SUEKEY TO SETTLE.

The Ex-Treasurer's Bondsmen Make an Over-ture to That Effect.

THE SUPERVISORS PASS A RESOLUTION

Which Authorizes a Committee to Bring Matters to a Close With the Defaulter. — A Slick Forger Comes to Grief.

Suekey Matter to be Settled.

On Tuesday John R. Miner and Attorney Norris came before the board of supervisors in favor of a resolution empowering Chairman Lighthall to appoint a committee of five with whom ex-Treasurer Paul G. Suekey and his attorneys might consult with the purpose of reaching some settlement in regard to the Suekey defalcation. This resolution was to empower such committee to settle with Suekey on such basis as this: Suekey has $3,000 which he desires to pay over, and this is the minimum sum that the committee shall be authorized to receive. For the difference between this sum and the $4,100 which Suekey is accused of embezzling, Suekey's bondsmen are still held. Mr. Miner, in his support of the resolution, said that Mr. Suekey had no idea of the value of money, being brought up in Germany on a large estate, that he returned from Europe and submitted to arrest in spite of the solicitation of his friends not to do so. The latter act was characteristic of the real honesty of the man. Another phase was also pressed home to the supervisors. If Mr. Suekey was allowed to use the $3,000, all the money he possessed, to help settle accounts with the county, this money would not be used by him in the defence he would be forced to make if the criminal charge now impending should be pushed by the prosecuting attorney at the board's solicitation. The resolution was discussed to some extent, but it was finally decided to adjourn action upon it until the following day.

The matter was again called up for discussion on Wednesday, but after considerable talk nothing definite was done except that the general impression was shown that no sum should be mentioned in the resolution. Yesterday the following resolution was introduced by Supervisor Davenport:

Resolved, That a committee of five members of the board be appointed by the chairman; that such committee be invested with power and authority in their discretion to settle, adjust and compromise the liability of Paul G. Suekey and his bondsmen to the county; that such adjustment be made for such sum as the committee may deem just, reasonable and fair. Provided, however, that this resolution or any act of such committee shall not be construed to release the said Paul G. Suekey or any of his bondsmen from their liability to the county until such sum so agreed upon as a compromise shall have been paid in full. Resolved, further, that the committee do advise with the prosecuting attorney relating to all matters of a criminal nature pertaining to the late administration of the office of county treasurer.

The resolution was adopted with the amendment that the committee be elected instead of appointed by the chair. The committee then elected consisted of Supervisors Case, Ball, Dancer, Hunter and Walter.

Arrested for Forgery.

On the fifteenth instant a young fellow giving the name of Johnson and claiming to hail from near Ann Arbor, turned up in Dexter. He went to Croarkin's clothing store and after having about $25 worth of clothing done up tendered a $50 check in payment. The bank was closed and Croarkin did not have change enough, whereupon the fellow went out on the street and prevailed upon Alonzo Alsaver to give him the money on it. Then "Johnson" disappeared, but not before it had become known that his name was not Johnson, but Herbert Welch, whose home was at Litchfield. The check was purported to be signed by Cash Valentine, and when Valentine disclaimed its origin the forgery was turned over to Deputy Sheriff Canfield. Canfield went to Litchfield last Tuesday and remained until the last of the week, when he returned home. Saturday night the sheriff received a dispatch from Marshal Barber at Litchfield that Welch was there and that he had placed him under arrest. The sheriff and his deputy proceeded to Litchfield Saturday night and brought Welch back Sunday morning. There was no village lockup at Litchfield, but the doughty marshal was not to be disturbed in his duty by any little obstacle like that, and proceeded to take Welch to his own home, put him in bed securely handcuffed, and was found at his bedside when the Ann Arbor officers arrived there about three o'clock in the morning. Welch's wife, to whom he had been but recently married, accompanied her husband back here and has been staying in the city since. Welch, although of a good family, is a scapegrace and has before attempted crookedness.

Welch was taken to Dexter on Wednesday and arraigned before Justice Stannard on a charge of forgery. He waived examination and was bound over to the circuit court. In default of $1,000 bail he was brought back to Ann Arbor and lodged in jail to await trial. The case has created great interest at Dexter, inasmuch as Welch is fairly well known in the locality and Valentine is a relative of his.

No "Ikey" For the Judge.

"When I was a boy," went on the late Judge Joslyn formerly of the Monroe and Washtenaw Circuit—when "I was a little boy" said the judge to the young man he was about to admit to practice, according to the Chicago Record, "my name was Isaac—Isaac Chauncey Joslyn. Now, I didn't like that name of Isaac, and the boys kept calling me 'Ikey,' which made it worse. So when my parents moved away from the little town where I was born, and it came time for me to go to the new school, I made up my mind not to say a word about my first name and to be 'Chauncey Joslyn from that day on."

"The first day in the new school the teacher told me to stand up, and the following conversation took place between us:

"What is your name, little boy?" he said.

"Chanucey, sir," said I.

"What is your other name, little boy?"

"Here my resolution came to my support and I answered boldly, 'I haven't any other name, sir.'"

"Oh, yes, you have," he answered. "I couldn't understand how he knew, but I made up my mind that the indignity of 'Ikey' was too much to be borne, so I entered my denial anew."

"With that the good teacher whipped me and sent me to my seat to think it over, and at intervals all through the morning he made me stand up, asked me what my other name was, and when I told him I had no other name whipped me some more."

"The matter had grown decidedly tedious to me long before the time came for the school to let out," the judge went on. "When the boys had all been sent home except me, and I had stuck to my story through one more sound trouncing—and that teacher knew how to whip so that it couldn't be forgotten—I had just about made up my mind to succumb."

"On a sudden the teacher blurted out: 'What's your father's name, little boy?'"

"Mr. Joslyn," said I.

"Well, then, your name's Joslyn, too, isn't it?" he inquired.

"Yes, sir," said I, a great light breaking in upon me.

"You see," the judge concluded, as he attached his bold signature to the young man's license to practice, "I was so busy taking care of one end of my name that I had forgotten all about the other."

For the Benefit of the Woman's Gym.

There will be around in a few days calling on the business men, a committee composed of the following young ladies: Misses Edith Noble, Ella Wagner, G. E. Mogford, Ann Richards and Zena Thompson. They will circulate a subscription paper headed about as follows: "Two regents of the University have pledged the sum of $35,000 for a Woman's Building (gymnasium and league rooms) on condition that the women of the state raise $15,000 more to complete the necessary fund of $50,000. This is the twenty-fifth year since women were admitted to the University; now is the first time that any appeal has been made to meet their special needs. Recognizing that the interests of the University are the interests of every citizen, we, the undersigned, business men and women of Ann Arbor, agree to pay the sums set opposite our names to assist in securing this building."

This is an object that appeals to the pride of every citizen, and the personal interest of every business man. The ladies of the University say frankly that they patronize the merchants who help in their work. An energetic committee of Detroit alumni is pushing the matter in that city, and it would be a pity if Ann Arbor people were less alive to the importance of the affair. Jacobs & Allmand have headed the list with $50 cash down.

How many others will do as much?

Four Horses Cremated.

Wallace's livery barn, adjoining the M. E. church sheds, on East Washington street, was discovered to be on fire at an early hour Wednesday morning. By the time the department arrived the barn was completely wrapped in flames, and, and hard work and the fact that there was not a heavy wind blowing were the only things that kept the city from having a very serious conflagration. The fire spread from the livery barn to the M. E. church sheds and C. A. Maynard's barn, and these, together with the livery barn, were entirely wiped out. Four horses in the livery barn were cremated and Alderman Maynard barely had time to get his horses out. The Wallace barn was owned by Henry Waldron, and with contents was insured for $500, which covers the loss. The Maynard barn was the property of Judge Cheever and was insured for $150 which will not quite cover the loss. Maynard carried $800 on the contents of the barn.

