New Trial of Hand Denied.—The Fourth at Whitmore Lake.—Horse Stolen.

—50th Commencement.—Regents' Meeting.—Gospel Car Side-tracked.

Died of Blood Poisoning.

Mrs. Martha Smith, wife of James Smith, of South Division street, died Sunday, of blood poisoning, scarcely more than a child herself—she being only 17 years and four months of age. Mrs. Smith had given birth to a child on Thursday preceding her death. It died the following day. That one so young should be cut off while yet in the bud of life and hope, seems especially sad. Mr. and Mrs. Smith had been married less than a year.

Was Not a Candidate.

A horse, owned by Chris Lyman, of Dexter, Wednesday growing tired of switching flies in front of an Ann street store, tore away from his moorings and started to "do" the town. Getting loose from the wagon he made for the basement of the court house, but changed his mind, and veered away, but so suddenly that his inertia carried him off his legs and he fell as flat as the Ellis prosecution. Gathering up, he decided to bring his item and what was left of the harness to the Argus of fice, but missed it by one door and dashed into the entrance of the opera house, and up several of the steps, when he caught sight of the stern countenance of Mr. Sawyer, who, mistaking him for a rival republican candidate for congress, rushed from his room to admonish him against proselyting for delegates in Ann Arbor. It was "a horse" on Sawyer. The animal was finally caught and led away with blood spurting from a wound in the thigh. Dr. Dell dressed the wound which required several stitches.

Motion Denied.

The Hand case will not be retried. Judge Kinne has filed his opinion denying the motion. The motion for the new trial was founded mainly upon certain remarks made by Mr. Sawyer in his address to the jury, which the attorneys for the defense held to have been of such a character as to influence improperly the decision of the jury. In denying the motion Judge Kinne says among other things: "If I did not believe that the accused had had a fair and impartial trial it would be my pleasure as it would be my duty to set aside the verdict in this cause."

"There have been two trials of this case. It the last trial I think it was manifest that the counsel for the people sought to so conduct the proceedings that if a conviction resulted there should be no ground for a reversal."

"In my opinion they succeeded in this attempt."

"I think a reading of my charge to the jury will clearly disclose how carefully the rights of the defendant were guarded."

"This question of innocence or guilt has been submitted to a jury who have determined the question, and I know of no reason why I should subvert their judgment. The motion must be overruled."

"Look Out For The Cars."

The dust and rust and obliquity and grass that now cover the sinuous skeleton of the Ann Arbor street railway, are likely to yield soon to a glorious resurrection of the buried enterprise, and soon, it is hoped, the wires will be galvanized into life and the rumble of the cars will jar the "bumble-bees" from their nests under the tracks and the rails shine like the elbow of a senior's coat.

The attorney of the Eastern bondholders has been busy in Ann Arbor during the week and left Wednesday, for Boston, carrying with him an agreement signed by Dr. W.B. Smith which if it is ratified by the bondholders, will, it is expected, start the cars in two or three weeks. The attorney expresses his opinion that the agreement will be ratified by them. Let us hope so. The cars for the line, are, it is said partially contracted for. It is stated that the road will be placed in charge of a competent street railway man, and extensions made as rapidly as possible. The symptoms are very encouraging. Ann Arbor needs the road and the road needs Ann Arbor. Let each deal kindly and generously with the other on the live-and-let-live and not on the skin-and-help-skin plan, and all will be well.

Literary Brain Brew.

The class day exercises of the senior lits were held at the Tappan Oak, where the breezes of June waved the locks and kissed the intellectual brows of the participators, and oxygen took the place of aconite as a pulse-governor. The program was as follows.

Oration by William Walter Wedemeyer; poem by Joseph Raleigh Nelson; class history by Walric Leigh Osenburg; prophecy by Marion U. Strong; address by the class president, Daniel Franklin Lyons.

At the reception at the gymnasium, in the evening, the scene was one of enchanting brilliancy and the attendance very large. Youth and beauty, in pretty costumes, glided over the dancing floor to the measure of music, like fairies on "a mid-summer night," while old age looked soberly on from the galleries and would gladly have bribed Time with the means to purchase clothing, could he have rescued from the eternity of the past that youthfulness which, once dead, no enchantment can resurrect.

The music for the regular numbers was furnished by the Chequamegon orchestra; that for the intermissions by the Minnis orchestra.

Commencement.

The 50th annual commencement took place yesterday and University hall was crowded. The scholarly address of Prof. George Herbert Palmer, of Harvard, is conceded to have been a model of English diction and a polished production, full of thought and practicality. The brevity of the exercises was an especial merit of new application and appeared in refreshing contrast to the usual heavy, tedious exercises, usual to such an occasion. Dinner followed at the conclusion of the address.

The alumni attendance was not up to its usual number.

The Senate reception took place in the gymnasium instead of the chapel.

The address before the law alumni was delivered by United States Judge W. H. Taft, whose decision in relation to the striking engineers of the T. & A. A. road will be remembered.

The Alumni Association elected the following officers: Wm. J. Stewart, '68, Grand Rapids, president; Wm. Savage, '84, Spring Lake, vice president; Prof. Joseph H. Drake, secretary; Edward H. Butler, '60, Detroit, treasurer; directors, Dr. Edwin S. Sherill, '73, Detroit; Frank Bennett, '72, Jackson, Edgar Rexford, '66, Ypsilanti.

Capt. E. P. Allen.

Ex-Congressman Allen was in the city Wednesday and dropped into the Argus office to exchange greeting and remark the state of the weather. The Argus was glad to meet the Captain, and offered him a seat in its new patent lever chair. "Going to be a candidate again this season, Captain?" inquired the Argus. The Captain looked shy and tried to blush, but the effort was a dead failure. He had been too long the right bower of Boss Reed, Bill McKinley and the McKinley bill to play the coy maiden. He gave it up and remarked in a careless tone, that a dead weight of 1,600 against a republican, in this district was a heavy lift.

The Argus agreed with him.

"Would you be willing to try, Captain?" This seemed to touch a deep secret which the Captain appeared determined should not be wrrenched from him except after great torture. The torture was applied in the shape of the reportorial pneumatic pump, and the victim gasped that, should it prove true, as rumored, that no other republican in the district could be induced by bribes, threats or personal violence, to accept a nomination, he would again attempt the Moses act of trying to lead the sinning protectionists of the second district out of the woods. More than this the Captain would not surrender, except with his heart's blood.

The Democratic State Convention.

The democratic state convention in Grand Rapids, yesterday, belied the hopes of the republicans who had been predicting a stormy convention with a possible split in the democratic party. It was very harmonious and enthusiastic and the nominations were all made by acclamation. The ticket is headed by Spencer O. Fisher for governor, Edwin F. Uhl and John Strong for United States Senators. The balance of the ticket is as follows: Secretary of state, Lewis F. Ireland, of Plainwell; state treasurer, Otto Karste, of Ironwood; auditor general, Frank H. Gill, of Kent county; attorney general, James D. O'Hara, of Muskegon; commissioner of land office, Peter Mulvaney, of Calhoun; superintendent of public instruction, Albert E. Jennings, of Manistee; member state board of education, Michael Devereaux, of Mt. Pleasant. A rousing series of resolutions was adopted and a strong telegram was sent to President Cleveland. In the district caucus, D. A. Hammond was made chairman. The district members of committees, etc., were as follows: members of state central committee, Edward Duffy of Washtenaw and W. P. Sterling of Monroe; vice president, W. J. Babbitt, of Wayne; committee on resolutions, J. W. Helme, of Lenawee; credentials, James Cahalan, of Wayne; permanent organization, Elmer Kirkby, of Jackson.

