Secretary Mills' Wheeling Trip.

F. E. Mills, secretary of the Washtenaw county fair association, returned Friday from Wheeling, W. Va., where he was one of the judges on Holstein Jersey and Ayershire cattle at the state fair. Mr. Mills cannot say enough of the hospitality of the Wheeling people. The state fair was a great success. The town of Wheeling is about six miles long and five blocks wide. It is so crowded with buildings the boys don't have room to play marbles. At night the streets were brilliantly lighted with electric lights. The city has excellent hotels and stores. In walking around with a gentleman they looked at a fine store when his friend said, "Would you believe it that in 1884 I was taken out of the second story window of that building in a skiff. The flood was so high that steamboats came up the street."

Death of Mrs. Olney.

Sarah Huntington, widow of the late Prof. Edward Olney, died at her home, corner of East Ann and North Thayer streets, late Wednesday evening. The funeral services were held at her late residence. The remains were taken to Kalamazoo to be laid by the side of her husband who is buried there.

Mrs. Olney was born in Perrysburg, Ohio. She was the daughter of Hon. Elijah Huntington, and was married in her village, where Prof. Olney taught. This was before he had acquired his national reputation as a mathematician and author. Since the death of Prof. Olney, his wife has been a resident of Ann Arbor. She has been an invalid for a long time, but still took much interest in church work and works of benevolence. A large number of people in Ann Arbor will bless her memory.

Visited Ann Arbor Without Knowing It.

Deputy Sheriff Jay Wood has found a man who cannot explain how he came to be in Ann Arbor. On Saturday morning a man was seen tying a horse and buggy near the farmers' sheds on North Main street. The man then walked on Main street. As the horse was still standing at the same place late at night, it was put into W. G. Snow's barn. In the buggy was a bag marked John Johnston, Cone's Station, which is below Milan. No one appearing to claim the buggy, the affair looked very mysterious. On Sunday the sheriff very properly decided to have the case looked up, and sent Jay Wood, his deputy, to Cone's Station. Here he found Mrs. Johnson very much worried as to the whereabouts of her husband. While Mr. Wood was talking with her Mr. Johnston appeared. He said he has found himself in Belleville, but how he got there he did not know. He had no knowledge of being in Ann Arbor. Fifty dollars of his money was unaccounted for.

A Disappointed Young Man.

The many people who knew Miss Mary Purfield, of Moore & Wetmore, were not a little astonished to learn that she was Saturday evening married to George Paltridge, of Kalamazoo. The ceremony was performed in Ypsilanti by Rev. Mr. Smits, of the Congregational church. The couple gave assumed names, the marriage license calling for George Paltre and Mary Young, of Ypsilanti. Her affianced, A. W. Weir, of Oregon, arrived in the city Wednesday and was almost heart broken when he learned that his prospective bride had gone off with another man.

Miss Purfield had formerly been engaged to Mr. Paltridge, but had broken the engagement in favor of Mr. Weir. Two weeks ago she wrote Mr. Weir that their engagement was off. This letter Mr. Weir passed on his way east. Both of the gentlemen are graduates of the University. The young couple are in Kalamazoo where Mr. Paltridge has employment. Miss Purfield's family and friends feel very badly about the affair.

A Chance for a Big Factory.

The Hay & Todd Manufacturing Co. of Ypsilanti have made a definite proposition in reference to putting in a branch factory in Ann Arbor. For a bonus of $6,500 it will invest $15,000 in improvements on a building that it has in view, and will employ a hundred hands within a year. In fact, make the establishment as large as the parent factory in Ypsilanti. Now all that remains is for the citizens to put their hands down into their pockets and put up the money. Then the matter will be settled in short order. From all that can be learned it will be a very good industry for the city and one which the citizens should consider well before they let it pass to another place. The company has received offers of a liberal bonus from other cities. It is one of the best opportunities to secure a good factory that Ann Arbor has ever had, as everyone knows the good standing of the company and of the large demand that has been created for their goods.

At a meeting of a few of those interested in building up the city, yesterday afternoon, it was decided to make an attempt to raise the amount needed to give Ann Arbor a big factory. The committee appointed for the purpose of soliciting subscribers was Charles E. Hiscock, Fred H. Belser, Moses Seabolt, E. F. Mills, Michael Brenner and J. V. Sheehan. They should be well received by public spirited citizens.

A Member of the Ann Arbor Frost Bitten Convention.

The funeral services of Hop. Samuel York At Lee, one of the most prominent men in the territorial period of the history of Michigan and actively identified with the admission of the state into the union, was held in Washington last week. The Detroit Free Press says the following:

He was a native of Philadelphia, where he was born in 1809. He early removed to Cincinnati, and came thence to Kalamazoo, where he was for a time clerk in the land office under Major Abraham Edwards and a noted character in our territorial history. At Lee was a member of the famous frost bitten convention at Ann Arbor, which made provision for the admission of the state of Michigan into the union "through the back door." He was also secretary of the second and third state-senates of Michigan. He was afterwards deputy secretary of state and held other important offices while the capitol was still at Detroit. He married a daughter of Judge Ezra Williams, a familiar figure in local history, and his two sons were both born in Detroit. The eldest William York At Lee, who was a prominent attorney here, died very suddenly about a year ago. The second son, Goodwin York At Lee, who was named for the late Judge Daniel Goodwin, is a well known and respected citizen of Washington. The elder At Lee was appointed by the influence of General Cass to a position in the general land office during the administration of James K. Polk, and continued in office until the war period, since which time he has been retired. He was very active in affairs of the capitol city while it had a local government, and served several years on its common council.

He was a man of fine education and literary accomplishments. He was originally a lawyer and afterwards an editor, having been one of the earliest writers on the Kalamazoo Gazette.

An Abolition Reminiscence.

E. L. Lockwood, of Monroe county, one of the prominent dairymen of the state, was in the city Saturday, calling on F. E. Mills, secretary of the Washtenaw fair association. Mr. Lockwood will represent the Michigan Dairymen's association at the fair. He is a thorough going business man and knows what he is talking about. Mr. Lockwood was born in Connecticut and lived in Delaware and Maryland before coming to Michigan. He had to leave Maryland as a boy of 14 years on account of his abolition views. In those days every lad had his colored "boy." He brought one with him from Delaware, where the law provided that the slaves should be freed when they were 21 years of age. His boy George was about 18 years of age and educated and very intelligent. George did the marketing for the family. At that time the underground railroad was quite active. A public meeting was called in their neighborhood to stop the slaves escaping. His father and himself occupied the platforms along with the "colonels." The discussion waxed hot and one speaker denounced his George as a very dangerous "nigger" and who must be sold south, so as to get him out of the way. Mr. Lockwood, although only 14 years of age, sprang up and said that any man that touched George would be a dead man. Immediately after the meeting Mr. Lockwood found that he had better go north for his "health." Soon after, about the time that Wendall Phillips was agitating the north, he spoke at an abolition meeting in New Haven, Conn. He was very earnest and expressed himself very forcibly. Rotten eggs commenced to fly which he dodged and let them hit the chairman and continued with his speech. The chairman sprang to his feet and begged the audience to let young Lockwood proceed. "Do you not see the young man is crazy; let him go ahead."

Shot His Sister-in-Law.

On Saturday morning the city was shocked to learn that during the previous night Vena Johnson, a 15 year old colored girl had been shot by her brother-in-law Edward Hurst.

The story as related by Hurst, his wife and those in the house is substantially as follows: About midnight Mrs. Hurst awakened her husband by saying someone was trying to get into the house. He was roused up and thought he heard something when he jumped up and ran into the kitchen where there was an old musket which had been loaded some time ago. When he was in the doorway the front door opened and he fired the load, striking Vena Johnson in the side. She staggered to the bedside of Mrs. Hurst. Hurst immediately rushed for Dr. Wessinger. The girl lived about an hour.

Hurst and his wife and baby slept in one corner of their room and Vena Johnson in the other. The girl had gone out into the yard without Hurst and wife knowing it and evidently was uncertain if she should return into the house or not.

The house where the tragedy took place is No 6 Maiden Lane, on the north side. The Hursts lived in the back of the house and a family by the name of Taylor occupied the front part of the house.

Saturday morning Hurst came to the jail and gave himself up. Coroner Ball impaneled a jury who on Tuesday afternoon brought in a verdict that "the deceased came to her death by the accidental discharge of a gun in the hands of Edward Hurst." The witnesses produced before the jury told substantially the same story as Hurst did, with the exception of Officer O'Mara and Night watchman Campion who testified that when Hurst came after the doctor he told them he had been fooling with a revolver and it had gone off and hit Vena Johnson but had not hurt her much.

The funeral services of the deceased were held at the Dixboro church Sunday afternoon, Rev. Mr. Pope, of the Canadian A. M. E. church officiating. She was laid beside her father and mother who rest in the same cemetery. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hurst feel very sad over the distressing affair, which is another striking example of the harm which comes from the free use of firearms.

The Methodist Conference.

Three hundred preachers of the Detroit Methodist conference are in session this week in the local Methodist church. Today this number was supplemented by the arrival in the city of three hundred lay delegates to attend the sessions of the lay conference, which meets once in four years, and which is in session today.

Tuesday evening the conference was informally opened by a reception to the ministers, given by the official board of the church, after which Dr. Joseph F. Berry, editor of the Epworth Herald, lectured under the auspices of the Epworth League, on "What a Tramp Saw in the Emerald Isle."