The church sheds were owned by individuals. They have been an eyesore to the locality for a long time, and residents in the neighborhood are not sorry that they have burned.

HALLOWE'EN PRANKS.

The Students Were Out in Full Force Last Night.

ONE OF THEIR NUMBER WAS ARRESTED.

The Police Charged Upon Them Several Times.—One Town Boy Hurt.—Officers' Bills Deeply Cut.

Hallowe'en Duly Celebrated.

The college students succeeded in having their usual time last night in honor of All Hallowe'en. The boys began to get boisterous about ten o'clock, when they built a fire on the campus of boxes and leaves. Their number of 250 grew to 700 by an hour, and they began to tear up walks and fences on East University avenue. They also endeavored to secure some boxes from in rear of Schleede's book store, when Marshal Peterson and his deputies arrested a student. He was left in charge of a policeman while the others went for reinforcements. The students charged and secured the prisoner. On the return of the marshal there was another charge by him and his deputies and this time a '98 law fell into their clutches. He was handcuffed and taken to jail, with a mob of students at the officers' heels. Peterson walking backwards and keeping his gun well in view. This occurred about 12:30 o'clock. It was claimed that the student arrested was severely handled by the police, but at the jail this morning he had no injuries except that his wrists were swollen from being handcuffed. The arrested man claims that he had just come out to the campus, but ran with the crowd when they were charged upon. He rushed around a corner of the "gym" and into the arms of a "cop."

Edward Otley, a town boy, had a bad cut over the eye, being struck about 10:30 o'clock by a picket in the hands of a student, who, in his excitement, mistook him for one of the police.

At the post office there was a rush last night and the windows were all closed and most of the students had to disperse without their mail.

Cut Down the Bills.

The supervisors have had their knives open this week and have been cutting the sheriff and deputy sheriffs' bills right merrily. The result has been, of course, that Washtenaw has a number of slenchs who feel that they have been sorely dealt with and the county of Washtenaw has been saved a neat sum. The sessions this week have been taken up principally with discussions upon these and other bills. To make a long story short here are the bills presented by Sheriff Judson and five of his deputies for nine months and the amounts they were allowed at: Sheriff $755.43, allowed at 700.96; Deputy Sheriff Canfield, $532.95, allowed at $457.25; Deputy Zenas Sweet, $69.53, reduced to $54.28; Deputy Jacob Staffan, from $110.22 to $82.46; Deputy Jay Wood from $226.34 to $187.04; Deputy Archie Gauntlett, from $95.71 to $69.54. There are others in the list, one other deputy's account being reduced from $198.25 to $151.70, but the rest, for the most part, are for smaller amounts.

There was a general reduction in the sheriff's bill from $5 per day for "myself and rig" to $4. This accounted for the reduction in his bill. Sheriff Judson's bill was peculiar in the fact that his immediate predecessors at least put in their bills for their work and actual expenses, while he made his charge for himself and rig at the sum of $5 per day. This was a new system of presenting the sheriff's bill and the reduction was made to $3 in each one of these charges. The deputy sheriffs' bills were made out at $3 per day for services and these were all reduced to $2. Where a prisoner was brought into court and pleaded guilty the supervisors struck out the 50 cent charges made by the deputies, claiming that there was no actual service performed by them.

And the Earth Trembled.

There seems to be no doubt in the minds of several good and reputable citizens in the city that Ann Arbor was visited by a slight earthquake shock about 5:30 o'clock yesterday morning. Persons sleeping in up stair rooms seemed to feel the shock more perceptibly than those on lower floors. A lady awake at the time says that the quake lasted fully a minute and was a succession of waves, rocking the room perceptibly with each undulation. The effect was like that of seasickness. Other persons describe the sensation as about the same. Many did not awaken entirely, but quite a few realized half consciously that there was something going on out of the ordinary. The shock is reported as being felt at Milwaukee, Detroit, Chicago and other cities. Pinckney called up central office yesterday morning to say that they had been in on the ground floor during the shock, so to speak, and were very proud of the fact. The Argus thought of getting a list of reputable citizens to swear to the earth's tremble but every person evidently desired to be on the list, and there was not room this week for all the names in the city directory.

Ypsilanti city, second district—Real, $548,400; personal, $77,450; total, $625,850. Equalization, $535,000.
The equalized valuation of the county remains as last year, $25,000,000. Ann Arbor gets an additional $100,000 over last year's equalized valuation which now makes it $5,355,000. Ypsilanti's first district was also raised $50,000, which makes a transfer of $150,000 from the townships to the city.
The $150,000 was taken off the following townships, every township but two getting a slice, the two towns not being reduced being Ann Arbor and Sylvan: Augusta, $5,000; Bridgewater, $8,000; Dexter, $15,000; Freedom, $15,000; Lima, $10,000; Lodi, $5,000; Lyndon, $5,000; Manchester, $10,000; Northfield, $7,000; Pittsfield, $7,000; Salem, $7,000; Saline, $8,000; Scioto, $10,000; Sharon, $5,000; Superior, $8,000; Webster, $8,000; York, $10,000; Ypsilanti town, $7,000.
To Abandon St. Louis.
The Ann Arbor Railroad company has been grading for the past few weeks, preparatory to the change of their road from St. Louis, so as to abandon that place and run direct from Ithaca to Alma. St. Louis decided to stop the change, and recently filed a bill in the Gratiot county circuit court restraining the Ann Arbor company from changing its route. Judge Daboll entered an order to show cause why it should not be done. The hearing was Tuesday before Judge Eldredge, in the absence of Judge Daboll. The defendants, in their answer, admitted that they intended to abandon St. Louis altogether, on account of bad curves and grades. The complainants were represented by E.A. Cooley, of Bay City, and the defendants by A. Smith, of Toledo. Judge Eldredge reserved his decision for a week.
Horse Thief Caught.
Wm. Haskins, the liveryman, rented a horse and buggy Wednesday morning, the man renting it giving it out that he desired to drive to Dexter. Instead he went the other way and yesterday officers found that he had sold the rig at Wayne. Deputy Sheriff Woods succeeded in arresting the fellow and returned with his prisoner last night. The horse thief gave his name as Frank Haynes and his home as Dearborn.

When Saline has a fire there is a 60 foot ladder with which the firemen can shin up to the highest building in town. Chicken thieves are getting in their nefarious work among the farmers here-away, a number of them reporting losses of feathered stock during the past two weeks. It would seem that some action might be taken by the farmers to head off and capture these scoundrels. The raising of a flock of chickens or turkeys represents no small amount of work to the busy farmer's wife and to be robbed of them when about ready for market is an outrage which should be stopped—even if it takes a bull dog and shot gun to do it.—Saline Observer.

There is a school column in the Chelsea Standard and all the jokes of the children are given the light of print. Whenever pater familias strikes an exceedingly funny saying he leans back in his chair and says, "I swun, William takes right after his pa, don't he? I know that joke is his'n; it's the best 'un in th' colum."

Your Uncle Hazen must be getting in his heady work with his book on "What I know about potatoes and their habitat" pretty well throughout the county for hardly a county exchange comes to the Argus table but has Pingree's valuable contribution to American literature noticed. Its enterprising publisher sends the papers a copy and they give the pamphlet advertising which at space rates would amount to about four times the value of the book.

A few days ago a farmer showed a pair of boots to one of our merchants with the remark, "I bought those of you 11 years ago, and b'gosh I guess I'll have to get 'em tapped."—Manchester Enterprise.

Twenty-two young ladies of the Roman Catholic church of this village joined the sodality of the blessed virgin last Sunday evening. After the ceremony of installing each as a member, Rev. Ignatius Wilens, of Cincinnati, gave an interesting discourse upon the subject of sodalities. A number of members of the Clinton society were present.—Manchester Enterprise.