A Gospel Car.

A private car labeled "Good News" is side-tracked in Ann Arbor. Its possessors are Evangelists who preach temperance and moral purity, in the open air, afternoon and evening from the steps of the court house. Just why the missionaries think they ought to "give it" to the court house officials in a particular manner we do not guess except on the theory that politicians are of all men most wicked.

The car, it is said, runs under the auspices of the Michigan Central road, whose officials believing in temperance and moral rectitude among its employees as a matter of business, give it and its occupants free transit over the company's lines. E. T. Goff, the leader, unites the dual qualities of manager and speaker and discharges both at his audiences with the readiness of one whose ammunition costs him nothing.

Charlton Edholm, of Chicago, Supt. of Press of the World's W. C. T. U., and author of the book "The Traffic in Girls, and Florence Crittington Missions," speaks on personal purity, and especially warns tather and mother that their girls are in danger.

Several ladies are members of the company, Mrs. Goff, Mrs. Quinn and Maud Goff being fair songsters.

The company numbers as one of its attractions John Philip Quinn, the converted gambler who shows the gambling instruments by which "suckers" are never allowed to win unless by permission to still further fleecce them. His appeals to gamblers and drinking men to quit their meanness for the sake of mother, wife and child, are very earnest.

The 4th at Whitmore Lake.

The Fourth of July will be celebrated in old fashioned style by the people of St. Patrick's Parish, Northfield, at Smith's Grove, Whitmore Lake. A special train will leave Ann Arbor, T. & A. A. depot, at 10 o'clock a. m., standard time, and will leave the lake in the evening at 7 o'clock, standard. Only 40 cents for grown people and 20 cents for children under twelve years, will be charged for the round trip. At 3:30 p. m. the program for the day will commence. Hon. Jno. J. Enright, of Detroit, the renowned witty and highly entertaining speaker, will echo with his sonorous voice, the sentiments dear to the American heart. Attorney T. R. Shields, of Fowlerville, will not fail to captivate all who will hear him. He is undoubtedly a magnificent speaker. Other speakers will also be heard from. Other mirth producing features of the program will be, a goodly number of comic songs by Ann Arbor's Colored Men's Quartette. Their voices are tuned to the right pitch, and will please many a musical ear that day with sweet and delightful melody. Willie Reilly, dressed in costume, will sing some of his best Dutch character songs. He is admitted in Detroit to be a splendid amateur comedian. Among the other good vocalists on the program will be Bruno St. James, James E. Harkins and the Whitmore Lake male quartette. Miss Nona O'Brien will deliver some appropriate recitations. Lombard's String Band will furnish the instrumental music. Only 25c for a good meal. The people are kindly invited to attend, and everything reasonable will be provided for their comfort and entertainment. Rev. L. P. Goldrick will be toastmaster.

A Precocious Horse Thief.

About ten o'clock Tuesday, an unknown colored lad unhitched the large bay horse attached to a carriage from the place where it was tied, near Bethlehem church, sprung into the carriage and disappeared in the direction of Ypsilanti. The act was observed by Mr. Schneider's daughter, who supposed the boy to be acting under direction of her father. As soon as the facts were learned Sheriff Brenner was notified and pursuit undertaken. Information brought by Mr. Harpst was to the effect that he had observed the horse being driven rapidly and covered with foam.

Deputy-Sheriff Peterson and Marshal Banfield were soon on the trail and heard of the thief at Ypsilanti, two men having ridden part way toward the city but evidently for the ride and are not supposed to have been concerned in the theft in any way.

The officers telephoned to Belleville, Wayne and Dearborn, putting officers on the watch at those points. In about 15 minutes after the message was received at Dearborn, the young thief showed up and was nabbed by the marshal. He arrived in Dearborn at 2:30, having covered the distance from Ann Arbor to that place—over 30 miles—in about 4 1/2 hours.

The pursuing officers were joined by Mr. Schneider, but, though he was able to identify his property, and all circumstances showed the good faith of the party, the marshal refused for some time to surrender the prisoner and rig, as the officers had no warrant. He did so, however, after telephoning to Detroit, and the boy was brought to jail, the horse reaching the city yesterday, apparently little worse for the jaunt.

The young African whose abnormal development in crime will render him the envy of more mature rascals, recently with his parents removed from Grand Rapids to Ypsilanti, where his father died about two weeks ago, according to the statement of his son, the afflicted horse thief. He gives his name as George Moken. He seems to have had a special motive for his exploit, but it is withheld for the present. His age is 14 years.

Regents Do Business.

At the session of the board of regents, Tuesday morning, something more was done than to anathematize the weather and drink ice water. A communication from the secretary of the American Institute of Homeopathy, asking that Dean Obetz be taken by the nape of his negligee shirt and the flexible portion of his summer trousers and fired bodily into outer darkness, for his proposed miscegenation of the two departments, was received and referred to the committee on medical department, where it will probably repose till Gabriel plays his cornet solo and the great final skeleton dance begins.

Dr. Campbell was promoted to the position of assistant professor of anatomy. Dr. Breakey was chosen permanent lecturer in dermatology.

The dean of the law department recommended the appointment of City Attorney Thomas A. Bogle as dean of the practice court at a salary of $2,000 and Prof. Walter Smith, of Detroit, as instructor in law at a salary of $600; also that E. F. Johnson be made assistant professor at a salary of $1,500; also that the enlargement of the law building be begun at once.

The following resolution was introduced by Regent Barbour:

Resolved, That henceforth in the selection of professors, instructors and other assistants for the University that no distinction be made between men and women, but that the applicant best fitted for the position receive the appointment.

Dr. Authur Cushney was made permanent professor of materia medica and therapeutics.

The sum of $600 was appropriated for disinfecting and oiling the floors of the hospitals.

It is known that the resignation of Dean Knowlton of the law department is in the hands of the board. The professor desires to devote all his time to lectures and to law writing. The resignation has not been formally acted upon. It is intimated that in case it is accepted, the popular dean's successor may be Hon. Benton Hanchett.

A NEW BANK IN MANCHESTER.
The citizens of Manchester and vicinity will be gratified to learn that on Saturday, June 30, a new bank will be opened in their town to be known as "The Union Savings Bank of Manchester." That the village will be greatly benefited by this enterprise is unquestioned. Heretofore the majority of the depositors in the present bank received no interest on their deposits; a few got 2 per cent, while a very favored few got 4 per cent. This policy caused a great many people in and about Manchester to deposit their money in Tecumseh, Chelsea, Jackson and Ann Arbor and many sent their money to Detroit in order to get 4 per cent. Now all this will be changed, as the new bank proposes to pay 4 per cent on all time deposits beginning on the opening day.
The stock of the bank is owned by the most influential and careful people who enjoy the confidence of the entire community, insuring for the management a conservative policy based upon strict business principles guaranteeing safety and fair treatment to all.
People living in and near Manchester are invited to show their friendship for and their appreciation of the new bank by making their deposits as large as possible on the opening day thereby receiving 4 per cent. interest from the day they make their deposit.