Wednesday morning at nine o'clock the conference began in earnest with Bishop John F. Hurst, of Washington, presiding. After the sacrament, the roll of the conference was called, by Secretary J. E. Jacklin, associate editor of the Michigan Christian Advocate. He was unanimously elected conference secretary for the second year, with power to appoint his assistants. He named Arthur W. Stalker, of Detroit, associate secretary, C. L. Adams, of Chelsea, financial secretary, Frank L. Osborne, of Tecumseh, having declined re-election to the office of treasurer. E. L. Moon, of Stockbridge, was elected in his stead. The regulation committees were appointed.

The presiding elders began their reports, Presiding Elder Davis, of this district being the first. He had nothing but good to say of his pastors, and reported the district in excellent condition both spiritually and financially. Collections were well up. The local church, under the leadership of Rev. C. M. Cobern came in for special mention on the part of the presiding elder. Improvements to the extent of $1,000 for this year were reported. He referred to the Ypsilanti liquor war, and pleased the preachers by saying they supposed the Methodist ministers were responsible for it.

Wednesday afternoon Rev. Seth Reed, of Northville, delivered his semi-centennial sermon, the ministers preferring to talk over the events of the year together than to listen to sermons. Following the sermon, Secretary Wade took the pastors in tow and showed them a part of the University buildings and grounds. In the evening the anniversary of the Superannuated Teachers' Aid Society took place, Rev. W. H. Shier, of Detroit, the president of the organization, presiding. Good financial conditions were reported. During the year, almost three thousand dollars have been distributed among the needy preachers of the superannuated list. The society has endowment to the amount of $50,000.

There have been many prominent men at the conference, and many are still to come. Among them are Dr. Earl Cranson, head of the western Methodist book concern, of Chicago, Dr. Kelly, editor of the Methodist Review, Dr. Buell, dean of the faculty of the theological school of Boston university, President Fiske, of Albion college, Dr. Arthur Edwards, editor of the Northwest Advocate, Dr. S. A. Keen, of Delaware, Ohio, and many others.

Yesterday morning was devoted to routine business. In the afternoon occurred the anniversary exercises of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society and in the evening the educational anniversary and the consecration of deaconesses. The conference will continue until Monday.

An Important School Board Meeting.

The meeting of the board of school trustees on Wednesday evening was quite unique in a way, all previous traditions and ambitions being slaughtered. It might, perhaps, be called a diamond meeting, from the number of diamonds that sparkled in the ears and on the fingers of the trustees. An entire set of new officers was elected. After four ballots Evert H. Scott was elected president, John R. Miner was elected secretary and Miss Emma E. Bower treasurer. This is the first time in the history of the school district that a woman has filled the responsible position of treasurer, nearly $40,000 passing through her hands.

When President Beal called the board to order, Trustees Gruner, Bower, Jacobs, Mack, Miner, Scott, Beal and Bach answered to their names.

J. M. Perkins of the north side presented in behalf of the people of the fifth ward the necessity for another teacher, one having now to do the work in three grades. There was room for another teacher and they asked that one be appointed. Otherwise justice could not be done the children. The matter was referred to the committee on teachers and text books.

The finance committee reported bills to the amount of $11073.02, including the printing of tickets at the last election, were allowed and ordered paid.

The committee on teachers recommended that Merrill's system of vertical penmanship be adopted in the schools and be introduced in the first and second year scholars this year. It was adopted.

Then came the presentation of names for the position of truant officer. They were: C. Barber, Martin Clark, M. J. Martin and Arthur Sweet. Trustee Miner read the new law, which provides that the truant officer in organized cities shall be a member of the police force detailed for that purpose. He said that there had been some talk of appointing another day policeman by the council to attend to this work. Ald. Maynard, chairman of the police committee, was present and they had better hear from him. Ald. Maynard said the matter had been brought to his attention within the last few days. He thought it would be a good thing for the council to appoint another day policeman.

In answer to Trustee Mack's question, he was informed the board had paid the truant officer last year $83.

The matter was referred to a committee consisting of Trustees Gruner, Bower and Mack.

Then came the organization of the new board. Four ballots were taken for president. The first three were a dead lock, W. B. Smith receiving 4 and Evert H. Scott 4. On the fourth ballot it was broken and Trustee Scott received five votes and was declared elected. The vote for secretary was seven for John R. Miner, one blank. Trustee Miner declared elected. For treasurer Christian Mack received one vote, Leonard Gruner two and Miss Emma Bower five. Trustee Bower declared elected.

President Scott's address upon taking the chair was short—"Ladies and gentlemen, I thank you."

Instructor D. W. Springer presented the board with resolutions passed at a meeting of the high school teachers asking the board to rescind its recent action in making elocution compulsory on the juniors and seniors. It would put too much work on some and prevent their graduation.

Superintendent Perry was asked for his opinion. He said he had not been present at the meeting, but he was in sympathy with the resolution. He did not see why elocution should be selected from some thirty subjects and he made compulsory. It is a generous offer to give the instruction free and he was surprised that it had been made compulsory.

Trustee Mack thought it should not be made compulsory, but voluntary.

Trustee Beal thought there were two sides to the question. It was an important study in the eyes of many people. He thought the whole matter should be referred to a committee to hear both sides. It should be recollected that each teacher was crowding his work.

Trustee Bach said she knew from personal experience the amount of work the scholars had and she thought it was not necessary to make elocution compulsory.

Trustee Miner defended the action of the board. He, too, knew from personal experience and that it should be made compulsory. He had been over 40 years of age before he could get up on a floor before people and express himself. The reason was simply that as a boy he had dodged all such instruction.

Trustee Bower said it was too serious a matter to dispose of in a hurry. Nowadays the boys and young women must learn to express themselves.

The committee appointed to consider the question were Trustees Beal, Bach and Bower.

The question of instruction in drawing and music was referred to the committee on teachers and text books.

At this juncture several of the trustees become quite restive and wanted to adjourn. Trustee Beal said something about the matter of closing the school for half a day at the fair, but the meeting adjourned for one week. Everyone was evidently relieved.

The standing committees for the year appointed by President Scott were:

Finance—Trustees Gruner, Smith and Mack.

Teachers and Text Books—Trustees Beal, Miner and Bach.

Library—Trustees Mack, Bower and Gruner.

Buildings and Grounds—Trustees Jacobs, Beal and Scott.

WASHTENA WISMS.

Wm. Cady, of Pettesville, and George Bailey, of Ann Arbor, accompanied by five of their friends, spent the past week in camp at Reeve's pond, on the base line. They report game scarce, but fun in plenty. Some big suppers were enjoyed by the boys with duck, snipe, woodcock, squirrel, etc., garnished with cabbage and onions. They looked hale and hearty when they returned. Bring us a duck next time, boys—Pinckney Dispatch.

The many flowing wells struck in Manchester have probably knocked the water works question there on the head.

Let every one that take this to heart and apply the advice to himself: Always remember that the editor of the Standard is never too busy to be told on the street or elsewhere and stop of an item of news. In fact he is always on the lookout for news. Then he will not think you are egotistic even if the item is concerning yourself. Help the Standard man and he will praise you when you are dead, if not before.—Chelsea Standard.

The Saline Observer says: Beverly Bugg, who some weeks since was seriously injured at Pittsfield Junction, came home Monday feeling pretty well. The saved foot has healed and is all right. The amputation of the other was below the knee, it too healed readily and with the exception of being a little painful at times, is now in fine shape. Beverly is able to propel himself by the use of crutches. He has the sympathy of the entire community.

According to the Leader teamsters are no respectors of beautiful lawns in Dexter, but ruthlessly drive over the grass. Would not a little dose of village ordinance cause some respect for the beauty of the streets?

The Manchester Enterprise says in reference to County Treasurer Rehfuss, who runs the office by a deputy. "Our old and reliable butcher, Wm. Rehfuss, has disposed of his market to Al Keebler, who has been employed in the market for some time, and Will Widmayer, who has been clerking in his brother's hardware store. The new firm took possession last Monday. Mr. Rehfuss did not sell out for lack of trade, but because he has too much business on his hands. He is thankful for the large patronage the people of Manchester and surrounding country have given him and bespeaks for the new firm the same liberal support, believing as he does that they will serve all customers with fairness and treat them gentlemanly. Mr. Rehfuss will continue to buy stock and wool."

The Woodward and Kies fruit farms are yielding a rich harvest, taxing the help to the utmost to care for the luscious produce. Many people call daily to see and taste of the beauties.—Manchester Enterprise.

The Willis poet in the Ypsilanti in describing a wedding anniversary thus rebukes those that are always crying hard times: It was a social time, and was enjoyed by all present. A nice rocker and other reminders of esteem were left in their keeping as friendship's gifts. The outpouring of tea and coffee and an abundance of the dainties of the culinary art were in evidence against the idler who crieth hard times.

An Ann Arbor newspaper says that James M. White has paid over $3,000 sewer tax without kicking. That proves James to be a very public spirited man, but it isn't fair for him to pay the sewer tax of the whole city just the same.—Ypsilantian. Mr. White is very public spirited and paid promptly, but his tax was only $1,900, at a rate of $36 per $1,000 valuation.

About fourteen voters attended the school meeting at the Ypsilanti high school last Monday evening, to look after the school interests of the city and about five times that number crowded in and around Justice Child's office Tuesday evening to witness the prosecution of the Salvation army leaders for singing gospel songs on the street corners.—Ypsilantian.

About two hundred people in all attended the annual picnic of the German Lutheran Sunday school at Base lake last Friday. The day was an ideal one and the beauties of the lake, as well as the excellent program and refreshments, were greatly enjoyed.—Dexter Leader.

The Neue Washtenaw Post is authoritative for the statement that women voted for the first time at the last school election in Freedom. Its correspondent suggests that at future elections, the male voters had better stay at home.