The Ann Arbor Argus came out last week with a great big article headed "Fell from grace," and claimed it all happened in Pinckney, but in reality it was a Plymouth affair. We are able to stand a whole lot but don't lie to have other town's wickedness shouldered off on us in that kind of style.—Pinckney Dispatch. We were very certain Pinckney had no such bad men as the article described. They are all real nice folks over there.

Henry Denges, aged 36 years, of Dexter, led to the altar last Saturday evening Mrs. Mary J. Bell, of Pinckney, aged 60 years. The groom has been married once before and this is the bride's fourth voyage upon matrimonial seas.

In some of the adjoining towns clubs are being organized for the promotion of mind, morals, music and marriage. A bird's eye view of Dexter discloses "a long felt want" for such a club.—Dexter Leader.

LOCAL TEXAS SIFTINGS.

The Monroe Democrat Man Sees Things Asks, as Usual.

Plans for the new woman's gymnasium—or woman's new gymnasium—at Ann Arbor contemplate a building to cost $50,000. It is hoped the taxpayers will not kick, but the women are expected to. That is what the gym is for.

Typhoid fever and the Salvation Army have each secured a foothold in Ann Arbor. The prevalence of the one rendered the other a necessity and by the eternal fitness of things the Army's headquarters are in the city's officers' building.

The aggregate amount of the Michigan state tax is $3,013,919.92, and the county's share is $82,681.75.—Ann Arbor Argus. To pay this tax is going to make those democratic farmers of Washtenaw, who voted the republican ticket last fall, hump and gather like a burnt boot.

"Is the principle of a graduated property tax one which should be adopted by the state," has been chosen as the subject of an inter-university law contest at Ann Arbor. It is probable that the local team will win, having picked up a vast fund of economical knowledge from the committee on sewers.

A Washtenaw county fair school prize was won by an Ypsilanti young lady. It was a copy of Shakespeare and a year's subscription to the Argus. She thus gets her democracy straight grained; and as to Shakespeare, his writings are among the most profound of the works of the twelve apostles.

The editor of the Ypsilanti Commercial visited Battle Creek last week and is more than ever sure of the correctness of Advent theology. He hasn't gone up yet, but the treasure he took in on a double column "next to reading matter" "ad" were laid up in heaven the same night. If otherwise, then his pocket book was stolen. Fortunately he had his "tie pass" with him.

The Milan council has passed an ordinance prohibiting the throwing of apple cores into the street. Thus saith the Milan Leader. The council will also, we learn, pass an ordinance, as soon as it can get around to it, prohibiting musk rats from building houses in the corporation, and ducks and geese from flying over it.

The largest painting in the Lewis art collection is that of the "Surrender of Lee," which is valued at $20,000. It cost the United States three billions of dollars, more than half a million of lives and millions of heart aches to present that $20,000 picture to the Michigan University. It is the most expensive national object lesson of the modern time in any country.

An evangelist recently spoke in Ypsilanti on "The Free Gift of Grace." The evangelist is undoubtedly right. There should be no tariff on it, "except for revenue only." But had ex-Congressman Allen not been down in Ohio stumping he might have been expected to have risen in his pew and rebuked the evangelist or his free trade views, as "a democratic heresy."

Feller named Woodward, commonly called "Hu," lived at Ann Arbor, but removed to Leadville, and with others developed the recently discovered "Big Four" gold mine and is now mentioned by the Washtenaw papers as "Mr. H. Woodward." Money does make a difference. It was only when the condition of our bank account leaked out that we began to move in the same set with the Prince of Wales.

Ann Arbor papers point the finger of scorn at Ypsilanti, and say "S-h-h-h! S-h-h-h!" because, as they allege, there are women there who are like the daughters of the scriptural horse-leech, while not even a fly speck flecks the moral escutcheon of Ann Arbor. The Sentinel retorts that the county officers have just "pulled" an institute there of a kind to discredit this rosewater report. Brethren, stop! If these accusations go on, it may yet come out that in each of the towns there is a female or two who is no gentleman.

One of our county officials has the true poetic gift, and writes verses that are of real merit, but he is so modest that he will not allow a line of it to go into print.—Ann Arbor Courier. One of the virtues of the county official is his ability to conceal his vice. Nail his worthy name aloft like a sheep skin on the gable end of a barn! Sound the hew-gag! Here is a poet willing to "blush unseen." O, that the bard of Willis had been composed to this spirit, before he composed the "Ode to the Mullen Stalk" and was hooked by a bull before he got out of the pasture!

The supervisors visited the county house yesterday and found everything in excellent order.—Ann Arbor Argus. Certainly; why not? The supervisors gave notice of their intended visit and of course the whole tumble down old shell was scrubbed from top to bottom, the floors sanded and the fly endorsements erased from the walls with soap suds. The paupers had clean faces, good food, and beds without bugs as far as discovered, and the board a bounteous dinner. The report could not be otherwise than favorable. There is nothing wrong in the management of the Washtenaw county house, as far as is known to the Democrat, but after all, this heralded visit to the poor house—common in all countries—is a ghastly "fake" and the taxpayers foot the bill. If supervisors would see a poor house in every day clothes, food and management, let them spring a surprise on it. The dress parade of an expected visit discloses just nothing at all.

At the age of 15 he came to Michigan, attended school at Ypsilanti and Kalamazoo and graduated at the State Normal. In 1849 Mr. Cowan bought the Stockwell place in Manchester, consisting of a store and a dwelling house. A few years later a fire burned him out. Not discouraged, he went to farming, then in rapid succession carriage making, meat marketing, running a livery stable, making bricks, auctioneering, building and contracting. By all these he assisted to rebuild Manchester after the great fire of 1853. In 1851 he married Miss Dorcas M. Thompson. He was liberal not only in public enterprises but also toward the churches. A White Squall.

"A white squall—did I ever see one? I should say I had," said an old sailor in the barge office. "We were between here and the West Indies, and it was as fair a day as you ever put eyes on. I was at the wheel, and we were bowling along under a pretty sailing breeze. There wasn't a cloud to be seen, unless a little white vapor far off could be called a cloud. All of a sudden the captain came up out of his cabin.

"Get all the light sails off her as quick as you can," he shouted to the mate. "Clew up the royals and to gallant sails and bear a hand lively, boys."

"What's the matter with the old man now?" said the sailors as they looked around the horizon and saw nothing but sunshine and the clear sky.

"Nevertheless all hands turned to getting in the light sails. The captain took the wheel and sent me to assist. Of course we all thought it was a piece of foolishness, but we worked with a will because the captain told us to.

"Well, we had no sooner got those sails in than it struck. Right out of the clear sky came an awful gale. It tore our great mainsail and other sails to ribbons quicker than a flash. It came 'butt end to,' as the sailors say.

"How did the captain know it was coming? Why, he was in his cabin and happened to see his glass go down suddenly. That meant something, and he hustled on deck. A good captain watches his barometer as a cat watches a mouse."

HAS COUNSEL AGAIN.

Holmes Recalls the Lawyers He Had Dismissed.

THIRD DAY OF THE GREAT TRIAL.

"What Will the Next Sensation Be?" Is the Question Passing from Lip to Lip—It Is Evident That While Holmes Has Secured Counsel Again He Is Trying the Case Himself—Representative of the Swindled Insurance Company on the Stand.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 31.—There was but one question passing from lip to lip when the Holmes trial was resumed, "What will the next sensation be?" Whether or not Holmes is guilty of all or any of the crimes hanging over his head, there is no doubt that the man is a genius—an abnormal genius. He has recalled the lawyers whom he dismissed, but it is apparent that even now their presence is superfluous. It is Holmes who is trying the case. Scarcely a question is put to a witness without being first framed or suggested by him to his counsel, and should they take the liberty to ask anything without first consulting him, and the query does not strike him as a felicitous one, he does not hesitate to manifest his displeasure by an irritable tapping with his pencil on the railing of the dock.