The festive potato bug is out in all his glory, and the demand for Paris green has been so great that the supply proved inadequate, and Saline has this week experienced a Paris green famine, as it were.
The question of a water supply is being agitated here, (it will end in "agitation" we fear), the plan being to pipe the water from the Hail springs, which are elevated some twenty feet above us, to a reservoir within the city limits.
Walter, the three-year-old son of Geo. J. Nissly, has been at Ann Arbor the past week, where he underwent the operation of having removed from the interior of his nose an abnormal growth, caused by an injury some years ago.
We learn our school board has retained the services of the entire corps of teachers for the ensuing year, which certainly speaks well for the ability of our teachers. It also demonstrates as groundless, the rumor that matrimonial aspirations might cause a vacancy.
Commencement week was a red letter event to many of our people. There were nine "sweet girl graduates"—not a boy saw fit to enter the race for graduation honors. The program was an attractive one and each fair participant carried out her part in a most creditable manner.
The Argus not having been represented by a special scribe in this "neck of the woods" for some time, and believing its readers should occasionally be posted on the goings-on and general behavior of our people, the writer hereof will endeavor to meet a "long felt want" by occasionally contributing a few items.
We notice that few towns in this county have as yet shown any indication of a sufficient outburst of patriotism to undertake a Fourth of July celebration. It is evident that as the years roll by, the average American citizen more and more realizes the fact that the burning of gunpowder and tooting of brass bands are not necessary to indicate our patriotism and love for our country.
Our little city is assuming metropolitan airs, and concrete walks are going down on all sides. The reason thereof is this: Our city fathers opened up their hearts (and the village treasury) and offer to bear half the cost, and our people are taking advantage of the opportunity. We commend the act of our alderman, and believe it will be more economical to the taxpayers than paying damage suits for bumps on defective sidewalks.
My Wife Said

ON THE FOUL FORDS.

A GHOSTLY BAND OF RIDERS ON THE SCOTTISH BORDERS.

A Tale of Spooks and Spirits Which Originated a Century Ago—How Henry Neale Paid the Penalty for Breaking a Promise Made to His Father.

At the beginning of the century a blacksmith named John Neale lived with his family in the secluded and romantic village of Longformacus, on the border. He was by that time a man of middle age, with sons approaching manhood. He was known all through the country for his dissolute habits and intemperate language.

About 10 years after his death his son, Henry Neale, who had succeeded to his business of blacksmith and farrier and had led as bad a life as his father had done, had occasion to go to Greenlaw.

It was late in the afternoon before he was ready to return home. The last person who saw him as he was leaving the little town was John Mickle, the Spottiswoode shepherd.

The street and sewer bills for the month of June were read and audited by the Board and their payments recommended to the Common Council.

Mr. Keech moved that City Engineer Key employ some competent engineer at not to exceed $2.50 per day to assist the City Engineer in lateral sewer work.

AN INSECT COMMUNITY.

The Wonderful Methods of Work and Government Employed by Wasps.

Wasps act as architects, builders, carpenters and paper makers. They go abroad into the fields and gardens in search of provisions. With exemplary care for the public welfare they eat out the sunny side of your peaches and carry away meat from the lamb chops in your larder.

Every successful wasp, when he returns to the nest with a piece of prime beef, or a wingless fly, or a cargo of sugar saved for the community from the grocer's barrel, perches on the top of the dome among his assembled fellows, and disgorging all his spoils divides them equally among nurses and paper makers.

Division of labor, I believe, goes a long way in the nest. Some of the workers seem to be specially employed as foragers and soldiers, others appear to be told off as nurses and guardians, while yet others are engaged as paper makers and masons.

"THE GAME WORE ON."

The Evening Work Ended to the Entire Satisfaction of the Banker.

The game wore on.

The banker, who sat at the head of the table, was kept busy selling stacks of chips. The betting was heavy, and there were but two men who seemed to be winning anything.

The blue chips all came their way. It was simply a case of bullheaded luck. If a man held four kings, one of this pair would bob up with four aces or a straight flush or something of the kind and spoil all calculations.

Meantime the two lucky players conversed cheerfully about their luck and what they intended to do with the money. "I shall," said one, "go down to a fur store and buy my wife that cape she has been wanting so long."

"I shall," said the other, "take part of mine and get a new spring suit. With the rest of it I intend to take a trip to New York. I haven't been down there in a year, and I'm just about due for some fun."

The game continued to wear on, and the other players cursed their luck beneath their various breaths.

It came to be midnight, and 1 o'clock and 2 o'clock, and the game was still in progress. The two men were still winning. Nothing could stop them. At 3 o'clock everybody was tired, and it was decided to quit.

The banker pushed back his chair and said, "I am ready to settle, gentlemen."

It didn't take long to settle with the men who had not been lucky. Then it came to be the turn of the lucky ones. "How much have you got, Jim?" asked the banker.

"Three hundred and forty," replied Jim.

"And you, Bill?"

"An even 400."

The banker took a slip of paper and did some figuring. Then he dove down into one of his pockets and produced some thin white slips of paper.

"What are these?" asked the two lucky men in concert.

"I O. U.'s," the banker answered sententiously.

The two lucky men gasped. They looked at the papers and saw that the signatures were genuine. Then they tore them up and stalked out together.

"By George," said the banker, "I thought they would never get enough won to pay off those I O. U.'s."

"What do you mean?" asked the stranger in the game.

"I mean," said the banker as he smoothed out a big wad of bills, "that it's dinged tiresome work dealing big hands to two jays like them just because they stuck you once with their paper."

And the stranger in the game saw a great light.—Buffalo Express.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

FRIDAY, JUNE 29, 1894.

The republicans of this county are losing a little of the confidence they have recently expressed of pulling in a man or two on the county ticket. They find the Washtenaw democracy united and pulling harmoniously together. An old time majority may be looked for in the fall.

Things have come to a pretty pass in Colorado under the government of the demagogue Waite. Tarsney, a brother of our own Tim Tarsney, the lion of the Saginaws, was treated to a dose of tar and feathers there last week because his actions as adjutant general displeased some of the excited populace there.

Ann Arbor deserves a new post-office building and, if any new public building is ordered in any city which is not now blessed with one, it looks as if Congressman Gorman would secure one for Ann Arbor. Everyone should do what he can, if opportunity offers, to help along the new postoffice building for Ann Arbor.

It is within the bounds of the possibilities that Mayor Pingree, of Detroit, may be the populist candidate for governor this year. He will aid, if he accepts the populists' nomination, and this seems to be the only nomination he can get, to make the coming campaign interesting. He has been a spectacular mayor and he would make a spectacular candidate.

It is a great pity that the jury in the Ellis case could not have agreed. An innocent man should not be punished and no guilty man should be allowed to escape. As it is, opinion will be largely divided as to the attorney general's responsibility. Some one is responsible for the attempt to defraud the will of the people, and the most reprehensible attempt should be severely punished.

Senator Hill has met with poor luck lately in blocking the tariff bill, which will now soon be out of the way. It looks as if congress would adjourn before the season of the year comes when the McKinley bill was passed. The republicans certainly have no reason to howl concerning the slowness of legislation. The Wilson bill has not been as long in incubation as the McKinley bill was.