John King, deputy game warden, has whored the innocents of the Ann Arbor Argus into believing that a pickerel weighing 22 pounds and 4 ounces was taken from Whitmore Lake! John is concocting another yarn to the effect that the jelly tarts who used Jonah for bait to catch that whale with, blundered, as Jonah, being addicted to tobacco, made the whale sick at the stomach and caused it to throw up the aforesaid and the hook with him. Then the fish, laughing in his sleeve, cut stick for deep water. This delightful stuff will probably soon appear in the Argus.—Grass Lake News. The editor of the News will have to keep strictly within the law and stop spearing fish in Whitmore or he is liable to hear something drop. There is no danger of his spearing in Grass Lake because they haven't the fish.

The Milan Chapter, No. 16, O. E. S. have elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Worthy Marton, Mrs. Electa Ford; worthy patron, E. B. The first of the new crop of white beans was marketed in Ypsilanti last week by Walter Waters, of Belleville. He reported that the crop yielded well and was of excellent quality.

Croquet is one of the favorite games in Milan. A permanent organization of the players was effected last week under the name of the Milan croquet association. Charles Gauntlett was elected president, J. Henry Ford, vice president, Milton H. Hack secretary, and Wm. W. Barnes treasurer. The association's new grounds will be on J. L. Marbles lot and are completed ready for games. It is regulation size and shape and the arches set according to 1895 rules, and games will be governed by said rules and regulations. The association will retain its old ground just the same.

A Timely Reminder.

Each season forces upon our consideration its own peculiar perils to health. The advent of fall finds many reduced in strength and vigor, poorly prepared to continue the business of life. The stomach and bowels, the great highways of animal economy, are especially liable to disorder in the fall. The nervous system has also suffered in the struggle. Typhoid fever and malaria in particular find in the fall that combination of earth, air and water that make this season especially dangerous. The falling leaves, the decaying vegetables, contribute their share of contamination. Hood's Sarsaparilla furnishes a most valuable safeguard at these important points, and should be used in the fall before serious sickness has laid you low.

ADRIAN PRESS WASHTENAWISMS.

What is virtually the "curfew" ordinance may be passed at Ann Arbor. An ordinance is offered, to restrain boys under 16 from running about the streets after eight o'clock standard time. Happy would it be if the "curfew" ordinance could be slapped to some of those boys' dads!

"Where is the money of the country?" screams a financial exchange. Bless if we know, but to clear us of suspicion, we will state that a Webster man with 21 children has been caught saying that he was going to take the "hull family and his grandmother to the Washtenaw fair."

The editor of the Chelsea Herald after being a helpless spectator of the avidity with which people of the town were hooked in the other day, by a street faker, has exchanged his skepticism for a two-handed clucker on the rule that "that there is a sucker born every day." Yea, and sometimes twins.

Washtenaw county fair opens September 24. The preparations being made for it are on a very grand scale, and are attracting much attention. It appears to be the ambition of the management to rival or eclipse the celebrated Hillsdale and Lenawee fairs. To that end a series of attractions, varied and expensive, are booked for the various days. The people of the county are also getting a great number of exhibits ready and talk of coming to the fair as though it were a world's exposition.

Won't somebody please build drinking fountain for the Ann Arbor Democrat's "Man About Town." She is awfully thirsty.

The Washtenaw Times mentions the "Sunflower club." How thick the fads come! Why not have a "Nettle" club, "Bull Thistle" club, "Beggars Needle" club, "Tumble Weed" club, or "Prickly Lettuce" club? Yes, let us.

The Argus says in its report of the Whitmore lake picnic, "when Mr. Peters stopped, on motion of Mr. Waldron, Wm. Ball was elected president for the ensuing year." And did the silent man stop on motion of Mr. Waldron?

J. C. Wilson, of the "sixt" ward of Ann Arbor, is reported to have a sweet pea vine so tall that it takes two men to see the top.

It has been discovered at the University that the longitudinal measurement of a diphtheria bacillus is one 25-100th of an inch long. Wooo! what a critter to be in the night!

Crime is beginning to be punished as it ought to be. In Branch county a man was fined $13 for misusing a dog, and an Ann Arbor man had to pay $2 for whipping his wife.

Sunday bathing has received a set back at Whitmore lake. The Ann Arbor Courier says: "George H. Winslow's six year old boy cut his foot very badly Sunday while wading in the water. An artery was cut and the little fellow nearly bled to death."

A black cloud in a whirl, carrying with it dust and we have no doubt fish and cranberries, according to the custom this year, frightened Chelsea people into repenting of their sins last week. No damage happened however, and all fell from grace in less than half an hour.

At the Whitmore lake farmers' picnic Hon. Geo. A. Peters said, "We work too much, raise too much, and do not talk enough." "Talk!" Aye—there's the rub. Mr. Peters everybody knows to be a blushing, bashful bi-metalist for silver only whose great grief is his lack of oral communication. Yet if Secretary Mills of the Washtenaw fair association believes that man cannot talk a bluster on a prize bull's forehead clear across the fair ground let him hang up a $50 purse and see how quick Peters will win it. P. S.—Hang up silver—he won't talk for gold.

Referring to the story now going the rounds to the effect that an Adrian preacher, a newspaper man and a bar tender are frequently mistaken one for another the Ann Arbor Register remarks: "And it is also said that Bro. Smith of the Adrian Press was asked to preach a funeral sermon the same day that papers were served upon him by a constable for keeping the side door of his bar-room open on Sunday." Papers served on whom—the preacher, bartender or Smith? Something here needs an explanation.

Pete Carpenter always had friends here, and after he moved to Ypsilanti he lost none of his faculties for making friends. He's now the popular postmaster there, but no democrat. Not any free trade for him. He's a holdover, under civil service, and Frank Bogardus may learn the business of him yet.

Thomas M. Cooley, who was admitted to the bar and practiced law in Adrian for some time, is a resident of Ann Arbor, honored the world over as a sound writer on constitutional law, and as one of the foremost lawyers of the age.

Again the Boys in Blue March to Union Music.

PARADE CHEERED BY A MULTITUDE

Evation Given Commander-in-Chief Lawler—Some Notable People Who Were on the Reviewing Stand—Grand Campfire at Night at Which 4,000 Old Soldiers Are Present—Henri Waterson Lets the Eagle Loose in His Welcome.

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 12.—Yesterday at the G. A. R. encampment was "the day we celebrate." There is no doubt about that. It has been the same at every encampment—the day of the parade was The day. The old soldiers, many of them grizzled and gray, travel hundreds, and sometimes thousands, of miles for the privilege of marching for an hour or so to the "music of the Union." The fact that there was going to be—and was—a new feature in yesterday's parade, brought thousands to Louisville who would not otherwise have come. That new feature was that ex-Confederates would do a big portion of the cheering of the line as it marched.

Procession Moved on Time.
A feature that was not looked for but was a feature nevertheless, was that the procession started on time to the minute. The procession was headed by members of the Louisville Legion and the civilian committees which have had charge of the arrangements, and immediately after these was Columbia Post, of Chicago, escorting Commander-in-Chief Lawler. When the white caps of the escorting Columbia Post loomed up the multitudes on the platforms and along the streets opened the chorus of cheers for Commander Lawler and kept up the cheering as the posts of the different departments passed the stands and street inter sections.

Viewed by Half a Million People.
The parade was witnessed by 500,000 people, who lined the sidewalks, windows and roofs along the line of march. In accordance with the resolution adopted last year by the council of administration the route of march was limited to twenty-six squares, or a distance of two miles and a quarter, complaints having been made that the routes heretofore chosen were too long for the veterans, who are yearly getting more feeble and less able to stand a long march in the heat of the day. The early morning trains from interior points of the state, as well as from Indiana, Illinois and Ohio, brought tens of thousands of spectators, and these, added to the hundreds of thousands already in the city, made the central streets well-nigh impassable. Ample police arrangements, however, had been made, the roadway over which the parade was to pass had been roped off and altogether the arrangements for the proper movement of the parade were admirable.

On the Reviewing Stand.
When the commander-in-chief reached the front of the reviewing stand he and his staff dropped out of line and took their positions on the stand. With the commander on the stand were: Senior Vice Commander Burchfield, Governor Brown, and Commander Fairchild, of the Loyal Legion. Among the prominent people on the stand were J. Warren Keifer, ex-speaker of the house of representatives and past senior commander; General George O. Steel, ex-governor of Oklahoma and superintendent of the national soldiers' home at Marion, Ind.; D. B. Henderson, of Iowa; Corporal Tanner, ex-commissioner of pensions; General J. B. Henderson, past department commander of Indiana; Colonel W. W. Dudley, ex-commissioner of pensions and past commander of Indiana; W. R. Holloway, Indianapolis; Captain Frank Palmer, ex-public printer, Chicago, and Justice John M. Harlan, of Washington.

Besides there were numerous ladies and ex-commanders, while in the parade were: Ex-Governor Campbell, of Ohio; ex-Postmaster Sexton, of Chicago; General H. S. Clark, D. P. C., of Mattison; Major E. A. Blodgett, of Chicago; Major H. H. McDowell, of Pontiac, and Colonel L. E. McPherson, all of Illinois.

WATERSON AT A CAMPFIRE.

The Friend of the Star-Eyed Goddess Does Himself Proud.

The veterans closed the day's doings with campfires last night, the most important of which was the one at the Music hall, which was attended by 4,000 old soldiers. The campfire opened with "Marching Through Georgia," played by a military band. Henry Waterson, editor of the Louisville Courier Journal, then made the welcome address in behalf of the citizens committee. He spoke in part as follows:

"Comrades, for under the star-flowered flag of the Union all who truly love it are comrades, in the name of the city and state I bid you the heartiest welcome. I have been in every state and territory of the Union and I can truly say that I never came away from any, one of them where I had not found something to make me proud of my country. "Let the dead past bury its dead. You at least have no reason to complain. You got away with us as many of us as we got away with you. The brave men who have gone to heaven have long ago settled the account before that court where all is made right that so puzzles us here. God reigns, and the government at Washington lives. That should satisfy us all. If there is any more fighting to be done, let's go and lick England and take Cuba; let's go and lick Spain and take Cuba; let's go and lick creation, and make the unspeakable Turk vote the American ticket. We can do it. Shoulder to shoulder, with the world before us and Old Glory above, who shall stop us?"