Day's Proceedings Begin.

Sharp at 10 o'clock Holmes, with his quick stride, came swinging along the steel barred cage leading from the call room and under the escort of a big officer, took his seat in the dock. A moment later the jury were ushered in from their cell room, for so long as the case lasts, the twelve "good men and true," are under lock and key in the big jury room of the city hall. Messrs. Shoemaker and Rotan, who achieved notoriety on Monday by withdrawing from the case under Holmes' orders in spite of Judge Arnold's threats, and who came back to their client, held whispered consultations with him before the taking of the testimony was resumed. The first witness was Susan Hurley, who keeps a boarding house at 1004 Race street. She said Pitzel boarded at her house for a week in August, 1894.

Mrs. Alice Pierce of 1304 Callowhill street identified Pitzel's picture as that of the man who lived at 1816. She had known him through his buying cigars at her store. On cross-examination she said Pitzel was not a man of cheerful disposition. O. LaForrest Perry, assistant to the president of the Fidelity Mutual Life association, was then called. This is the company that was swindled out of the $10,000 for which Pitzel's life was insured, and it was Perry who began the investigation into the gigantic conspiracy. He first identified his policy issued, in which Carrie E. Pitzel, the widow, is the beneficiary. It is dated Nov. 9, 1893.

Next he identified a receipt for $9,715.85, the amount of the policy, less expenses paid to and receipted for by Jephtha D. Howe, the St. Louis attorney, who represented Mrs. Pitzel. This was dated Sept. 24, 1894.

Met as Strangers.

Perry was present when Howe received the money. When Holmes came to this city at the request of the company to identify the body, Howe and Alice Pitzel were in the office. Holmes came in afterwards and was introduced to them. He and Howe met as strangers, but said he had met Alice before and she remembered him. After the payment of the money the matter was closed, until a letter was received by President Fouse of the insurance company from Superintendent of Police Harrigan of St. Louis. This contained the declaration of Hedspeith, the train robber, that while in jail in St. Louis he had overheard Holmes and Pitzel talking of forming a conspiracy to defraud an insurance company out of $10,000 by the substitution of a corpse for Pitzel. On the information thus obtained a warrant was sworn out for Holmes on the charge of conspiracy, and upon this he was arrested in Boston.

Identified Holmes.

The witness went to that city and identified Holmes. The latter had made a verbal statement to the witness in the presence of Deputy Superintendent Hanscom, Chief of Police Watts and John Cornish, a private detective in Chief Watts' office. "I asked him where Mrs. Pitzel was," said Perry, "and he replied that he did not care to tell. Then I asked him where Pitzel was and he said he was in South America or on his way there and the boy, Howard, with him. Alice and Nellie, he said, were in London with Minnie Williams. He said he had given Howard to his father in Detroit and had sent Nellie and Alice from Toronto on a train on which he rode a short distance to meet Minnie Williams, either at Buffalo or Niagara Falls—I forget which."

After an unimportant cross-examination Perry was temporarily withdrawn from the stand.

STATE TAXES.

The Ypsilantian is very much exercised over the big increase in state taxes, as in fact are the other republican papers of the state, and in its last week's issue uses a good many words to explain away the big increase. Unfortunately for the republican papers, the figures cannot be explained away. The state tax for this year is $3,013,919.52. They do not deny that. The state tax for both the democratic years of the Winans administration was $2,863,060.22. The republican papers do not, because they cannot, deny that. The fact, then, is that the tax in this one republican year is considerably larger than it was in the two democratic years put together. That fact they do not deny. But to save themselves they resort to pretty ingenious juggling with figures to prove that this immense increase in taxes, which, bear in mind, is over a million dollars more than was ever raised in this state before in any one year, is not due to republican extravagance. But, really, gentlemen, are you not making matters worse? Let us examine the Ypsilantian's claims. Figures are quoted from the Lansing Republican to show that the big tax this year includes $760,509.39 appropriated for deficiencies unprovided for by the legislature of 1893, a republican legislature by the way. It is broadly hinted, though not stated in so many words, that these big deficiencies of the republican legislature of '93 were due in some way to the democratic administration of '91 and '92. While this is clearly impossible, for the sake of argument only we may accept this view of it and see how the figures will then stand. If there is any place where the full figures for democratic deficiencies may be found, it will at once be granted that it will be in articles prepared to show it under the direction of the republican state committee, and we wish to take all the figures used in this article from republican sources. In the Ann Arbor Courier of October 10, 1894, appears a plate article sent to all the republican press, replying to the charges made by the democrats, that the taxes had been greatly raised during the first administration of Rich. In this article the deficiencies for the year 1891 are placed at $130,702.57 and for 1892 at $76,008.57, or a total for the two democratic years of $206,711.14, and this amount is charged to the democratic administration and deducted from the two years' taxes levied by the legislature of '93. Now come the republican press and claim that the deficiencies to be provided for this year are $760,509.39. Is it not plain, then, that if we can believe our republican brethren, they have convicted the republican legislature of '93 of incurring a deficiency of $760,509.39, while paying up a deficiency of $206,711.14. In other words, besides greatly raising the state taxes of this state over the democratic state taxes, they ran the state $553,798.25 in debt. Without taking into account the deficiencies provided for by the democratic legislature, let us see how the different administrations stand according to the way the republicans juggle the figures. The taxes for the democratic years of 1891 and 1892 amounted to $2,863,060.22; add to this the $206,711.14, which the republicans claimed were the democratic deficiencies, and we have $3,069,771.36. The taxes for the republican years of 1893 and 1894 were $3,620,350.58. Add to this the $760,509.39, which the republicans now claim were the deficiencies of these years, and we have $4,380,859.97. Now deducting $206,711.14 the deficiencies of the democratic years, and there remains $4,174,148.83, according to the republicans themselves, of taxes chargeable to the republican legislature of 1893 and the first Rich administration. It will be seen that this is over $1,100,000 more than the amount which they charge up to the democratic administration and the democratic legislature of 1891. The showing for the second Rich administration will be even worse.

But not only have the republicans greatly raised the tax but they have diminished the cash in the treasury, the great increase in taxes not sufficient to pay their greatly increasing expenditures. The state fiscal year ends June 30, and the report of the state treasurer as given in the Michigan Manual, or red book, shows the cash in the treasury at different periods to have been: June 30, 1890 (Luce), $1,151,259; June 30, 1891 (Winans), $1,224,644; June 30, 1892 (Winans), $1,241,971; June 30, 1893 (Rich), $547,511; June 30, 1894 (Rich), $521,825; June 30, 1895 (Rich), $290,417.

It will be seen that there is no way in which our republican friends can explain away the big increase in taxes except upon the theory that they have greatly increased the state expenditure. And the taxpayers are justified in demanding to know why the taxes were raised over a million dollars this year.

Preliminary tests of the machines were made on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday for the purpose of barring out vehicles found to be impractical. There are nearly fifty entries for this most interesting race. Nearly all of these vehicles are of American origin and are the result of but little more than three months of application to the subject by the inventive genius of America. The awarding of prizes will not be based upon speed alone, but will include the qualities of general adaptability and ease of control, economy of operation, safety and excellence of design.

MISPLACED CHARITY.

The Adrian Times Tells a Little Story About Prof. Huber.