The democrats in their state convention put up an exceedingly strong ticket yesterday. There is no doubt of Spencer O. Fisher's strong qualifications for governor nor of his running qualities. Edwin F. Uhl, of Grand Rapids, an old Washtenaw boy, by the way, and one of the ablest men in the state, and John Strong, the sturdy, honest ex-lieutenant governor, of Monroe, are just the right sort of men for United States senators. The rest of the ticket is a good one. The platform strongly indorses the administration, reiterates the Chicago platform's tariff declaration, declares for the restoration of the public domain to actual settlers, demands practical and direct laws against trusts and monopolies, declares in favor of bringing the United States Senate nearer the people, demands new laws as safeguards against fraudulent election laws, endorses Grover Cleveland, declares for arbitration, free silver, the per diem pension bill and strongly denounces protection.

The recent statement to the press, prepared by Col. Conger, of Akron, comment upon which appears elsewhere in this issue, should contain matter for the thoughtful consideration of every democrat who has to do with the making of the democratic tariff policy. It is not the prominence of the man which gives such importance to his words, but the fact that they are the "opening guns" in Thomas B. Reed's campaign for the presidential nomination in 1896, and the further fact that the people are undoubtedly behind this position. It all means that the republicans have learned the lessons taught by the elections of 1890 and 1892 and that it is suicide to persist in the same policy any farther. It means that they realize the fact that the only thing that has saved them from political ruin, is the treachery of the Gormans, the Smiths, the McPhersons and Brices among the democrats. Tariff reform is therefore to be the slogan of the republicans in the coming presidential campaign. It means that if the democrats fail to carry out their pledges to the people in the matter of tariff reductions, the republicans propose to steal the thunder and ride back into political favor on that issue. The words of Col. Conger should therefore be regarded in the nature of a prophecy by the democrats and the party should take warning before it is too late. Let the leaders of the democratic party at Washington give ear and proceed to obey the twice repeated commands of the people.

The signs of the times seem to indicate an intention on the part of Thomas B. Reed to carry the tariff war into Africa. The recent utterances of Col. A. L. Conger, of Ohio, in favor of tariff reduction are generally believed to have been inspired by the Maine Statesman. Col. Conger says that he was educated for a high protectionist, but that he has learned something from a long business connection with manufacturing industries of various kinds. He declares that while he is a protectionist still, he believes in revision downward. The McKinley act with its scores of wrongs and inconsistencies, he says, lost for the republicans the campaign of 1892, and it is not right for McKinley and his friends to undertake to commit the party again to a proposition which will surely lead to defeat in 1896. He points out specifically a number of the grievous injuries worked by the McKinley monstrosity and says that the country wants no protective tariff that fosters trusts. All this indicates not only that there is to be rough sailing for the tin soldier McKinley, but that some at least of the Republican leaders are beginning to read aright the hand-writing on the wall. Having been driven from official position like Nebuchadnezzar and having been feeding on grass (crow) for two years they are coming to a realizing sense of these sins against the people, and they propose to get in out of the rain if possible. They are beginning to sense the fact that tariff robbery of the many for the benefit of the few is doomed and they propose to save as much as possible from the wreck.

ROUNDBABOUTS.

The Fowlerville races announced for this week, did not take place. There were only twelve entries and the June meeting was declared off.

The excessive modesty of a Howell deputy-sheriff constrained him to lock up a man he found running around barefooted a few nights ago.

Corvis M. Barre, of Hillsdale, late Harrison consul to Chili, has a severe attack of state senatorial fever. He was vaccinated but it didn't work.

Plin Harding, of Northville, last week slipped up in the blood of a slaughter house and stuck a knife entirely through his wrist, narrowly missing an artery.

The marrying contagion has raged with great virulence at Hillsdale this month and some of those who had previously had a run of it, are down a second time.

A spasm of piety seized the Coldwater authorities, and they locked up a tramp on a ten days' sentence for remarking that it was — well, he stated how hot it was, in his judgment.

A bicycle unhorsed editor Andrews of the Williamston Enterprise, last week and broke his shoulder blade. No man should ride a "bike" whose brains overbalance his feet.

The skeleton of an indian with a basket, kettle and knife, was dug up at Sylvan lake, last week. Those skilled in anthropography have no hesitation in pronouncing him a republican "half-breed."

The recent removal of a 37-ounce tumor from between the shoulders of Attorney Watling, of Dundee, was successful and Henry is well again. There are other lawyers who should be operated on for the "hump."

We pay (?) our poet $25,000 a year for his services, and when the Brighton Argus or other sheets copy original poems from our paper without giving due credit, we propose to kick. "Deed we, do."—Fowlerville Observer.

The Brighton correspondent of the Oakland Excelsior remarks that "it is hopeful that good and evil will each find their places and keep them," and innocently closes with "Ye Editor and family Sundayed in our village."

Wayne High school turned thirteen graduates out in the sun last week. Some will doubtless take the upper walks of life, others will descend to the legislature and others will turn book agents and be torn by dogs.

"W. O. Allen has greatly improved his home by tearing down the front fence," remarks the Plymouth Mail. Now, let him jerk out the front wall of the house. Such energetic progress should not stop at the fence.

A set of false teeth, lost by a Wayne lady some years ago, was lately plowed up, and the Northville Record with harsh disregard of delicacy declares that the teeth are on exhibition as belonging to some extinct mastodon.

A Coldwater dealer wished "to call attention of ladies blessed with small feet," to his stock of dainty footwear. The ad. was almost a failure. One lady answered it and said she usually wore 3s, but "would look at some 7s."

Britton, Lenawee county, has secured one of the numerous republican congressional candidates, to deliver her Fourth of July oration. He has a physique of 100 pounds and a voice that is plainly audible against the wind, two miles.

A Hillsdale "Ingin" doctor, in cutting a swell around Marshall, last week, dropped into a hole in the street, left in the evening by the authorities, without a danger signal. The city will settle without suit for the doctor's two broken ribs.

The woman suffragists and the ram-shearers of White Oak have pooled their issues, and the elegant 20-foot flag of the latter was last week floated from the poplar pole of the former and a pleasing program by home talent was executed.

When two constables recently attempted to serve a summons on Ferdinand Thieme, a giant wood carver of Adrian, he gave them the "fire bodily" and is under arrest for fracturing the peace and dignity of the state of Michigan.

Editor Topping, of the Fenton Courier, has begun to reap the honors, glories, emoluments and cussings that keep alive the activities of postmaster. This was the reward of merit. And behold is it not written that "the steady pulling on the hair puts the parasite in the fire."

During a recent thunder storm, F. E. Morris, near Hillsdale, was killed by lightning and a companion was traversed from crown to toe by the current and had a shoe ripped off. Why he escaped alive is something for which he can give no excuse.

The republican charge about the democracy having an organized appetite is a calumnious falsehood. None of the four Frenchtown, Monroe county, constables qualified, and the town board has been obliged to appoint a legal body-snatcher.

Dr. Henry Crane and his brother, Adelbert, or Adrian, have sued their mother, to recover two-thirds of $10,000 of life insurance, left to Mrs. Crane and her sons jointly. The mother charges the boys with their bringing up, and claims nothing is due.

Will Raymond is credited by the Monroe Democrat with having recently caught a 20 pound turtle at Bay Point whose back bore a brass chip imbedded there in 1871 by H. A. Dash, a Toledo saloon-keeper. The chip reads, "Good for Five Cents." There was also, we learn, an obscure carving covered with green moss. Only the word "Adam" could be deciphered, and from this it is thought the turtle escaped from Paradise.