"The monstrosity of slavery out of the way; the foolishness of secession out of the way; the nation having actually had its new birth of freedom; what but ignorance and prejudice is to hinder the stalwart American in Minnesota from taking the hand of the stalwart American in Georgia and calling him 'brother?' Both came from a common origin—good old Anglo-Saxon and Scotch-Irish stock—and are welded together by common interest and a common destiny.

"This is an occasion for rejoicing, for merry-making; not for reflection. If anybody thinks he's thinking, wake him—he's only dreaming. If anybody thinks he's not welcome, tie him. If there's a dog that falls to wag his tail for joy, shoot him. We are glad to see you. We are glad you came. Now that you have found the way, come again and come often. The latch-string will always hang outside the door, and the only password shall be, 'I am an American citizen.'" Waterson was frequently interrupted during his speech by applause, and when he finished the building fairly shook with the cheers that were given for him.

Commander-in-Chief T. G. Lawler responded. He said: "I want to say to you that I accept your welcome. Not for myself alone, but in the name of 200,000 Grand Army men. You have given us a royal and loyal welcome. I have been all over the country during the last year and everywhere I went I met comrades who, without exception, were looking forward to coming to this great gateway to the south with pleasure. They wanted to let the boys of the south know that there was no longer any north or south, but that all are one and for old glory."

At the camp fire at Phoenix Hill park, Congressman Walter Evans presided. The music and recitations were excellent. The main address of the evening was by General Simon Boliver Buckner, the commander of the Confederates at Fort Donelson and elsewhere. General Buckner's speech was repeatedly and enthusiastically cheered by the federal veterans. General Buckner had been in the parade during the day.

At the National park campfire the crowd was equally large, the programme of music and recitations being elaborate. John H. Leathers presided. Campfires were held also at Camps Caldwell and Welsinger, New Albany and Jeffersonville. Recitations were given by the lady officers and Mrs. Hirst, also to General Lawler and others. Most of the state departments of the W. E. C. held receptions last evening.

PROSTRATIONS FROM THE HEAT.

Cavalry Officer Has a Leg Broken by His Horse Falling.

The thermometer stood at 96 in the shade and there were a number of prostrations from the heat, and a few accidents. The horse on which Captain C. E. Nordstrom, of the Tenth United States cavalry, was mounted, slipped and fell, pinning Captain Nordstrom's left leg under him. The ambulance corps was called and Captain Nordstrom was taken to his home. Upon examination it was found that his leg was broken. Lieutenant Colonel Belknap in trying to mount his horse was kicked by the animal, which suddenly turned upon him. He was knocked to the ground, but his injuries are slight.

One of the most serious cases of prostration at the hospital is that of William Jancke, commander of the department of Missouri; William Turner, of the Soldiers home, at Dayton, was also seriously prostrated. Other prostrations were: John Thomas, member of a Michigan post, fell and cut a deep gash in his head; J. H. Perchell, vice adjutant of the department of Missouri, fell from exhaustion; William R. Gill, vice commander of the department of the Potomac, from exhaustion; also Henry B. Owen, of the Philadelphia Old Guard; Colonel Gerhart of Pittsburg; A. J. Dixon, of Dayton, E. S. Herbert, of Springfield, Mass.

Many who were viewing the parade fell from heat prostration and the hospitals are well filled. The parade was over four hours in passing a given point and the boys were marching over five hours. Barring the awful explosion of the caisson of the cannon that was to fire the sunrise salute the parade was a great success.

OPENING DAY AT ATLANTA.

Some of the Features That Will Mark the Exposition Inauguration.

ATLANTA, Sept. 12.—The opening day of the Cotton States and International exposition Sept. 18 promises to be a tremendous success. Atlanta is already filled with strangers. TRYING TO EMULATE FLORIDA.

Ishpeming Strikers Don't Use Winchesters, but Their Intention Is Plain.

ISHPEMING, Mich., Sept. 12.—A crowd of strikers who assembled in the vicinity of the Salsbury mine to watch for the approach of the new men who were expected on the midnight train loosened the brake on a train of ore cars and ran them into that location. They were going fifteen miles an hour when they struck the cars in which the steam shovel, operators and others working at the mines under military protection were sleeping. The men were thrown from the bunks. The sleepers were driven over 200 feet along the road, and one of them, which ran against the ore shutes, was derailed and somewhat damaged. The ore shutes were completely demolished.

TRAIN ROBBERS MAKE A FLUKE.

Find That They Have Missed Their Object and "Light Out."

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo., Sept. 12.—Passenger train No. 1 on the Rio Grande was held up at the little station of Crevasse, about twenty-three miles west of this city. When the train had gone a short distance from Crevasse the engineer discovered that the engine had been run on a siding and was pulling only the mail and baggage car, the rear portion of the train having been cut off at the station by the robbers. Evidently they thought they had detached the express car from the train, and found that it was only the baggage car. When they discovered their mistake they mounted horses and skipped for the mountains.

Is a common complaint and it is a dangerous symptom. HIGH STATE TAXES AND DEPLETED TREASURY.

Our overwhelmingly republican administration is up to the usual trick of depleting the public treasury. From the report of the state treasurer it is seen that the balance on hand in the state treasury, June 30, was only about half what it was on June 30 of the preceding year, and this in spite of the largely increased state tax which has been imposed since the republicans succeeded the democrats in power in this state.

On June 30, 1895, the balance in the state treasury was $290,417.79. On June 30, 1894, it was $521,825.27. Our republican friends should be proud of this heavy reduction of cash on hand.

To show how rapidly this increase in state expenditures has been we turn to the first year book on which we lay our hands, the red book of 1889 and find that the total state expenditures for the year ending June 30, 1888 were $2,869,808.94, while for the past year the state expenditures have grown to the enormous total of $3,935,605.68, an increase of over a million of dollars in seven years, or, to state the matter in another way, the state expenditures have increased over thirty-eight per cent.

Should not these figures, all taken from republican sources, open the eyes of the voters to the fact that Michigan has had all the republican rule that is good for the pockets of the tax payers?

Welcomed Him Home. (From Thursday's Times.)

Seldom, if ever, in its history has the lawn in front of St. Patrick's rectory, Northfield, presented so brilliantly illuminated and animated an appearance as it did last night. The occasion was the return of the highly esteemed pastor of the parish, Rev. L. P. Goldrick, from a month's vacation, the first he has taken since he took charge of the Northfield church, nine years ago.

Nothing could have shown the exceeding popularity of Fr. Goldrick among his many friends in Ann Arbor and other parts of the county than the heartiness of the reception he received last evening. The lawn in front of the beautiful house was crowded with old and young, rich and poor, regardless of creed or nationality, all eager to show their gratification at having this popular priest at home again in their midst, fully 600 people being present.

On the appearance of Fr. Goldrick at the entrance to the grounds about 8:30 o'clock (he having been purposely detained in Ann Arbor until that time) a chorus of ladies and gentlemen struck up a welcoming song which was continued until he reached the house. The Beethoven quartet, of Ann Arbor, then sang "Three Doughty Men," after which Rev. E. D. Kelly in a few words welcomed Fr. Goldrick back to his home and his people. In the course of his remarks he said that Fr. Goldrick always had a picnic at Whitmore Lake, July 4th, and on that occasion he "held up" everyone in Howell, Brighton, Northfield, Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti and other places in order to make it a success, but he hoped that hereafter he would dispense with the holding up process. He then spoke of Fr. Goldrick's liberality of spirit, generosity and kindly feelings towards his fellow men and hoped that his image would be photographed on the hearts of all with whom he came in contact. He concluded by again bidding Fr. Goldrick a hearty welcome.

E. N. Bibbie next rendered a beautiful selection on the violin with piano accompaniment by Miss Minnie Davis, which was enthusiastically encored and willingly responded to. "Sleep on thy pillow," by the Beethoven Quartet was the next number on the program and it was followed by Fr. Frank T. Kennedy, of Ypsilanti, who welcomed Fr. Goldrick home and then proceeded to liken his return first to the old Roman conquerors who were received with open hearts and hands by their countrymen, and secondly to the prodigal son, who having gone from home had returned after having spent all his substance, to find everybody glad to see him and the fatted calf killed for his reception. His remarks were received with loud applause and laughter.

A solo, "Little lost child," by Frank Ryan was followed by Jas. E. Harkins, who sang a welcoming song which was heartily encored. Philip Duffy, the president of the evening then made a few remarks and invited those present to sit down to the tables and enjoy the refreshments that had been provided for the occasion. This afforded a breathing spell during which time everybody visited with their friends and heartily enjoyed it.

After refreshments the Beethoven quartet rendered a selection, "Will no one bid me welcome home," and Allie Long played a violin solo accompanied by Miss Davis. Philip Duffy in a few words then gave Fr. Goldrick a hearty "Cead Millia falthe" and assured him of the goodwill that existed towards him by his parishioners. He had lived in Northfield 46 years and in that time they had had many priests to minister to them all of whom had been backed up by the congregation in whatever they wished to carry out. The Catholics of Northfield had no divisions or dissensions among them and their church and no one had done more for the parish than Fr. Goldrick. In concluding he asked that gentleman to accept a small donation from his people, as he knew that his exchequer must be somewhat depleted by reason of his absence from home. The small donation amounted to over $100.