Sometimes charity is placed on the wrong end of the teter board. For instance, take the case of Professor Huber, a professor in the University with a heart as open as a tramp's coat, and a deal warmer. He has a friend living near the city, named Parker, for whom a man and his wife have worked for several years. Of course the man was well known to the professor, who had met him occasionally at Parker's, or when he came there of an errand. One morning he was in Huber's house during meal time, and Mrs. Huber observed that he was much cast down, and was weeping, as though a disaster had befallen him. She spoke to the professor about it, and he passed out to the kitchen and inquired the cause of his trouble. Between sobs the poor fellow managed to say: "I'm a poor man—oh-ab-ah and I've now two children—sir-reb-ub-ah-h-h, and now I've e-huh-l got two more, sir, two more twins, last night two ah-ref ub, and I don't see how I can gid-de-long-es-es-se-s-ub-ah, ed-kews me, sir, but I've notin' to buy milk or medicine, and I wanted to ask you uh-uh-ul-dse-e-e sir if you could let me have ten dollars, till I can pay it back. Of course this streak of misfortune was something that Huber didn't quite understand, for had it happened in his house he would have given $2,000 in cash, and added a small premium. The man's poverty touched him, and promptly he gave him the cash, and the good wife hurried about and sent down some nice goodies for the mother and little ones and took a deep interest in the event. They even made the man feel as though it was a bonanza, and not a burden that had come to him. He dried his tears, and thankfully took the little gifts for the little ones and went his way. Whenever he came to town the professor and his estimable wife kept inquiring about the little twins, and were delighted to know that they were progressing nicely. For a year they had remembered the little ones, and not long since while Mrs. Huber was out for a drive she called at the house and after greeting Mrs. Parker began an inquiry for those "sweet little babies" and asked to see the twins. Imagine her chagrin when it was learned that they were the creation of the man's imagination, and the man's wife began to understand where so many "baby things" came from. Prof. Huber has been in Germany this summer, and the episode leaked out in some way, and he is now going to study "systematic beneficence."

Andrew Miller, one of our most esteemed farmer citizens, who has been at the asylum a couple of months, left the asylum for a walk the afternoon of the twenty-third instant, and has not been heard from since. He is described as age 45, weight 150 pounds, height five feet eight inches, black mustache, black hair cut short (curly when long), wore a white shirt, dark suit, light brown overcoat, soft hat same color, clothing all marked plainly "A. Miller." It is probable that he is seeking work on a farm. His manner is unusually pleasant. A reward of $25 will be paid for information which leads to finding him, dead or alive. ## ABSOLUTELY PURE

Complaining of Hard Times.

Britton, the Detroit News correspondent, has been riding about Washtenaw the past week and otherwise than contracting a "hard cold in the head" from gazing upon nature's broad domains from some farmer's buggy, he reports having had a very pleasant week. His report is not tinted in rainbow colors of brightness and prosperity. He tells his readers that Washtenaw farmers, right in the midst of the garden of the state, are hard up, so hard up that they cannot afford to use any tallow on their boots this winter, too poor to assume the national debt, too poverty stricken to indulge in a dress suit and shine in society. The Argus prints two interviews with well known Washtenaw farmers. There are others, but these are characteristic of them all.

"One of the great agricultural counties of this state is Washtenaw county. Two other generations of its farmers have enjoyed the advantages of close proximity to two leading state educational institutions, so that here, if anywhere, might be expected to be found farmers of intelligent direction and method. The county's nearness to Detroit and its own centers of considerable population furnish a convenient market for a great variety of products outside of the staple grains and vegetables. Most important of all, the land is excellent. In fact, it is said that there is not in the whole country a similar area of land better adapted to general purpose farming than that occupied by the many beautiful farms between Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti. The west end of the county, up to the road on the Wayne county line, was first explored by a with a pair of gray roadsters.

Out on the so-called West Monroe road, which angles through the county to south and east in a manner that shows little regard for the section lines, lives James L. Lowden, the ex-legislator, lives five miles from Ypsilanti. He was found at home in a comfortable farm house near which stood a whirling windmill and surrounding which were big barns and stacks. Mr. Lowden is an unusually well informed man, and during the 1891 session of the legislature served in the important position of chairman of the ways and means committee.

"I am not," said Mr. Lowden, "a calamity howler. Still—" Mr. Lowden in mind took a brief retrospect of the labors and profits and experiences in the farming line for a considerable period in the past.

"Still," he continued, "where things have been going on in a certain direction for a long space of time, where the tendency has been from bad to worse and each year seems to show even less sign of improvement than its predecessor, there comes a time when a condition of very great discouragement may result. This is the situation in which most of the farmers of this county find themselves—those, at least, who are dependent on farming for their income. For eight years—yes, or ten years—there has absolutely been almost no profit in farming. When the farmers at the expiration of half of this 10 year period were discouraged, how can they be expected to feel now?"

"Does this year show no improvement at all?"

"Improvement! This is the worst year of the whole period of depression. For those who have mortgaged farms, there is almost no hope. You can imagine just about how hopeful those feel who have farms entirely clear of debt, when they not only do not get a single cent of interest on their investment in farm lands, but receive only the smallest of wages for all their hard work. I notice that farmers generally are coming to dress more poorly and live more poorly than formerly. They are coming to adopt more the style of living of their fathers in the old days when the country as a whole was poor, and before there were the benefits of improved transportation and near markets."

Being asked to give details illustrating the unprofitableness of farming, Mr. Lowden said that the total he will receive for all stuff of every description, raised on his farm this year, would be less than $1,000.

"Remember," he said, "that is the gross. Now, if you want to figure what the net will be, just bear in mind that in the aggregate of less than $1,000 are included considerable sums which I have already actually paid—repairs on machinery, cost of help, threshing, etc."

Mr. Lowden, in addition to being a careful and conservative man, has the air of being also a good business man. In almost any other business he ought to command a good deal more than $1,000 a year for his services alone. This year, after deducting his actual outlay, he receives only a few hundred dollars to represent the value of his services for a whole year, and the interest on a farm which ought, even in a time of depression, to be worth at least $12,000 or $13,000. Mr. Lowden discussed the causes of the excessively hard times for farmers. A cause which had emphasized itself on farmers in direct form was the droughts which have prevailed for some years and which had been more severe during the past than any other season. This cause, which might be due to cutting off the trees or something else, had reached a point where serious alarm was occasioned and the question raised whether it would be possible to do any thing to relieve them, or whether the farmers were to continue to see the greater part of their work go for naught in a permanently rainless region.

"How are sheep?" Mr. Lowden was asked, the policy of the government relative to this animal being a question more discussed by farmers than any other question just now.

"Of the less than $1,000 which I shall receive this year from the sale of all products of my farm, $110 will be represented by the sale at $2 each of the lambs from my flock of 50 sheep. That will be the most easily earned money I get from my farm this year. The sale of the wool practically defraying the cost of keeping the flock and the money from the lambs being chiefly profit."

Perhaps of all those seen, there was no one who seemed better equipped for giving intelligent testimony on the subject under investigation than a man whose place was visited and whose hospitality was shared at dinner in the famous farming region between Washtenaw county's two chief towns. This is H. D. Platt, a writer on agricultural topics, a leader in the grange organization and Governor Luce's appointee for four years as state oil inspector. His residence is almost exactly midway between Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti and a lawn adorned with big boulders and shrubbery slopes down to the motor tracks connecting the two towns. Mr. Platt disagreed most decidedly with Mr. Lowden as to the profitability of raising sheep under free wool prices. From a flock about as large as the Lowden flock he had sold only 36 lambs at $2 each, and the entire sum derived from the wool was only $9. Even the mother sheep were getting discouraged. The entire gross income from the flock would not, Mr. Platt declared, pay for the hay alone they had eaten during the winter, a mow of hay, 24 by 44 feet and 10 feet high having been consumed. Washtenaw has in the past been a great wool county, the Shropshire variety, valuable for mutton as well as wool, being largely raised, but Mr. Platt declared the farmers are all trying now to get out of the industry.