Joshua Milton, of Adrian, colored, very tough and a thief, was arrested last week by the marshal, after a race, rough-and-tumble and revolver fusillade. A search of his rooms revealed a stock of dry goods that showed how nearly he had moved the merchants out doors.

At Northville last week a street "medicine" vendor took in $150 in a short time. There are men who will sneak up the back alley to avoid the editor he owes for three years' subscription; yet they will step nimbly up to a fakir's wagon and shed a $5 bill for a 30 cent nostrum.

The Fowlerville Observer speaks of a tree in front of the house of one Bert Smith, being struck with lightning and "torn to smithereens." It is evident that the lightning struck in the wrong quarter, but we are estopped by journalistic courtesy from naming the proper place.

For slighting the obsequies of a dead horse, Wm. Mulligan, of Hudson was sent to jail for ten days. From his shallow tomb the horse seemed stronger, dead, than living. William Rickard, for damning the court, in connection with the case, contracted contempt of court and was held for a roasting.

Fourteen populists massed in Lenawee county and chose representatives to the state convention. The treasurer announced that the receipts for the expenses of the convention had been one dollar and the expenditure eight dollars. This precipitated another financial panic and the meeting adjourned.

Johnnie Dickson, of Fowlerville, got up Sunday morning with an edge to his appetite, and it was not until he had turned three dozen raw eggs into his maw, and followed them with four oranges, five lemons and half a pound of peanuts that he made some remark about quitting lest he should make a hog of himself.

Now as regarding a runaway horse, the Stockbridge Sun deposes and says: "After hanging the harness and cart on the telephone pole, the fractious animal went out on the square, admiring our new town hall with one eye, and eating grass with the other." Can it be that the editor is quite right in his mind this hot summer?

It is announced in the Manchester Enterprise that "the state holiness league camp meeting will be held at Napoleon, commencing Tuesday evening, June 26 and closing July 4 with pentacostal fireworks from heaven." From this it appears that St. Michael has entered into pyrotechnic rivalry with old Nick. Glad the monopoly is busted.

Weary of the sessions of the "Committee on the State of the Union," whose regular meetings took place on the salt barrels in front of his store, a Monroe merchant last week found a way to prorogue the congress by smearing the barrels with molasses. The committee rose with some difficulty and was very profane about the sugar schedule.

Some person devoid of the fear of God, man and the Plymouth village marshal, endangered the lives of the council the other night, by firing a whiskey bottle through the window, smashing the glass and letting loose the demon of delirium tremens. If the fellow really intended a tragedy why did he not invite the council to a drink of Plymouth whiskey?

The Hudson Republican is only three months old, but it already has both fore feet in the trough of state patronage, having gobbled the delinquent tax list for Lenawee county. The two senior republican organs of the county, the Hudson Post and Adrian Times, are aghast at the gall and the "organized mouth" of the infant, and will probably not favor the present auditor general's re-nomination.

The editor of the Wayne Tidings allows a lady the use of a column and a half of his paper in which she jumps on him with her whole weight, walks back and forth on his prostrate body, and bumps him by the hair against the floor with a sort of "take that and that, you villain!" When she is through he rises, brushes off the dust and remarks that it is a regular luxury to have some one edit his paper for him this hot weather.

Gen. Geo. Spalding, of Monroe, has secured the contract of delivering the Fourth of July oration at Dundee, and will endeavor to show "between the walnuts and the wine" that as a congressional runner he is without a spavin, wind-gall or sweeny. The General is a mighty good fellow and all that, but the Argus doesn't mind saying right out in church that it will give his bank account the sweny to answer republican assessments, and all for a lost cause. The second district is for no republican.

Favoring female suffrage, Rev. Mr. McIntosh, of Grass Lake, argues the equality of women from the fact that she was taken from man's side. Alas, we do not always know the duress under which male female suffragists sometime labor. We have in mind the distressing case of a distinguished gentleman whose wife compelled him to go forth and do battle for equal suffrage. Her parting admonition was: "Now, be brave and if you forget the lecture I have learned you, look to the Lord and she will help you."

Capt. C. R. Miller, of Adrian, prints an article sustaining the one-term anti-Rich club. He goes in for "a soldier statesman" for governor on a one-term plank. Capt. Miller is a brainy Adrian lawyer, who, if closely searched, might be found to have about him a well-nursed though rather bashful congressional boom. The captain stands in the relation of guardian of Presbyterian predestination on one hand and brother-in-law to the Catholic church on the other; e. g., he is a trustee of the former while his estimable lady is a member of the latter. These alliances many think would give Mr. Miller a strong pull in the congressional race.

Another of Ypsilanti's sinks of sin was sacked in the south part of the city Sunday morning. The police do not snore the whole night through.

A sail boat loaded with Normal students went over in the blow of Sunday, and the occupants' recollection of the Sabbath day command received a severe rousing.

The Ypsilanti Sentinel announces the convalescence of the small-pox patient and adds: "One physician insists that the disease is only chicken-pox." Just as likely as not—caught it in a hen coop.

The editor of the Ypsilanti Sentinel intimates that Bro. Pond of the Courier is crazy.—Register. Why, what an insane idea in Mr. Woodruff. Were we Mr. Pond, we would tie knots in our pedigree and knout him with it.

John Laidlow, the Michigan Central gardener, at Ypsilanti, will construct a floral locomotive, which it is said will be one of the most difficult pieces of work of the kind, ever attempted. But the locomotive will be "a daisy."

The public will be pleased to have the assurance of the Ypsilanti health board that the ambulance pilot who drove the small pox patient to the pest house was placed in a hot bleacher and fumigated four hours with brimstone and is now perfectly safe to encounter.

The terrific blow of last Sunday had the effect of bringing many wicked Ypsilantians to their knees as the wreck of the cyclone came whizzing in upon their memories. But as soon as the storm ceased they forgot themselves and were soon swearing around as usual.

John W. Hodge, graduate from the Normal Conservatory of Music, has already received an engagement as tenor soloist in a professional musical organization. He is said to possess a fine stage presence and a voice as clear as a squirt-gun. Success is predicted for his musical career.

The date of the Farmers' Picnic has been fixed for August 18th. At a recent meeting of the executive committee, it was decided to invite each of the four candidates for governor to a two hour quadrangular jaw-contest on the issues of the day, half an hour being allotted to each to show cause why he should be elected.

Mr. Joe Preston, many years a resident of this city and proprietor of the rink, died this morning of kidney complaint. Mr. Preston was 75 years of age. Funeral tomorrow afternoon at the Episcopal church at 3 o'clock.

The native American patriotism of Ann Arbor will have to be packed in salt to keep during the hot weather, but there will still be a Fourth of July. A parade will take place under the auspices of Schwabischen Unterstuetzungs Verein and entertainment at Relief Park in the afternoon.

In regard to the use of money for Mr. Pingree, two years ago, the Times does not speak from hearsay, but from knowledge.—Washtenaw Times. This reads like a hint that Brown has considerable wealth concealed in his straw tick, and perhaps explains why he is opposed to an income tax.

A cow, owned by Dittmus Harris, of Ypsilanti, falsely suspecting that the young son of John Burkheiser was plotting injury to her calf, gave the lad an "Irish hist" and followed it up by walking on his neck and trying to break it. He was one of the busiest little boys in getting out of the field that there was around there. His neck has a bad wound.

