mules, quivering with terror, and in a few minutes men and mules were safely off the boat. Then Joe, though it was braving death to do it, rushed back through the blinding, stinging smoke into his mother's cabin and brought out the old daguerrotype and the little chest full of relics. He carried them to where she sat motionless against the tree.

"Here they are, mother—all the things you care for!" he cried.

"All but the boat itself, Joe—nobody kin save that, kin they?" She looked at him with helpless appeal.

"Nobody, mother," he said sadly. Indeed the poor craft was already from stem to stern one sheet of flame. The Wandering Willie would never wander more. "But we can build another."

She shook her head and made no answer. Anything like the tragic despair of her set face Joe had never seen.

"'Tain't asked of you to stay, Joe. But you'd made up your mind to anyhow. You was willin. I'm glad o' that.' So was Joe; so would he always be. "The insurance, Joe—it's all right. It's all yours," she said quietly.

A strange fear crept over him. He knelt by her and rested her head on his shoulder and covered her closer from the chill night air with a loverlike tenderness. The fields stretched wide and black around them—the solemn stars shone dimly above.

NICE REPUBLICAN HARMONY.

A Big Combination to Beat Rich out of a Re-Nomination.

There is trouble in the Republican camp and each day brings out some new feature of the fun in the party now controlling the state.

The first sign of trouble for Rich was the letter of congratulation of ex-Gov. Luce to Mayor Pingree which on the face of it read like an offer to join forces and defeat their common enemy.

The people who are counting on the nomination of Hon. John T. Rich for governor have an amount of disappointment in store for them that will surprise you.

The people will probably ratify his selection of a United States senator in Mr. Patton. They will doubtless adopt his selections for the various state offices.

No, the republican party will not risk this sort of machine politics this year. Republicans will have an opportunity to vote for a clean, new head on their ticket when they go to the polls next November.

You see, the case is entirely different from other state officers, or from the position of congressmen, or United States senator.

No, young man, you will find that 1894 will be a good year for the old soldier, when it comes to the gubernatorial nomination.

Gutcheon, of Kent; Gen. O. L. Spaulding, of Clinton; Gen. Hartsuff, of St. Clair; Maj. C. W. Watkins, of Kent, or some other one of the nation's noble defenders, selected for our standard bearer.