"There is," he said, "no doubt about the discouragement prevailing among the farming classes. It is a general feeling. I myself am not so discouraged that I am going to give it up. This has been my life work. I was born here on this farm. I have the same feeling any one would have if it was a matter of quitting his life work. I'm not going to quit it either, but there is mighty little inducement beside that feeling for continuing in it."

"For a long time the agricultural interests have been going down and taxes have been going up. Everything is lower this year than the taxes. Things are getting worse all the time as far as crops, which are exported, and wool are concerned. The only thing I have got any money out of this year is a small dairy which I have started and which I am going to continue, although I have no hay to speak of for the winter, having got from 42 acres of grass but 20 loads.

"There is, too, dissatisfaction in state matters. Look at this university over there. While everything else is going down salaries there are going up, till they are getting the biggest kind of pay. I believe, too, that the state house at Lansing could be run at a reduction of two-thirds in the present expense. There'd be no work for about half of the present force of clerks if proper industry was insisted on."

"Whether the cause of the farmers' hard times is over production or under consumption something has got to be done for their relief. Nobody is investing in farm real estate, so a fellow couldn't sell if he wanted to unless it was on a mortgage foreclosure. Some few fellows who are just starting out have mortgaged farms around here and it is going hard with them."

School Commissioner Wedemeyer was present and made a speech. The school in this district is in excellent shape. The scholars have done good work under the direction of their splendid teacher, Miss Nellie Brokaw, whose services are appreciated by the board.

Another illustration was given local dealers the last of the past week, showing them the indiscretion of allowing students, not personally known to the store keeper, to contract too heavy bills with them. A young dental student purchased goods from local dealers amounting in all to about $200. One firm, on learning that he had been getting trusted far and near, became nervous and secured the aid of Deputy Sheriff Woods in recovering the goods. The goods, comprising clothing, gents' furnishings, shoes, etc., and also the trunk of the were sent away in, were found shipped to Chelsea. The officer made the student give up the check and the trunk was returned to the city and the goods turned over to the merchants owing them.

ORDERS OUT MILITIA.

Governor Clarke's Latest Move to Prevent the Fight.

THE SOLDIERS READY TO MOVE.

Their First Duty Will Be to Arrest One of the Pugnacious and Confident of Authority Is Expected—The Garland County Officers Working Against the Governor—Sports at Hot Springs Not Worried Because the Militia Is Called Out.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 31.—Governor Clarke has called out the First regiment of militia to stop the fight between Corbett and Fitzsimmons. Companies at Pine Bluff, Helena, Cabot and Jackson.

GOVERNOR CLARKE.

ville have been ordered to be ready to march, and the McCarthy Light guard, Fletcher rifles and Eagle Light battery of this city have been notified to be ready to move.

Telegrams from the captain of the Helena company say that he has forty-eight men ready to march with 1,000 rounds of ammunition. Forrest City has thirty-eight men with plenty of cartridges, and all eager for the trip. The plan now is to send about 100 militiamen to Hot Springs from this city and mass the other companies in Little Rock.

Conflict of Authority Certain.

Trouble is expected when the militia reaches Hot Springs. Their first duty will be to arrest one of the pugilists, and as the Garland county officers are using every effort to protect them from Governor Clarke, a conflict of authority is certain, and a conflict at arms is not wholly impossible. It is well known that the Garland county officers are working against the governor.

With Sheriff White of Miller county and Deputy Hartz at Texarkana waiting to arrest Fitzsimmons to prevent a fight, and Sheriff Hout of Hot Springs in Texas waiting to spirit the New Zealander into Hot Springs to make a fight possible, and the warrant for Corbett at Hot Springs, together with the approach of the militia, the situation is a complicated one. A warrant has just been issued for the arrest of Sheriff Hout of Garland county, who is now engaged in an effort to get Fitzsimmons to Hot Springs.

No Surprise at Hot Springs.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Oct. 31.—The announcement from Little Rock that Governor Clarke had placed the state militia under waiting orders produced no perceptible effect upon the leaders of the local sporting fraternity, who, by the way, are identical with the citizens' committee. Such a step on the part of the executive authorities had been expected and surprised nobody. It is thought this action was taken to prepare for the emergency of Fitzsimmons falling into the hands of Sheriff Hout's officers at Texarkana and being brought to this city. There is no change in the situation. The crowd is being augmented with the arrival of every train.

BULLET HOLES IN HIS BODY.

Remains of a Retired Preacher Found with a Revolver Near Them.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 31.—The body of Rev. F. V. Spindler, an aged clergyman living at Shakopee, Minn., was found in the outskirts of the city with three bullet holes near his heart. Nearby was found a .22-caliber revolver. The police have as yet been unable to determine whether it was a case of suicide or murder. Spindler was never known to carry a revolver and was supposedly in excellent health according to the testimony of his family. He acted strangely, however, at a cheap lodging house where he put up. He was 74 years old and retired from the German Lutheran ministry two years ago.

The cases were appealed by the railroad companies from the Illinois supreme court.

Livery Stable Destroyed.

BURNED AT THE STAKE.

Horrible Punishment of a Negro Murderer at Tyler, Tex.

TYLER, Tex., Oct. 31.—On a scaffold erected in the public square and in the presence of 7,000 men, women and children, who viewed the horrible spectacle from grand stands and balconies, Henry Hilliard, a negro murderer, was burned at the stake. The murder was committed four and a half miles east of here, the victim being Mrs. Leonard Bell, the 19-year-old wife of a farmer of that neighborhood.

Tyler is the county seat of Smith county, Tex., on the northern division of the International and Great Northern railroad. It has a public library of 15,000 volumes, a substantial courthouse, a banking house, the public educational institution known as the Charnwood institute, one daily and three weekly newspapers, seven churches and several manufacturing interests. ### Accident or Suicide?

AUBURN, N. Y., Oct. 31.—H. A. McCausland, a traveling salesman for the Michigan and Ohio Plaster company, either threw himself or fell from a third-story window of the Osborne House. Although conscious when found, he died four hours afterwards. It was impossible to secure from him a connected statement. Twice he said that there had been persons in the hotel room with him, but as the door was found to be locked, all thoughts of foul play were abandoned. McCausland was about 33 years old and his home was in Saginaw, Mich. His mother lives in Canada and he has a brother in East Saginaw.

Wilkins, was selected and authorized to appoint a general citizens' committee of 100 to aid in perfecting the necessary arrangements. It is proposed to push the matter vigorously.

"The New Woman and the New Man, from an English Point of View," will be discussed by Mrs. Frances Faulkner of London.

Birthday Celebration.

BLOOMINGTON, Ills., Oct. 31.—The 86th birthday of Mrs. Eliza Stevenson, the mother of Vice President Stevenson, was very happily celebrated at the home of her fourth son, Mr. John C. Stevenson in this city. The company, which was quite large, included Vice President and Mrs. Stevenson, William W., John C., Thomas H., and Fielding Stevenson, and her only daughter, Mrs. McCaughey of North Dakota. Many other relatives were present.

Smuggling Conspiracy Unearthed.

BAXFIELD, Wis., Oct. 31.—A smuggling conspiracy has been unearthed here, but owing to the fact that the guilty parties were in some way given a tip no arrests have been made as yet. Evidence has been secured, however, which implicates several well known people, and special revenue officers are now at work on the case. Whisky and opium to the value of thousands of dollars, it is said, have been smuggled into Baxfield from Canada.

Wrecked by an Explosion.

CALUMET, Mich., Oct. 31.—An explosion in Fifth street aroused half of the city. Lomistz Bros.' fruit stand was wrecked by the explosion, which was evidently caused by dynamite or black powder. ### MAY BE SINGING FISHES.