Fr. Goldrick in response said he had received notice from Fr. Kelly that on no account must he fail to be in Ann Arbor by 6 o'clock this night as an urgent matter demanded his presence, consequently he had hurried home. He said he felt something like the Irish boy who when he first donned his regimentals was asked by his mother if he did not know her, to which he replied, "Upon my word, mother, how should I know you when I hardly know myself!" He thanked the congregation for their many past kindnesses to him and also for their hearty, handsome welcome, and assured them that while absent he had often thought of his Northfield home and his people of St. Patrick's church.

Fr. Dwyer thanked all those who had taken part in the program of the evening and also thanked the people of Northfield for their kind treatment of him during his stay among them.

A couple of songs from Jas. E. Harkins wound up an entertainment that was almost an ovation to its recipient.

Fair Notes. (From the County Fair News.)

The fair is an exhibition for the people and by the people, and all the people should attend.

The exhibits at a fair fan our zeal for knowledge, and call our attention forcibly to the living problem of industrial and agricultural education.

If you do not feel like attending more than one fair this year, it should be your home fair. It will suffer no extortionate charges and all may rely upon having a pleasant and profitable time.

The great pictorial lessons afforded by our fairs, render the autumnal season, during which they are held, a vast school in which nearly every branch of practical learning is taught in some degree.

The fair is not a school room hemmed in by four narrow walls, but in the open air, beneath a sky of Italian softness, smiling down upon a country of beautiful and serene as the sun ever shone upon.

It is not a school for people of any special age or class, but men, women and children of every age, station or condition, flock here for rest, recuperation and inspiration as well as for information.

Now is the time to begin to prepare exhibits for our fair. Select the best specimens of the products of your fields and household, collect them together, and when the time arrives, bring them to the fair.

While we are extravagant in the description and praise of our fair, yet we risk nothing in saying that everybody who visits it this year will find what they see in reality far exceeding any conception of it formed reading this paper.

No other country of the world boasts of an institution similar to our fairs, and we certainly have no grander achievement. In them we see the annual proof of America's intellectual progress, and the expansion of our minds toward perfection.

The live stock feature of a fair is always a popular one. A long row of stalls filled with the choicest possessions of stock raisers, is an attraction that is always inviting and interesting, and a grand parade of premium animals is a scene that has no superior.

Our American genius has created a peculiarly American institution in our agricultural fairs, and nobody should permit our show for this year to pass by without its having a chance to exert upon him to the widest extent all its enlightening and elevating influences.

We aim not only to equal all former exhibitions, but to excel any and all of them, in all points where superiority is possible. The best proof of the sincerity of our pretensions can be found by attending the fair this year, and testing for yourself, by comparing it with the exhibitions you have witnessed upon our grounds in previous years.

The fair we hold is devoted to the interest of the community in which you live, and no one can reasonably afford to ignore its claims for patronage. No matter how many other fairs and exhibitions one may attend, the home fair has the best and strongest claim upon him, and he should give it attendance also.

There is as much variety in fairs as there is in human nature, and many of them are annual repetitions of the familiar scenes of other years, but we aim to give a fair that will be new to the visitor because there will be new objects to be seen, new sights to witness, and new lessons for thought and contemplation.

The time was when a fair was merely a pumpkin or a potato show, but that time has gone by forever. Today they embrace the intelligence, industry, fashion and financial prosperity of the age. There is scarcely a resemblance between them and the shows of thirty years ago. They have progressed and will still progress and become more and more popular, as they deserve to, as the years come and go.

The word agriculture is broad in its meaning and includes everything growing from the soil. At our fair it includes not only the varied products of the fields, gardens, orchards, green-houses and conservatories, but it means the best of every variety that can be grown in our soil and climate. It is a place where you can see what your community is capable of raising and this is well worth the admission fee, although it is but a small fraction of what you can see and learn for the money.

Make your entries early. Don't wait until the fair commences. Avoid the rush. It is impossible to have justice done you in the push and jam. Send to the secretary for blanks and make them out at home, when your head is clear and you know just what you want to do. We are obliged to make out over 4,000 entries at our fair every year and when too many are crowded into one day it is only by the earnest work and perfect system of doing it that justice can be done you. My advice is, make them out at home and be better satisfied. All you will have to do then is call for your tags and mark your articles.

The family that is tired with the work and heat of the summer should use the week of the fair as a time for a picnic, and make every day a holiday. To the men it will furnish an opportunity to wash off the soil-stains gotten on the farm, or the dirt or grime of the work shop. To the women it will furnish an escape from the wearisome anxiety, the hard work and the humdrum of the household. Everybody can turn from the care and confinements of a life of toil to the bright sunshine of the park, enjoying the scenes and lessons for instruction interspersed with appropriate and wholesome amusement, intended to provide recreation, restore languishing spirits, and beget courage to endure the trials of life.

The difficulty of getting some new attraction for the fair, something different from that of last year, increases with every season, but we expect to solve the problem for this year in a satisfactory manner. The monotony of sameness in some departments, due to the similarity of the varieties of products exhibited, although the specimens are different, we hope to overcome by manipulations and new arrangements that will give everything an appearance of freshness, diffuseness and strangeness. The expense of getting attractions will not stand in the way of our having them if they are meritorious. We aim to please the people, and though what we may expend for the comfort and pleasure of our patrons this year may not be directly returned, it will be an investment that we can count on for big profit in the future.

This year will be a great fair year, and the progress of science and art will be illustrated as never before in their nearer approach to perfection. The sanguine soul can scarcely overpaint the achievements of the nineteenth century that will be spread before the eyes of the world. Education will show her methods, invention will set forth her wonders, art will present her loftsiness, the opulence of luscious fruits and beautiful flowers will gladden the eye and appeal to the taste, and every avenue of trade and wealth will pour out their best contributions to the result. While our fair may not be replete with everything that would be shown at a World's fair, still it will have its peculiar features, making it so attractive that none who can reasonably reach it can wisely stay away.

Dr. W. W. Nichols, the large peach grower, expresses himself as satisfied with his peach crop. On Monday he said he was in the middle of the season and had shipped 1,100 bushels. The price at first was a little low, but the quantity made up for the price. His pear crop looks well. "What we fruit growers have now to contend with is a little borer that eats its way right through the barrel of the apple," said the doctor. "It is going to give us much trouble to fight. In some places in my orchard the ground cannot be seen for fallen apples. I cannot spray my apples at this stage of their growth. I do not know how we can stop the ravages of this borer."

Having Hard Work to Work.

In spite of the great flurry in board of public works circles, no local business was done this week, and Inspector Ward is tearing up the house connections on the Liberty street sewer to see if they are properly laid. On Monday the board was notified by Mayor Walker that he had been advised that its action ordering Inspector Ward to uncover the house connections on the Liberty street sewer, was illegal, because only Messrs. Clark and Bullis were at the meeting which ordered the work. Mr. Ross not having been notified. A special meeting was called for Monday night when all the members were present. No action was taken rescinding the board's former action, the matter being laid over to the regular meeting Wednesday evening. At this time no meeting was held, President Clark being out of town and Mr. Ross not appearing. Mr. Bullis after waiting three-fourths of an hour went home.

Cracked a Safe.

Safe crackers got in their work this morning at a few minutes after 1 o'clock, but all they did was to crack the safe and make a successful escape. Patrolman George Isbell and Watchman Quincy Turner were standing across the road on State st. opposite C. A. Maynard's grocery store when the explosion occurred. Both men saw it and ran across the road Patrolman Isbell to Maynard's back door while Watchman Turner stayed at the front door. John H. Nickels, who heard the noise, then came down stairs and with revolver in hand stayed at the door while Patrolman Isbell informed Mr. Maynard and got the store keys. It was so smoky on the inside that nothing could be seen.

Entrance was gained through a rear window which had been pried open, also the blinds. The knob on the safe had been twisted off with a wrench and in the hole it left open was placed the powder. The force of the explosion burst the safe door open and split it apart and the safe with a lot of bags of flour on top of it, in all about 6,000 pounds weight, was moved two feet by the shock. No wet blankets were used to cover the safe, hence the noise was so plainly heard. Tools which were used to do the job were found on the floor and are now in possession of Marshal Peterson. These are about the only clues they have to work upon.

When the explosion occurred the burglars were evidently outside awaiting developments and when they found that the thing was discovered they quietly made their escape. The safe contained $140, but they got none of it. About $2 in change which was in the cash drawer was taken, but that is all. It is believed that the work was done by home talent.

"Every season, from the time I was two years old, I suffered dreadfully from erysipelas, which kept growing worse until my hands were almost useless. The bones softened so that they would bend, and several of my fingers are now crooked from this cause. On my hand I carry large scars, which, but for Sarsaparilla, would be sores, provided I was alive and able to carry anything. Eight bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla cured me, so that I have had no return of the disease for more than twenty years. HOW EASILY THINGS GO WRONG!

Alas! how easily things go wrong. A sigh too much or a kiss too long. And there follows a mist and a weeping rain. And life is never the same again.

Alas! how hardly things go right! This hard to water on a summer's night. For the sigh will come, and the kiss will stay. And the summer's night is a winter's day!

And yet how easily things go right. If the sigh and the kiss of a winter's night come deep from the soul in the stronger ray that is born in the light of the winter's day!

And things can never go badly wrong if the heart be true, and the love be strong. For the mist, if it comes, and the weeping rain will be changed by the love into sunshine again.

—George MacDonald.

A FAIR DIVISION.

The poverty in the village was very general, and but for Pietro Gozzoli the keeper of the wineshop might have lowered his blinds and pulled his door to.