Friends of Adolph Diehl, formerly of Ann Arbor, will be glad to know that the young man is doing a thrifty trade in the shoe business, at Richmond, Indiana. He is in partnership with Mr. Goodspeed of this city, the firm name being Diehl & Co. The Richmond Daily Palladium in a recent issue devotes considerable space to a description of the store.

At the Light Infantry drill, Wednesday evening, Capt. Fischer was sick and First Lieutenant Armstrong was in command, and marched the company to Finnegan's corners for an hour's maneuvering. Corporal Cooper took charge of the recruits and gave them half an hour's exercise on Main street, and afterwards massed them with the main body, then in charge of Lieut. Granger. The exercises culminated in a grand assault on the home of Lieut. Armstrong, where refreshments were served.

A Ypsilanti correspondent of the Daily Times, takes a seat astride the neck of the school board and puts up the accusation that the board appears determined to rebuild the seminary on the old plan, which plan is claimed to be far from satisfactory, and charges the board with having a deeper interest in rebuilding for the cost of the insurance money, than in the introduction of improvement. Well, what is a school board for, except to be "roasted?" Let it put up a building on a modern plan, well lighted and properly ventilated though it may rob the doctors and opticians of some business.

CHEAPSIDE, LONDON.

A CORRESPONDENT CALLS IT THE WORLD'S BUSIEST STREET.

A Lively and Historic Thoroughfare—Not of Great Length, but Full of Interest and Excitement—One Has Not Seen London Until He Has Seen Cheapside.

Cheapside is a street, and a busy one—the busiest, I dare say, of the whole world of streets. It is not long; it is not beautiful; it is not the resort of the fashionable; it is a business thoroughfare from first to last, and it has more history crammed into its short stretch than other great thoroughfares have in their combined long ones.

Cheapside has at one end the Poultry, but this need not be counted as a separate entity. And at the Poultry end is the Mansion House, where lives the lord mayor in gold lace state.

Cheapside is to London what lower Broadway is to New York, between the postoffice and Wall street. Shops, shops, shops, insurance companies, great mercantile houses, restaurants, a church—Dick Whittington's—that is to say, Bow church, where the bells still tingle—these are the stationary ingredients of Cheapside.

Cheapside is like the channel of a tidal river—at one time of the day the current sets in one direction, and at another time it ebbs to the opposite course. The street has many funny little tributaries, with funny little names, Bread street, Friday street, Ironmonger lane and Old Jewry being some of these—narrow passages where in days more primitive than our own opposite neighbors leaned out of windows and shook hands across the street, while from the pavement they could scarcely have seen the sky, so closely did the overhanging stories approach to the roofs thereof.

One kind of commodity Cheapside has in more abundance than any other place on the whirling footstool—jewelry. It may not be the most sumptuous jewelry that ever was made, it may not compare with the golden filigree work of Zamara, but it is jewelry nevertheless and of a good sort for the moderate classes.

It seems to be a trick of Cheapside's shops to display all their treasures to the preoccupied eyes of those who here march in legions along the pavement. They pour their wares into their windows with a reckless profusion suggestive of the orient—that is to say, the orient you read about, not the orient which actually exists.

Cheapside is best seen between 9 and 10 in the morning or between 5 and 7 in the afternoon, either when everybody is coming to or going from his occupation. But all day long the street is crowded from end to end, so crowded that you cannot anywhere cross it in safety, except at the points where constables are stationed to regulate the traffic.

One of the odd features of Cheapside is the line of pedestrians who stand in either gutter, stringing along the curbs and vending catchpenny toys. These merchants are an amusing lot in their way. Their harangues are endless and not wholly lacking in wit, although their language is not altogether parliamentary. They sell the most wonderful assortment of ingenious toys that you can imagine, and every week or two they produce some new thing. Variety is the spice of their trade. The wonderful toys that can be bought of them for a penny allure all kinds of people who go cityward. I know men on the Stock Exchange who make it a point to buy every new penny toy that appears on Cheapside. Their collections have already the appearance of a lesser South Kensington museum or a glorified Lowther arcade. The penny toy vendors may not pause in their vending. The watchful "bobby" keeps them on the move, a necessary precaution in this thick stream of traffic. One should see these penny toy men. Until he sees them he has not seen Cheapside, and until he has seen Cheapside he has not seen London. Besides the penny toys are the only cheap things in Cheapside.—London Cor. Boston Herald.

Sneezing Out the Wedding Party.

The Rev. R. S. Hawker, in the course of some reminiscences of an aged friend of his, quotes an anecdote which this friend, himself a clergyman, was fond of telling. It is about a marriage ceremony and a pinch of snuff, and in the narrator's own language runs thus: "It was always the custom in those days for a clergyman after the marriage to salute the bride first before any other person. Well, it was so that I had just married a very buxom, rosy young lady, and when it was over I proceeded to observe the usual ceremony. But I had just taken an enormous finger and thumbful of snuff. So no sooner had the bride received my kiss—and I gave her a smart kiss for her good looks—than she began to sneeze. The bridegroom kissed her, of course, and he began also. Then the 'best man' advanced to the privilege. Better he hadn't, for he began to sneeze awfully, and by and by the bridesmaids also, for they were all kissed in turn, till the whole party went sneezing down the aisle, and the last thing I heard outside the church was 'Tchu, tchu, tchu' till the noise was drowned by the bells from the tower."—London Tit-Bits.

Paper Tires For Bicycles.

The writer has visited the experimental shop of the parties who are working out the idea of making tires from paper for bicycles. A pressure equal to 120 pounds was brought to bear upon a rubber tire wheel in the presence of the writer, and the tire sunk in at the bottom. Then the same kind of a wheel was treated in the same way as regards pressure, but the tire was made of paper. The same weight did not cause the tire to sink in so much as in the case of the rubber one. Thus the paper tire can be run over cobblestones, sandy roads, mud, etc., and be less affected. The continual squeezing together and inflating of the rubber tire has a tendency to wear the rubber and cause a fracture. The paper tire, being less liable to flatten or sink in, is not subject to this wear.—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

A Natural Surprise.

Information was given to the police authorities at B—that a master tailor certified to be dead and buried with due solemnity many years ago was still in the land of the living. For the purpose of a gigantic swindle a doctor had been bribed to make out a spurious certificate in order to obtain payment of the insurance money, amounting to 30,000 marks. Further inquiries having established the accuracy of the facts as alleged, the coffin was exhumed and was found to contain nothing but a stout ironing board. At the sight of it a policeman standing by exclaimed in astonishment, "Golly, how he has altered!"—Deutscher Reichsbote.

Aged Horses.

With moderate care and good usage a horse's life may be prolonged to 25, 35 or 40 years. An English gentleman had three horses which died in his possession at the ages of 35, 37 and 39 years respectively. The oldest was in a carriage the very day he died, strong and vigorous, but was carried off by a spasmodic colic, to which he was subject. A horse in use at a riding school in Woolwich lived to be 40 years old, and a barge horse of the Mersey and Irwell navigation company is declared to have been in his sixty-second year when he died.—London Answers.

Hard on the Canary.

A little West Somerville girl was punished one day for something she had done which she was told not to do. While her eyes were wet with tears she demanded of her mother, with a pout, "Well, who told you?" "Oh, a little bird told me." As the mother left the room she heard the child turn toward the innocent canary which hung in a cage near the window and with infantile spite say, "Mean old tattle tale, tattle tale!" The "little bird" story worked well that time surely.—Somerville Journal.

His Sole Regret.