A Phenomenon of the Sea Which Is Interesting and Mysterious.

Here is an account of a phenomenon of the Pascagoula river in Mississippi, to which, although it is not generally known, the attention of naturalists has been called on account of its mystery. At times very remarkable sounds are heard at the mouth of this river. The local fishermen say that it is "the spirits singing under the water." It is a murmuring sound, which rises gradually and then falls to a lower tone. The music ceases when the waters are disturbed, and when they are quiet it begins again.

Several explanations have been offered as to the origin and cause of the mysterious sounds of the Pascagoula. The most satisfactory theory is that the sounds are produced by a species of fish in some unknown way. Professor G. Brown Goode, who is an authority on fishes and fish life, thinks that the drum-fish may cause the sounds in question.

Instances of peculiar sounds being heard at sea and ascribed to fishes are not uncommon, as the following examples will show:

In 1824, when Lieutenant White of the American navy was at the mouth of a river in Cambodia, he and his crew were surprised by unusual sounds. He described the noises as a mixture of the bass of an organ, the ringing of bells, the guttural cries of a large frog and the tones of an immense harp. The natives said that the sounds were produced by a school of a certain kind of fish.

Dr. Buist, 1847, reported that a party of people in a boat on the waters near Bombay heard strange sounds, which the natives held to be caused by fish. The well known English traveler, Sir J. Emerson Tennent, heard similar sounds from the lake of Batticaloa in Ceylon, and here again the natives claimed that fishes made the sounds. Several correspondents of newspapers have reported having heard sounds which were produced by fishes. One writer in the London Field, 1867, avers that in the harbor at Greytown, Nicaragua, he was haunted at night by these mysterious sounds. Another in the same paper tells of musical sounds which he heard in the Tavy river. Other instances of more recent date might be mentioned.

From all the accounts given we may draw some interesting conclusions. Thus it seems that the sounds are almost always heard on shipboard, though Charles Kingsley once heard them at Trinidad from the shore; that they are usually heard in tropical regions; that they are more often heard at night than at any other time; that they are commonly heard at the mouth of rivers, as at the mouth of the Pascagoula, and that they have been reported from far distant places in America, Europe and Asia.—Our Animal Friends.

Padded the Payrolls.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Three men have been arrested here, charged with embezzling large amounts of money from the city by padding the payrolls of the street bureau with dummy names. The prisoners are Howard D. Herr, cashier of the department of public works; John M. Danahy, deputy superintendent of streets, and Joseph Burke, formerly an inspector of streets and now a saloon keeper. Herr is prominent in political and social circles and a popular man about town. Danahy is a son of Michael Danahy, a well known sugar of live stock.

Drop Forgings.

The machinery for drop forging is ponderous and expensive. The plates that stamp out the forgings are in two sections, one of which fits into the bed of the machine, and the other is fastened to the arm. Together these two plates have an opening the shape of the desired forging. The descent of the arm on a piece of tool steel stamps out a piece of the requisite shape. After leaving the forging machine the metal is in a rough state and has to be turned down on a lathe and bored out, each of which operations has to be carefully done, as the finished article has to be exact in every particular.—Chicago Times-Herald.

A GREAT EXPENSE

To Carry on an Almost Helpless Fight.
—At Last the Fight is Over.

(From the Battle Creek Moon.)

Our representative called at 26 Battle Creek Avenue, the residence of S. I. Robbins, and in an interview with him brought out the following facts: Mr. Robbins tells of his wife's experience in a manner that carries conviction with his words. If says: "I am sorry my wife is not at home. This P. M., but no one knows better than I how she has suffered during past years. For twenty years she has been afflicted with the various forms of kidney complaint and an enlargement of the liver. She was often confined to her bed for more than two weeks at a time suffering untold agony. She has doctored constantly, and I have paid out in doctors' bills for her alone as much as $900.00, and then her relief was only such that she would be able to be around for a spell. Some time ago she felt the symptoms of another attack coming on, such as a pain in through the kidneys and back. I hardly know what induced me to get a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, instead of sending for the family physician; however, I got some and she commenced their use. It was a surprise to us both to see their action; the attack was ward off, and she continued taking them with marked improvement each day of their use. She is better now than she has been in years, the pain in the back and others in the kidneys have entirely gone. Hardly a day goes by that we do not mention the great good Doan's Kidney Pills have done her. I was always opposed to patent medicines, but confess that my wife's experience with Doan's Kidney Pills has done much to change my opinions. If it were not for those pills she would not have been able to be out this afternoon."

Two Accommodation Trains in Collision in St. Louis.

BOTH ENGINEERS ARE KILLED.

The Firemen of Both Trains Receive Fatal Injuries and a Number of the Passengers Are More or Less Shocked—Prominent Chicago Man Ground Under the Wheels of a Cable Car—Serious Railway Accident Occurs in Iowa.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 31.—The two Kirkwood accommodation trains over the Missouri Pacific railroad collided at King's Highway and Manchester, just inside the city limits. Both engineers were killed and their bodies horribly mangled. The firemen, too, were buried in the wreck and fatally crushed. The dead are: William Catrion of St. Louis, engineer of the east-bound train; John Harper of Webster Grove, engineer of the west-bound train. The fatally injured are: George Dunbar of Webster Grove, fireman of the west-bound train; George True of St. Louis, fireman of the east-bound train.

Buck Taylor Among the Injured.
A number of passengers were more or less shocked. Buck Taylor, the wild west showman, a passenger on the east-bound train, had his right leg broken. The two trains were used for suburban traffic. The east-bound had but few passengers, while the west-bound carried theater patrons going home to the suburbs. The two trains should have met four miles further west, but Engineer Catrion of the east-bound train tried to reach the Howard switch in time to meet the other train. Both trains were running slowly or a more dreadful calamity would have occurred.

GROUND UNDER THE WHEELS.

Prominent Chicago Citizen Killed by a Cable Car.

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—G. W. Cole, president of the Merchants' and Bankers' Protective association, was killed by a south-going cable car on North Clark street. He lived for five minutes after being taken to the Alexian Brothers' hospital, though his body was mangled so badly that the physicians wonder that he did not die immediately. The accident occurred at the corner of Superior street. Mr. Cole was attempting to board a north-going train from the wrong side when the grip car coming from an opposite direction struck him squarely in the back. Mr. Cole was knocked under the cars, and when the train was stopped and the body taken out it was an appalling sight.

Mr. Cole was prominent in several societies. He was a veteran of the civil war, a member of the U. S. Grant post, and bore the title of colonel. He was a member of the Marquette club. A few years ago he was active in politics and had many friends among the politicians. One of them is W. H. Hinrichsen, whom he visited last week in Springfield. He was a Mason in high standing, a Knight of Pythias, a member of the Chicago council No. 4 of the Corinthian chapter of the Medinah temple, and also of the St. Bernard commandery.

Conductor Fatally Injured.

IOWA FALLS, Ia., Oct. 31.—A serious accident occurred on the Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern road at Bardsy station. No. 63, Sioux Falls express, had orders to pass a freight extra at that point. The freight had started on to the side track, but had not cleared the line when the passenger crashed into it. Freight Conductor Dan Gammon of Estherville, Ia., was fatally injured, and Engineer Permetor and Fireman Wagner of the passenger were seriously injured.

THE WIDOW HAD HER WAY.

Two Graves Dug for the Remains of a Michigan Farmer.
WILLIAMSTON, Oct. 31.—Two sets of burial outfits were procured and two graves dug for the remains of Russell Shaw, a well-to-do farmer. Shaw had been married four times and had children by three wives. The children and other relatives are all at odds, some of them, with the widow, insisting that Shaw should be buried in the Williamston cemetery and the others that he should be buried at Foote.