The fishing along the Naples coast had been bad for many weeks, and in Basnio every man is a fisherman and every woman a fisherman's wife or daughter. And so the poverty was great, and Pietro was the only man who still smoked a daily handful of cigarettes and still sat regularly in the wineshop.

He had been to England, and had come back with a fortune, and was independent of the vagaries of the fish and the weather. "Ah," sighed the villagers, as they placed their hands in their empty pockets, "what a lucky man is Pietro, and what a rich place that England must be!"

One day in the early spring, the news went about that this man of fortune was grown insatiable, and was going away again to make more music for the foreigners and to get yet more francesconi. And every fisherman was sick with envy that he, too, could not leave the barren harbor and go to the northern El Dorado. But Pietro Gozzoli alone was possessed of the great sum that was wanted to pay the steamboat people and to hire the organ.

And who would he take with him? Which of the dark eyed village beauties would he invite to be his companion and to share his gains? Many were the longing looks thrown to him and many the prayers whispered to the saints by pretty ones whose fancy saw countless bright ribbons and sashes, the possessions of her who should be chosen.

A day or two more, and it was known that Tessa Pancia was the happy girl destined to be raised to opulence; and, early one morning, she and Pietro left Basnio for the long, dusty walk to Naples. And the next day they were standing on the deck of the steamer, watching the shore line die out as the sea grew deeper and bluer.

During the voyage he taught her the words of English he remembered and talked to her about the life in London; how that they were to work very hard and spend very little, that they might have much to take home with them. And she, still glad that she had found grace in his sight, smiled agreement to everything.

A week after they had walked out of Basnio, beautiful even in its poverty, they were citizens of the Italian colony in London, making music about the streets during the days and passing the nights in a garret in an evil smelling court at the back of Saffron Hill.

Pietro was the musician, and hour after hour for many hours he toiled at the organ handle, now with left hand, and now with right. Tessa carried the tray for the offerings of the passersby, and as she was pretty and begged with a charming smile, her apron pockets were usually heavy with copper coin when the evening and the time to return home came.

Then Pietro relieved her of the weight, and counted out the pence and took them to some shop near by and changed them for silver. When there was enough of silver, it was parted with for gold, and something was added to the little pile of savings.

These savings were kept in a tin box, hidden under a loose board in the corner of the room. Not a very good treasure chest, but Pietro did not understand the English banking system, and there was no one in Basnio rich enough to send money to for safe keeping.

Three years went by, and the yellow hoard was so increased that Tessa's eyes shone and her fancy wandered as Pietro counted and recounted it in the evenings.

"Shall we not go home to Basnio now?" she said as once she watched him. "Have we not enough?"

"No, not quite enough. We will stay this summer and go back when the foggy days come."

(Of course this was spoken in musical Italian, but I have brought it into English for the benefit of the one or two readers who otherwise might not understand.)

Tessa pouted a little at the reply, and consoled herself by going out to talk to Fillipo.

Fillipo was a native of Sardinia who had lately come to London to enter the profession of ice cream merchant. But although it was early summer, the days were rather cold than hot, and there was no demand for ices, either lemon or raspberry, and Fillipo was drifting toward bankruptcy.

His rent was owing and his barrow mortgaged, and he wept as he told Tessa of another unsuccessful day. And she wept too. An exceedingly foolish thing, for she had known Fillipo only a month, and Pietro, whom she had known for years, had told her that he did not like the young adventurer in ice cream and that she must not talk with him.

Nevertheless she wept, and told him how sorry she was. And as the pity grew in her, she thought how much better looking he was than Pietro, and how tired she was of the streets, and how she longed to see the blue sea and sky again. Would Pietro give her a share of the savings and let her go?

But no, that would not be enough for two. Oh, why was not Pietro Fillipo and Fillipo Pietro?

How handsome he was, and he was but a boy, and Pietro was more than 40. She spoke her thoughts, and hope came to Fillipo's face, and he took her hand and began a long, eager whispering. And at that moment Pietro chanced to pass, and saw them, and hesitated for a step or two, and scowled and went on. They were earnest in their whisperings and did not see his coming and his going.

"Tomorrow then, Tessa," said Fillipo, "and together to my people. He will not know, and cannot follow."

"Yes, tomorrow." And she returned his kiss and went back to Pietro.

The next morning Pietro was unwell. Nothing serious, he said; his head ached a little, and he was tired and needed a rest. He would stay at home until the evening, and would then go to Cazzio's and play dominoes as usual, and be all right again in the morning. So that day Tessa pushed the organ about the streets without assistance.

But during part of the morning she rested and talked to Fillipo, who seemed to have forsaken his barrow to follow her. Their talk resulted in some agreement, for, as he left her he said:

"Then, Tessa, I will be waiting at 8 with the tickets. And remember we must catch the boat, and you must manage that Pietro is out," and she replied:

"I will get it; he will be at Cazzio's at 8."

At dark she returned to the court, and, as she passed, Fillipo nodded to her from the shadow of the corner and showed two tickets.

She climbed up the rickety staircase to the room she had shared with Pietro. He was not there; it must be done at once.

She crossed to the corner near the window. The board moved easily, and she felt for the tin box, and found it, and carried it to the lamp.

The box was very light, and fear came to her as she opened it and saw that it was empty save for a fold of dirty paper.

With trembling fingers she undid the paper, and held it to the lamp and read the words:

"Goodby, Tessa. I have decided not to wait for the fogs. We will share now and part. You shall have Fillipo and I the money that was here. Goodby," written in Pietro's rude scrawl.

Fillipo waited long at the corner, and at last crossed to the house, and, learning from the woman standing at the door that Pietro was out, walked up the stairway and into the room.

Then he, too, read the paper, and his sorrow was joined to Tessa's.—Edgar S. Turner in Sketch.

The Durham Rites.

The "Durham Rites" speak of a great store of ancient manuscripts possessed by the house to help the monks in their study. The "Rites" go on to say how the store included "the old ancient written doctors of the church, as other profane authors, with divers other hollie men's works, so that every one dyd studye what Doctor pleased them best, havinge the Librarie at all times to go and studye in, besydes their carrells."

From the same "Rites" we learn that in the dormitory each monk had a little chamber to himself with a window, or a bit of a wdw, and in the window a desk for books, so that he could study, if he pleased, in the hours spent in the dormitory. Special directions were given that the monks and novices were not to be disturbed in their "carrells" while they were studying.

In their care for education in days when all training for the young, save in arms and field sports, was comparatively little thought of, the record of the monastic orders is an honorable one. Besides maintaining a "song school," the more important houses regularly trained their novices in other learning; and again, to use the words of the "Durham Rites," "yf the Maister dyd see that any of them were apte to learnyng and dyd applye his booke, and had a pregnant wyt withall, then the Maister dyd let the Prior have intelligence. Then straightway after, he was sent to Oxford to school." Other people, too, sent their sons to the monks for education, which was sometimes given freely and sometimes paid for.

Mention has been made of Oxford. The "Durham College," besides the pupils sent up from the abbey, admitted regular students. A purely monastic college as early as A. D. 1283 was founded in Oxford for 13 monks of St. Peter's abbey, Gloucester. This, before the end of the thirteenth century, developed into a great Benedictine house of learning, and a long list of abbays united together to maintain this Benedictine college at Oxford, which flourished until the reformation.—Quarterly Review.

A Fire Curtain of Water.

An effective device for the protection of buildings from fires in adjacent structures has been successfully tested in Boston. The idea worked out in the apparatus is to maintain a sheet of water between the fire and the building to be protected. This is done by placing on every open side of the building near the top a line of perforated piping for carrying water. The complete apparatus consists of a five inch standpipe, extending over the upper story. From it runs another pipe around the sides and front, from 2 1/2 to 4 inches in diameter. On the front are three revolving sprinklers, and one is placed at each exposed side, in the center. The arms are of bronze metal, slightly curved. At each end of the arms is a ball nozzle, such as is used by fire departments on regular hose lines. At the base of the standpipe is a Siamese connection for four lines of three inch hose. At the Boston test a fire department steamer furnished the power, and for about 15 minutes poured through the sprinkler a delivery of 1,000 gallons a minute, completely drenching the walls and keeping a continuous sheet of water from top to bottom.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

DEATH OF TECUMSEH.

POINTS ON A QUESTION THAT HAS LONG BEEN IN DISPUTE.

The Claim That an Old Indian Warrior, a Bitter Indian Hater, Killed the Celebrated Chief—A Document Found Among the Late Richard Conner's Papers.

The following account of the death of the great Indian chieftain Tecumseh, or Tecumthe, was found among the papers of Richard J. Conner, editor of the Pera Sentinel, who died in this city July 25, 1895. It contains information touching the question that has heretofore been widely disputed. The death of Mr. Conner prevented the fulfillment of the task, says the Indianapolis News: "My father's family was captured by the Indians about the year 1785. It may have been earlier or a year or two later. They were carried to Michigan, and were afterward ransomed by some Moravians, and the family settled about four or five miles below the present site of Mount Clemens, on the Clinton river, 23 miles north of the city of Detroit.

"When captured, the family lived at a place called Conner's Town, or Conner's Station, near what is now the east line of Coshocton county, O., adjoining Pennsylvania. The long journey through the wilderness then covering the distance from eastern Ohio to the Clinton river in Michigan was most painful and fatiguing.