"You are not afraid to die, are you?" asked the weeping watcher by the bedside. "No," whispered the chronic kicker, "but it does worry me to think that I shall soon be with the silent majority, when all of my life I have so enjoyed being in the noisy minority."—Indianapolis Journal.

Some of the bricks found in Babylon indicate by the stamps upon their surface an age of at least 5,000 years. The art of brickmaking was well developed at that time, for no bricks are better made than these.

HINDOO CREMATION.

THEY BURN THE BODIES OF THEIR DEAD IN THE OPEN AIR.

A Strange and Sanitary Mode Which Has Been Practiced by Them For Thousands of Years—The Blessed State From the Hindoo Standpoint.

Although we are beginning to believe more and more every year in cremation and think ourselves accordingly advanced, the Hindoos have practiced it for thousands of years. The funeral pile of a rajah sometimes costs lacs of rupees. A Hindoo body is sometimes burned when 3 rupees cover the entire expenses. The rich Hindoo may be somewhat exclusive. The Hindoo masses do everything simply and openly. They bathe out of doors, they pray out of doors, they cook out of doors, they die out of doors and their bodies are burned out of doors. There are three burning ghats in Calcutta.

A writer to the Pall Mall Budget tells very entertainingly of a visit she made to one of the cheapest and most primitive of these three.

Just as she entered into the inclosure where a burning ghat was in full operation there was a crack—a sharp retort like a pistol. The heat had just broken through a dead man's skull. It was the last human part to protest against the extinguishment of death.

The funeral pile of a poor Hindoo looks like an ordinary kitchen yard wood pile. But if you go up close to it you discover something very like a human form, a glowing, charred mass, distinguished from every other shape, animate or inanimate, for the Hindoos literally purify their dead by fire. The body is burned until absolutely nothing remains but a handful of ashes, ashes wholly free from any unclean or poisonous matter. As the writer was closely observing the glowing pile a new body was brought in and the rite begun.

Two coolies carried the body upon a rude litter, woven from coarse grasses and held together by outlines of bamboo. Two of the dead man's brothers followed, chatting pleasantly. Four stout sticks of wood were driven upright into the ground, at the corners of an imaginary parallelogram about six feet by two. Between these four posts were loosely laid sticks of dry, cheap wood. When the pile was a little more than three feet high, the body was laid upon it. A dirty piece of crash, of the quality the coolies wear about their loins, partly wrapped the dead. One of the brothers stepped up and poured about four ounces of oil over the body. This insured a quicker cremation, but was something of a luxury and not a universal practice. The oil must have cost about three pence. The other brother paid the coolies, who shouldered the light, empty litter and marched gayly out.

More wood was piled upon the dead. A thin stick was lighted at the other funeral pile, which was now flaming finely, the second pile was lighted, and the cremation of the newcomer was begun. The two brothers appeared very interested in the igniting and decidedly pleased when it was accomplished. They squatted down upon the ground, just so far from the pile that they might feel that their scant, filthy garments were fairly safe from the sparks, but near enough to watch all the changing phases of the cremation and to see easily when it was consummated.

They untied a dirty rag from about a small bundle one of them had brought with them. They took out a small earthen bowl. It was clean and shining, and so was the brass chuttee each lifted from his filthily turbaned head. The chuttees held water. The bowl held curry and rice. They fell to eating with gusto. And, pray, why not? They were eating to live. Their brother was burning to live—to live in Hindoo paradise. From the Hindoo point of view this state was far more blessed.

The cremation which was in full blast when the writer arrived was finally completed. Two distinct kinds of ashes were left. The human ashes were carefully gathered into an old chuttee. The authorities do not allow those ashes to be thrown into the river, and they are never thrown there in the presence of Europeans. The ashes of the wood were swept swiftly away. The bits of wood not quite burned were frugally collected to be utilized in the next pile.

The correspondent also tells of a visit to a burning ghat after sundown. "Night," she goes on, "is the time of Hindoo leisure, as indeed it is of most primitive peoples. The inclosure was crowded with burning piles.

"We sailed down the Ganges. The outlines of the attendants of the dead and of the funeral pile were sharply silhouetted against the black background of the dark night by the flames of the grewsome death fires. And from that part of the shore sacred to Hindoo worship came the shrieking and the songs of many thousand half mad devotees.

"In a primitive part of interior India I once saw a maharajah's funeral pile. It had cost a positive fortune. It was built of expensive spicy woods and saturated with costly oils. It was richly gilded, and the dead was wrapped in embroidered silken sheets. For miles the air was sweet and pungent and thick with the perfumed smoke. I remember having thought when a child that the literally sweetest experience I ever had was the attending of a high mass at St. Peter's in Rome. But now I must own that the sweetest smell I ever smelled was the burning of a maharajah's funeral pile."

Hypocrisy Unmasked.

The arrogant and boastful local editor of the Ann Arbor Courier is corpulent with pride over the circumstance that none of his ancestors were ever in jail. But it has been proven that one of them was once a member of congress and consequently this hypocritical braggart has to take a back seat.—Grass Lake News.

A Candid Opinion.

Our esteemed Bro. Woodruff, of the Ypsilanti Sentinel, rises from his prayer of "O, Lord, save us from small-pox!" kicks the dog and remarks:

"Smith, formerly of the Adrian Press, loses the greatest part of his influence in this county by moving to Ann Arbor. When in Adrian the Press was copied largely, by nearly all the papers here. The Argus will be copied but little, and by few. "But it will be taken all the more!" Oh, no. People like dessert, after a good meal, but will they stop as regular boarders where they get nothing but blanc mange and whipsyllabub for a constant diet? Not much."

The Argus' "blanc mange and whip-syllabub" are designed to be swallowed immediately after one of the Sentinel's serial editorials on "Pontius Pilate."

HE BURNED A DIAMOND.

It Was Merely to Demonstrate That the Gem Was Inflammable.

How would you like to burn a two carat diamond merely for the sake of demonstrating a fact in science? Professor Henry Miles George of London did that very thing two years ago.

"What I did was not a new experiment," said the professor, "and was made at the request of a wealthy young countryman of mine who believed that he was born to be a scientist. Whether he was or not is neither here nor there. His first experiment was costly.

"He wanted to satisfy himself that the diamond possessed an inflammable quality, and that after being burned it left no residue. We burned the stone in my laboratory and to the young man's complete satisfaction. After it was consumed there was absolutely no ash. The combustion was complete, and there was an absolute although expensive proof that the diamond consists of pure carbon.

"The inflammability of the diamond," continued Professor George, "was not known till the middle of the seventeenth century. The ancients were firmly convinced that a diamond could not either be burned or broken. This was disproved in 1670 or thereabouts, when a four carat stone was consumed in the flame of a blowpipe. I think it was in Rome. The Grand Duke of Florence, in 1694, thought that fire would reveal the secret of the diamond's composition, and he caused a stone to be placed under the focus of concentrated sun rays. The diamond cracked, coruscated and disappeared. These experiments, as you will readily understand, are not made very frequently. In the interest of science they have been necessary, but as we have a very complete record of the results in several experiments and they all agree there is no necessity for any further expenditure of money in that particular direction. No, I don't think my young friend became a scientist. He married a music hall singer."—New York Mail and Express.

Cavalry and Cold Steel.