"My father settled on White river in central Indiana in 1802, but he had made a trip to the Wabash in 1800. He remained at his trading post until the breaking out of the war with Great Britain in 1812, when he joined the forces under General Harrison at Fort Meigs, on the Maumee river, and with his brother John acted as guide and interpreter for General Harrison. He was sent by the general down the Wabash to the Miamis, Rattawatomes and Shawnees, to learn if possible their intentions and attitude in the approaching trouble with British forces. He knew Tecumthe and his brother, the Prophet, intimately. The Prophet often befriended him, and was a trustworthy friend. My father always spoke well of those Indians. He had many conversations with Tecumthe in regard to the attitude of the Indian tribes under his direction and his reasons for his adherence to the British cause, and his cooperation with that country in the war that followed. Tecumthe complained bitterly of the lack of faith on the part of the United States in regard to performance of treaty stipulations and contrasted it with the policy as carried out by Great Britain in its management of Indian affairs in Canada. He felt that there was no security for the Indian and clearly foresaw that the time was not distant when the Indian would possess little or no part of the domain he had inherited from his fathers.

"Tecumthe seemed to be fully aware that step by step the tribes would be pushed farther west or exterminated by the bitterness and hate of the white man. With a power warlike and aggressive as Great Britain to back and ally the Indian, he hoped to put off the final day and possibly save a remnant of his people.

"These, in part at least, were the reasons that actuated him in that wonderful crusade he was making, visiting the tribes covering the country from the lakes to Arkansas. My father said he had a persuasive tongue and a power to move his fellow savages rare indeed, and he never failed to rally the red man on to the war path. His nature was not naturally a savage one, and he often expressed abhorrence of unnecessary bloodshed.

"He declared that he would not tolerate cruelties or predatory warfare on peaceful, noncombatant settlements of white people, but he felt it his duty to rally the tribes and inflame them to a point of resistance and fair warfare against the government of the United States, which had for a hundred years persistently pushed the Indians from their homes and the places which that government had assigned to them with solemn pledges that they should always retain such as their future homes, and that it would protect them from the restless greed of white pioneers.

"My father was in command of 300 friendly Indians at the battle of the Thames, in Canada. His command was attached to Colonel Paul's regiment in that battle. His Indians did some good service and contributed to the defeat of the British and Indians.

"After the battle, late in the afternoon, he was summoned to the headquarters of Colonel R. M. Johnston, who stated to him that it was the rumor that the great chief Tecumthe was among the slain in battle and requested my father to take some of his friendly Indians and search the field and ascertain if it were indeed true. My father immediately took with him four or five Delaware and began the search, which was successful. When they found the body, some of the Indians were not sure that it was that of Tecumthe. There was a striking resemblance between the two brothers, Tecumthe and the Prophet, but one of them had a spot or defect on one of his eyes. One of the Delaware stooped down and pushed open the eyelid, and it was at once known that the dead man was indeed Tecumthe.

"During the political campaign of 1840 it was universally asserted by the Democrats that 'Colonel Johnson killed Tecumthe.' My father often declared that it could not be; that an old Indian warrior and a camp follower of the expedition in Canada, named Wheatley, was probably Tecumthe's slayer. He was a bitter Indian hater and a crank on that subject. He was not enrolled as a soldier, but went to the battle on his own account. He, too, was killed in the fight. Tecumthe was shot through the breast, and the wound plainly showed that he came to his death from the effects of a shot from a small bore rifle, such as the frontiersman usually carried.

Leapers of the Sea.

Many of the inhabitants of the sea are good jumpers and some have become famous. Among them should be mentioned the tarpon or silver king, a huge fish with scales that gleam like silver, which constitutes the famous game fish of Florida. The leaps of this beautiful creature are often astonishing. Several years ago a steamer was rushing down the St. Johns river. The captain was sitting on the fore deck, leaning against the pilothouse, when suddenly there rose in the air a beautiful shining fish four feet in length. It came on like an arrow and landed in the lap of the captain as neatly as though it had been placed there.

In Pacific waters the tuna, an ally of the horse mackerel, is noted for its leaps. Sometimes a school sweeps up the coast and the powerful fish, often weighing 800 pounds, are seen in the air in every direction. They are like an arrow, turn gracefully five or six feet in the air and come down, keeping the water for acres in a foam, and if not the greatest jumpers they are certainly the most graceful of the leapers of the sea.—Philadelphia Times.

A Question For the Scientists.

So far as known no writer on evolution has taken account of the steady and remarkable growth of hailstones. There was a time when the regulation size was about that of a small pea. From this it has increased through various stages to the size of a marble, a hickory nut and a hen's egg until now we hear of hailstones "larger than baseballs," and it is not even stated how much larger. Can it be that this continuous growth is an effort on the part of nature to respond to the increasing demand for new sensations, or what is it and where will it end?—Minneapolis Journal.

Shed at the Elevator.

The first experience of Nasrullah Khan, the Afghan prince, with a lift, or elevator, occurred in a hotel in Birmingham. He refused to enter the car, and finally, yielding to persuasion, sent one of the hotel porters up in order that he might see how the elevator worked. Even this didn't satisfy him, for when the porter came down he sent his page boy up. When the boy came down, he sent his entire suit up. Upon their return they reported everything all right, but the prince was not satisfied even then. Pausing a moment, he suddenly decided against the lift, and turning away mounted the stairs and walked up.—London World.

THE YOUNG WIFE.

They say her smile was sweetest when she lay in that entrancing power whose guise is sleep. And I remember now it was her way To smile in slumber deep!

THE COLONEL'S WIFE.

The rupture was all about a two acre field. Colonel Fairholme, J. P., wanted to fill out a dent in his ring fence, and Sir George Warburton stepped in and bought it over his head.

"And you can consider your engagement at an end, sir," the colonel wrathfully informed his nephew and heir. "No daughter of that sneak's shall be mistress of Broadwater."

"I've had similar instructions," said the girl. "They're very much incensed at present, but it won't last. Within six weeks somebody will be giving a reconciliation dinner party. I know the dear old things so well."

"I don't think it will be much use searching for them," she replied, with an unpleasant laugh. "I shall have a locksmith down from London the first thing in the morning. And the jeweler's man shall wait."

"The mysterious man, who was not from Bond street, went away, and on the third afternoon returned, but the strongroom door was not opened yet. The workman was awaiting instructions."

"I am so fond of the country," she told them, "and your English scenery is so picturesque and homelike. I promise myself a ramble every morning before breakfast."

"But one day Dick saw something which gave him the curious notion that, after all, it was not the beauties of nature that attracted her. He saw Mrs. Fairholme walking briskly down the road outside to meet the postman—there was only one delivery in that part of the world—who was about to leave the Broadwater letters at the lodge. She stopped the man, and he gave her an envelope, which she opened and read on the spot.

"Hum!" he reflected. "So Mrs. Fairholme is so anxious about her correspondence that she takes the trouble to go out and meet it at half past 7 a. m."

"I saw a letter for you with the Melbourne postmark on it this morning, sir," he said, with the license of an old tenant. "I hope the colonel's well?"

"Thanks," said Dick lightly. "Of course Mrs. Fairholme has forgotten to give it to me. I'll ask her about it."

"By the way," she said, "have you the key of the strongroom, Dick? I meant to ask you before and forgot. I should so much like to see the family jewels. Your uncle told me that he has some wonderful rubies which he brought from India. Bring them down, there's a dear boy!"

The "dear boy" obeyed without the best grace in the world, and Mrs. Fairholme admired the jewels and played with them as like a child with a new toy. But the rubies seemed especially to captivate her fancy. "They are magnificent!" she said, and her eyes were almost as bright with excitement as the gems themselves.

"Linklater of Bond street is one of the best, I believe. But if you will excuse me saying so, don't you think the matter will keep till the colonel's return? I'm not sure that he would care to have them altered."

"But, my dear sir," the jeweler said, "I know nothing of these jewels. No such telegram as you mention has been received by us."

"You tiresome fellow," she said playfully, "where have you been all day? The man from Linklater's has been here since 3 o'clock waiting for you to come home with the strongroom keys."

"There was a moment's pause, wherein a dozen wild ideas flashed through Dick's brain. It was evident that Mrs. Fairholme had merely used the pretext of wishing the jewels reset in order to get them out of the house."

"I don't think it will be much use searching for them," she replied, with an unpleasant laugh. "I shall have a locksmith down from London the first thing in the morning. And the jeweler's man shall wait."

"The message ran as follows: To Colonel Fairholme, on board the Australian mail steamer Oratava at Naples: Return overland. Imperative business. Please don't fail. DICK.

"If the colonel obeyed, he would be at home in three days—that is to say, four days before he would have arrived under ordinary circumstances—four days before he was expected by Mrs. Fairholme."

"The eloquent man is he who is no eloquent speaker, but is inwardly drunk with a certain belief.—Emerson.

"My wife!" exclaimed his uncle, perplexed to irritability. "You know very well I have no wife, sir! I met this lady and her husband in Melbourne, and they very kindly nursed me through my bout of influenza. I told you so in my letters."

"The desert of Sahara is not all a desert. In 1892 more than 9,000,000 of sheep wintered in the Algerian Sahara, paying a duty of 1,763,000 francs ($352,000). These sheep were worth 20 francs ($4) apiece, or in all 175,000,000 francs. The Sahara nourishes also 2,000,000 goats and 260,000 camels, paying a duty of 1,000,000 francs. In the oases palms, citrons and apricots abound; there are cultivated also onions, pimientos and various leguminous vegetables. The oases contain 1,500,000 date palms, on which the duty is 560,000 francs. The product of a date tree varies from 8 to 10 francs; these of the desert give about 15,000,000 a year.—New York Tribune.

Threadbare Genius was Rewarded.

A moldy looking wayfarer knocked at the back door of a humble dwelling in the suburbs the other morning and inquired of the woman who answered the knock:

"Do you want your piano tuned today, ma'am?" "Land sakes!" she replied. "We haven't any piano."

"Perhaps the frescoes in your parlor needs touching up a little," he suggested. "There ain't any frescoes in the parlor."

"The other day I was coming down Main street with a car jammed with people. When I got near the center of the business section, a well dressed man stepped out to get off the car. As he did so he said I hollered the names of the streets the plainest of any conductor he ever rode with. He invited me to come up and see him at his place of business. I went there the next day, and he gave me a box of 10 cent cigars."

"I knew that boy would make his mark if he once got into the city," exclaimed the old man.—Buffalo Courier.

To Clean Old Coins. Old coins may be cleaned by making a hot solution of soda or potash, dipping the coins in this, then for a moment in nitric acid, followed by a thorough rinsing in clear water running from a tap. Potassium cyanide is excellent for cleaning silver coins, but it should be plainly labeled and kept away from children, as it is strong poison.

A Beaconsfield Anecdote. One day, when the late Lord Beaconsfield was walking in his grounds at Hughenden Manor, he was accosted by a well known parishioner noted for his ready wit. It being winter time and the weather unusually severe, the villager after paying his respects to his lordship commenced to make an appeal for a little help.

"How often have I told you to be careful and prepare for a rainy day?" "Ah, that's right enough. So I did, my lord," said the ready witted villager, "but then who ever thought of seeing all this snow and hard frost?"

Beethoven's Harsh Voice. Beethoven had a voice so coarse and harsh that once, conducting a rehearsal, when he attempted to hum a passage for the cello to show how it should go, an involuntary roar of laughter came from the orchestra. He turned very red, but afterward himself laughed, and the incident passed pleasantly.

DEMOCRATS OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Nominate a Ticket and Indorse the National Administration.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Sept. 12.—The Democratic state convention adjourned last night after making these nominations: For state treasurer, ex-Congressman Benjamin F. Myers, of Harrisburg, by acclamation; for judges of the superior court—Harman Yerkes, of Bucks county; J. S. Moorehead, of Westmoreland; C. H. Noyes, of Warren; P. P. Smith, of Lackawanna; Oliver P. Bechtel, of Schuylkill, and Christopher Magee, of Allegheny. Apart from the judicial contest, the features of the convention were the adoption of a platform indorsing President Cleveland and the principles of the Democratic party, and arraigning the present state administration; and a speech by John J. Moloney, one of the Philadelphia delegates, attacking William M. Singler, who was the Democratic candidate for governor at the last election.

Coattail Buttons.

The buttons at the backs of our coats are a survival. Formerly there was a buttonhole in the forward corner of each skirt, and when a gentleman was walking or riding he turned his skirts and buttoned them to the bottom at his back. The buttons on the wrists of our coats are relics of the days when the sleeves were so long that they covered the tips of the fingers, and the cuffs were turned back and buttoned when the hands were employed.

DEFENDER'S RACE.

Regatta Committee Says the Valkyrie Was Wrong.

DUNRAVEN AND FRIENDS PIQUED,

And Say They Have Been Treated Badly, but the Britisher Has Stripped for the Next Brush—Extraordinary Interest in This Year's Cup Races—What Is Thought of the Decision—A Pretty Story That Is a Fairy Story.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The regatta committee of the New York Yacht club has sustained the protest made by the Defender in Tuesday's race. An official statement is made that before arriving at a decision the committee endeavored to bring about a mutual agreement between the respective yachts to resail the race, but each preferred that the committee should pass judgment on the protest. The letter sustaining the Defender's protest is addressed to C. Oliver Iselin, and is as follows:

"DEAR SIR:—We beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of yesterday, protesting Valkyrie. We have given the matter our careful consideration and believe that the foul occurred through the miscalculation of the distance between the two yachts at a critical moment. From our observation, sustained by that of others who were in a good position to see, we find that the Valkyrie, in contravention of section 2 of racing rule 16, bore down upon the Defender and fouled her by the swing of her main boom when luffing to straighten her course. We also consider the Defender allowed the Valkyrie sufficient room to windward to pass clear of the committee boat. Your protest is therefore sustained."

The sustaining of the protest gives the race to the Defender.

The racing rule the regatta committee referred to in its decision reads: "A yacht shall not bear away out of her course so as to hinder another in tacking to leeward."

Never Was so Much Excitement.

The yacht races for the America's cup of 1895 will remain in history as the most exciting that ever took place up to this date. Not that the capabilities of the boats have been so evenly matched as in some other races, such as the second race of the Puritan and Genesta series and the third between the Vigilant and Valkyrie II, but in the enthusiasm which has prevailed among the people from the very time that the match was made. At no time since Valkyrie arrived in this country has the excitement approached the degree to which it rose yesterday, excepting the times when the winner has crossed the finish line, or rounded a mark, or something like that, when she displayed her superiority actually in a race. The unfortunate collision and its attendant incidents have kept the public in a fever, so to speak, that has not been equalled.

Englishmen Feel Badly Treated.

Everybody was anxious to know what the regatta committee of the New York Yacht club would do about the Defender's protest and having learned that the decision was in the Defender's favor, they were further stirred up by a report that Lord Dunraven, considering that he had been unjustly treated, had determined to withdraw his boat and go home without another race. This was, however, a figment of the brain of somebody. But that the English party holds the sincere opinion that it has been badly treated there can be no doubt. Lord Dunraven's friends and advisers on the City of Bridgeport, the Valkyrie's tender, were all curt in manner and reserved in words.

Opinions on the Decision.

The fact that the races would go on as established by the remeasurement of the yachts, which was done last night by electric light, the reason being that the Britishers had determined to reduce the racing length of their boat by discharging lead ballast. As to the decision of the regatta committee, everybody had an opinion. Of course most persons upheld the committee from patriotic motives, if nothing else. There were a good many, however, who championed the Valkyrie and her cause. There were others who said that the committee ought to have given the race to the Valkyrie because the Defender could beat her anyhow, and a verdict favorable to the Englishman would have no other effect than to make necessary one more race.

Cases, However, Are Not Identical.

While thinking the whole matter over old timers recalled the action of Sir Richard Sutton, the owner of the Genesta, who raced against the Puritan in 1855. It was remembered that the Puritan accidentally but certainly fouled the Genesta at the start on the first day of the match. When the committee sent word to Sir Richard that the Puritan had been disqualified and that he could sail over the course alone and win the race, he replied that he did not want to win that way, he wanted a race and not a walkover.

REMEASUREMENT OF THE YACHTS.

Dunraven Strips His Boat of Everything Not Indispensable.

The Defender and the Valkyrie were dry-docked in the Erie basin for another scrub, and were floated again before dark. The Defender also placed one of her spare topmasts in position to take the place of the one that was sprung in the collision. A surprise came to the people who were waiting about the docks when John Hyslop, the official measurer of the New York Yacht club, entered the Boston dock yard, in which the dry docks are situated, with his black handbag in tow, and proceeded to measure the two boats again.

It was said that Lord Dunraven had asked for one more measurement in the hope that by dint of extraordinarily severe stripping the Valkyrie's water line could yet be reduced so that the 29 seconds time allowance she gives the Defender could be wiped out. It was certain that the English yacht was bare of everything that could be removed under the rules. But the same thing can be said of the Defender. On board the City of Bridgeport, the Valkyrie's tender, were Rear Commodore Arthur Glennie, Designer Watson and Sallmaker Ratsey. These gentlemen had no opinion to express on the regatta committee's decision. Captain Hank Huff, on the Defender, expressed his opinion that Iselin had no power to call Tuesday's race off, even if he felt so inclined. The captain thought that the nullifying of the event lay entirely with the America's cup committee.

In an interview Lord Dunraven expressed himself regarding the action of regatta committee of the New York Yacht club in the matter of the protest made by the Defender in Tuesday's race as follows: "I shall sail this race tomorrow as a sportsman because I have no occasion to do otherwise. I believe in the ability and honesty of the regatta committee of the New York Yacht club. I believe that no effort has been made to influence their decision. I believe them to be gentlemen and yachtsmen, and, while I do not care to say anything about the Valkyrie, I yet think that Mr. Watson has also fulfilled his engagement to build for me a boat. I do not expect that Mr. Iselin will offer a chance for a resail or anything of that sort.

"While it is very certain that the America's cup is lost by reason of the Valkyrie's racing showing, it is not so certain that at some time the cup may not be carried across the Atlantic. I believe that the Defender made a heroic effort on Tuesday. I do not think that the decision of the New York Yacht club regatta committee is based upon their calm consideration of the matter in hand. I do not agree with them."

Britisher Gives Up the Fight.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—The Yachting World says: "Two races have been lost, one actually and the second virtually. Whatever may be the verdict about the protest, we cannot possibly doubt that the Defender was a moral victor. We must console ourselves by admitting that Herreshoff's boat is exceptionally adapted to its purpose. We believe, however, that if Herreshoff should be obliged to design a boat to cross the Atlantic it is more than likely that Watson could design a shell capable of turning the tables."

That Story Was Too Pretty.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Regarding the story that Lord Dunraven told his crew that he would give each 30 shillings a week as long as they lived if the Valkyrie won the cup a reporter paid a visit to the City of Bridgeport, on which Lord Dunraven and his friends were lodged, and a gentleman who said that he was authorized to speak for Lord Dunraven was asked: "What truth is there in the story?" "It is rot, positive rot."

Situation in a Lutheran Synod.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 12.—At a meeting of the Pittsburg synod of the general council of the English Lutheran church a move was made to enforce the clause of the church constitution which provides that no minister of that church shall be a member of a secret society which is "un-Christian or infidel in its tendencies." The attempt to enforce was a failure because a majority of the ministers were themselves members of secret societies.

CASTORIA for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine? Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons? Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons? Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed? Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle? Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined? Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense? Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless? Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose? Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest? Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.