If you will allow a cavalry soldier to forget the value of cold steel and rely on fire action, you destroy the dash and elan which make him formidable and should be his characteristic. Therefore Frederick 130 years ago ordered his troopers always to attack, and while he discontinued the use of carbines gave them the necessary support which fire lends by organizing a light artillery to attend their movements.

Napoleon has told us that "cavalry cannot reply to fire and can only fight with the steel," and fully recognizing where lay the weakness of his horsemen he gave them an auxiliary in the shape of horse artillery, which, so far from hampering their movements, added to their boldness and enterprise when acting independently ahead of his vast armies. The co-operation of the two arms was also then found to work in another direction to the benefit of both, for while projectiles loosed compact formations and render the attack of squadrons more dangerous the cavalry force the scattering units to draw together and present an easier target for the guns. Especially was this noticeable during the pursuit of a beaten foe. A battery, bold and well placed, may deny a whole road to the retreating columns, and long lengths of "train" may have to be abandoned on the inroad of a few accurately directed shells.—Saturday Review.

Racing For Life In a Mine.

David M. Griffith, a miner, had a narrow escape from being crushed to death while at work in the Franklin mine, but the accident fortunately resulted in nothing more serious than a broken leg and a terrible fright.

Griffith was at work on a slope when pieces of coal weighing about 1,500 pounds became detached above him and started down the slope toward Griffith, whose only escape lay in running down the slope ahead of the lump of coal. It soon became a race for life, with the coal increasing its speed at every bound and adding to the terrors of the flying Griffith. Half way down the slope the speed at which Griffith was going extinguished the lamp in his hat and left him in the dark.

He continued his flight, in which lay his only safety, and after running for what seemed an age he stumbled on one of the side beams and fell, expecting to be instantly crushed to death. The coal came on, and by a miracle was checked by the timber, but in jamming caught one of poor Griffith's legs against the timber, breaking the bone in two places. Help soon came down to the man, and he was carried out and cared for. Griffith says it was the narrowest escape from death he ever had.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

His 'I's.

General Ogle, when submitting a letter for approval by the Pennsylvania legislature, which he had addressed on their behalf to the newly elected president, General Andrew Jackson, was interrupted by a dapper little fellow from Philadelphia thus: "Pardon me, general, I do not wish to assume to make a suggestion to so distinguished a gentleman as yourself, but I cannot refrain from saying that it is customary in the east, and I may say in almost all the civilized countries of Europe, to write with a capital 'I' instead of the small 'i' in using this personal pronoun in epistolary correspondence."

General Ogle drew down his heavy brows, piercing the dandy's marrow with the fierce shaft of scorn that shot from his eye.

"Sir," said he, beginning with a hiss and ending with a roar, "when I write to such a great man as General Andrew Jackson, Democratic president of the United States, I abuse myself, I abuse myself, sir. I use as small an 'i' as I can put on paper. But, sir, if I should ever get to such a low pitch as to have to write to such a little snipe as you are, I'd use an 'I,' sir, that would fill two pages of foolscap."—Exchange.

Seeing Plants Grow.

In the laboratory the growth of a plant may be rendered visible by attaching a fine platinum wire to the stem or growing part. The other end of the wire, to which is fastened a pointed piece of charcoal, is pressed gently against a drum. The drum is covered with white paper and kept revolving by clockwork.

Of course if the growth is stationary a straight line is marked on the paper, but even the slightest increase is shown by the inclined tracing on the paper.

By a simple modification of this arrangement, the growth of a plant can be rendered audible. The drum must be covered by narrow strips of platinum foil, say one-eighth of an inch wide and one-eighth between each strip.

If the strips of platinum be made to complete the circuit of a galvanic battery to which an electric bell is coupled up, then the bell will continue ringing while the plant grows an eighth of an inch, followed by silence while the pointer is passing over the space between two strips, for the next growth of an eighth of an inch, and so on.

The growth of some very rapidly growing plants and the opening of some flowers, such as the compass plant, can be heard direct by means of the microphone. By the above means it has been proved that plants grow most rapidly between 4 and 6 a. m.—New York Journal.

Kept Her Word.

Two young ladies were walking in the woods one day, when they were accosted by an old and much shriveled gypsy, who politely offered to show them their husband's faces in a brook which ran near by for a slight remuneration. So, paying the sum, they followed the hag to the brook, as they were very curious to see how she could do so wonderful a thing and also anxious to see their future husbands. But instead of beholding the faces of the men they so fondly hoped for they saw their own. "We can see nothing but our own faces," said one. "Very true, mem," replied the sagacious fortune teller, "but these will be your husband's faces when you are married."—Exchange.

The First European Almanac.

The first almanac printed in Europe, or in the world for that matter, was the "Kalendarium Novum," compiled by one Relimontanus and published at Buda, Hungary, in the year 1475. But no perfect copy is known to be in existence, and that is one in the British museum.—St. Louis Republic.

Kossuth's English.

Kossuth had a remarkable mastery of English. This story shows how he strengthened his knowledge of our difficult tongue. Speaking at Concord, Mass., Kossuth wished to express the figure of the Austrian eagle rending the young freedom of Hungary. The word escaped him. Stopping for a moment in the full flight of eloquence, he asked a matter of fact American who sat near him, "What you say when man tear his coat?" "Hole," was the reply. That word did not satisfy him, and Ralph Waldo Emerson, who had overheard the question, whispered "rent," with poetic sympathy for euphony, and the stately sweep of the sentence was completed. He learned the language after his arrest in 1837, when he was sentenced in 1838 to three years' imprisonment, during a part of which he was cut off from all communication with his friends and was denied the use of pen and ink, and even of books. In the second year he was allowed to read, but as all political books were interdicted he selected an English grammar, Walker's Pronouncing Dictionary, and Shakespeare. Without knowing a single word he began to read "The Tempest." He was engaged for a fortnight in getting through the first page.—Chicago Herald.

Because it is the only COMPLETE general history of the war and of the causes leading to it. A lucid, dispassionate story of men and events as they were. A narrative of facts written in the very spirit of truth for the very truth's sake. To the best written history is added a collection of Contemporaneous Illustrations which neither is nor can be equalled elsewhere. Pictures of men and places, of battle by sea and land, sieges, camps, fortresses, and everything connected with the civil and military life at the time. In a word it contains all the most valuable and interesting illustrations from "HARPER'S WEEKLY" DURING AND PRECEDING THE WAR. This feature makes this history of incomparable value, as it contains over 1000 of these famous war pictures.

EDITORIAL MANAGEMENT.

Its editors were Mr. Richard Grant White, who wrote the introductory chapters, Dr. Alfred H. Guernsey and Mr. Henry M. Alden. Among the contributors were President Garfield, General Joseph E. Johnston, General George H. Thomas, General Gouverneur K. Warren, and other prominent officers, both national and confederate. With all the material accumulated in their hands, the authors spent five years in writing the work. All the national and confederate official documents were at their disposal, and were most freely used. Quite a number of these official documents are given in full.

ARTISTS.

A Regiment of artists tell the story faithfully and with surprising clearness. Among them are to be found such distinguished names as Edwin Forbes, Thomas Nast, Sol. Eytinge, Theodore R. Davis, A. R. Now school is going steady, And the boys are neck and neck, For they're busy making ready For the usual "burning deck." And now full many a region "Sir John Moore's Burial" hears, And "the soldier of the legion" Is "dying in Algiers." And as of old the fur flew, It will still fly out of sight, For we hope to hear that "curfew Shall not ring tonight."—Detroit Free Press.