When the funeral procession was ready to start it looked as if there would be trouble, but an officer from Williamston persuaded the kinsfolk that the widow should have her way, and the body was interred at Williamston. Relatives are contesting the old man's will. One party had the order appointing an administrator printed in the local paper twenty-four hours before the funeral.

Forest Fires in Michigan.

CAMDEN, Oct. 31.—Word has reached here that the forest fires which had been burning in the marshes and meadows near Montgomery, in the southern end of this county, had reached such dangerous proportions the town was in great danger of being wiped out. The alarm over the situation has become so great that, with the high winds blowing, it is feared the fire cannot be kept from the town itself. The business men have closed their stores and gone out to fight the fires, and every able-bodied man in the place has turned into a fireman.

Passed as a Count and Countess.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 31.—A couple, passing as the Count and Countess of Schellher of Germany, and who have been entertained here by society people, are missing. When a constable called at their apartments in a fashionable family hotel to levy an attachment for an unpaid board bill at another house, their rooms were found to be empty. They forgot to pay their bill at this hotel also.

Fire at Springfield, O.

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 31.—Fire broke out in the Lagonda hotel at midnight and spread to other buildings in the business portion of the city, resulting in a loss of $250,000. Dayton sent two engines to aid in extinguishing the flames. The hotel was crowded with guests and many had narrow escapes. Several were carried out in an unconscious condition, but it is believed will not suffer serious injury.

Saved After Terrible Suffering.

MONTAGUE, Mich., Oct. 31.—The schooner Henry C. Richards, of Cleveland, founded fifteen miles off Little Point Au Sable. The crew took to the yawl and after terrible suffering were picked up by the White River life saving crew.

REDHOT JOURNALISM

TRIALS OF A CONFEDERATE NEWS-PAPER DURING THE WAR.

Wanderings of 'The Rebel' in Three States. Henry Watterson Was Editor in Chief. His Meeting With General Bragg—How the Paper's Career Was Closed.

The story of The Rebel in its wanderings over the south is one of interest. Survivors of the Army of Tennessee especially remember the little sheet that found its way to the camps daily and inspired the boys to renewed energy and hope for the cause they deemed the right. Like the loved and inspiring "Dixie," The Rebel fired the southern heart by its very name.

The Rebel first saw the light Aug. 1, 1862, in Chattanooga. It was a four column folio, published by Franc M. Paul. Thousands of copies were sent to Bragg's army at Tullahoma, Tenn., and often the supply was inadequate to the demand, owing to the fact that the publisher's press, a drum cylinder, could not print them fast enough. Often the press was kept going all day to supply the demand from the army sutlers.

So popular did The Rebel become in a few weeks that the publisher in October, 1862, engaged the young but versatile and rising journalist, Henry Watterson, to edit the paper. Mr. Paul brought to the assistance of Mr. Watterson Mr. Albert Roberts, a vigorous writer and trained journalist of Nashville. He was a humorous writer, using the nom de plume of "John Happy."

Watterson and Roberts kept The Rebel at white heat, and the paper grew in importance and size, being made a five column paper shortly after the publication began. Well does the writer remember the eagerness of the army for the only highly prized paper. The boys in camp could not rest until its arrival every morning on the train from Chattanooga.

When General Bragg began his retrograde movement in the spring of 1863 to Chattanooga, The Rebel was supplied to the army with much difficulty. When the army arrived there, the paper was in still greater demand. In the summer of that year, however, it became evident that the Federals were coming to Chattanooga for the purpose of capturing that important point. And then it was The Rebel began its wanderings over the south.

The paper was removed to Marietta, Ga., Messrs. Watterson and Roberts staying in Chattanooga for a few days after the plant had been shipped. The shelling of Chattanooga in that month soon convinced the editors that they, too, must go if they would avoid capture by the Federal army, and they left to join the paper. Editor in Chief Watterson had been sharply criticizing General Bragg while the paper was in Chattanooga. One evening he visited a gentleman's house in that town, and it happened that General Bragg was also a visitor. The two gentlemen had never met, and while waiting for the host to appear, after being ushered into the parlor by a servant, Watterson and Bragg began a casual conversation, which soon turned upon the war. Although he knew he was in the presence of an officer of high rank, Watterson little suspected it was the commander in chief of the army. He indulged in some criticisms of General Bragg as he had been doing in The Rebel. The general listened for awhile in almost speechless wonder, but controlled himself till his fiery critic had abused him for some minutes, when he arose, and addressing Mr. Watterson asked:

"Do you know who I am, sir?"

The editor replied that he had not that honor.

"My name is Bragg, sir," said the now fully aroused commander.

Of course Watterson was somewhat taken aback, but in his most courtly and chivalrous manner assured General Bragg that he had not meant to be offensive, but that his criticisms were made in good faith and from motives of sincere desire to promote the welfare of the Confederacy. But apologies were not asked or given.

General Bragg, however, never forgot nor forgave his critic. After the battle of Chickamauga, while the paper was at Marietta, Watterson continued his attacks on General Bragg, who informed the publisher of The Rebel that unless the irate editor were discharged the paper could not come into his lines. Mr. Watterson then realized that he must seek other friends, for he was not the man to retract a word not to be dictated to. As editor in chief he would write his sentiments despite any one, so he made arrangements to become one of the staff of Lieutenant General Leonidas Polk. After serving a short time in that capacity Watterson resigned and became editor of one of the papers published in Atlanta.

After an uneventful existence in Griffin for awhile the approach of the Federal army to Atlanta in July of that year warned the publisher that he must move on if he would keep The Rebel afloat and save his scalp, so it was taken to Selma, Ala., that fall.

Here it was that the eventual paper came to an untimely end with the Confederacy it had so long and faithfully upheld. It was in the latter part of April, 1865, that Selma was taken by General Wilson. The Federals knew of the existence of The Rebel, and one of the first things they did to appease their wrath was to fire its office, which was in a building beside the river and built partly over it. The Yankees printed a small sheet, in which they announced their victory over the "rebs" and probably the "general orders from headquarters" announcing the surrender of the armies of the southern Confederacy. They then threw the materials in the river and burned all the files they could find.—Boston Herald.

Society is very queer. The people most sought after are those who do not pay their debts.

Praises the Bicycle.

It seems to be coming—scientific approval—in all directions. Dr. Champiere, member of the Academy of Medicine, has made observations on Frenchwomen who have used the wheel, and he finds they are better performers than men, learning more easily and with less purposeless expenditure of force. He finds a marked increase in the amount of muscle developed all over the trunk of the body, especially about the torso. The lung capacity is increased, full, healthy action of the heart is restored and the deposition of fat is avoided. The doctor asserts that he can detect infallibly the woman who uses the wheel from her sisters when they cross the streets. One proceeds with self confidence and ease when the other dodges and invites disaster. He then examines the mental discipline afforded by the bicycle, and thence deduces his most striking conclusions. He finds that the woman's powers of attention and observation are awakened in an extraordinary degree, or rather that these powers, with which all human beings are endowed at birth, are saved from atrophy, which in both sexes is one of the most marked defects produced by civilization. The wheelwomen move with something of the freedom and dignity observed in some of the higher uncivilized races. The doctor disclaims any intention to theorize, but at the close of his article permits himself to dream of a new Frenchwoman as the product of the bicycle.

A few years ago, Mr. L. W. Gallaher, was an extensive, successful expert manufacturer of lumber products. Attacked with epilepsy, he was obliged to give up his business. The attacks came upon him most inopportunely. One time falling from a carriage, at another down stairs, and often in the street. Once he fell down a shaft in the mill, his injuries nearly proving fatal. Mr. Gallaher writes from Milwaukee, Feb. 16, '95.

"There are none more miserable than epileptics. For 20 years I suffered with epileptic fits, having as high as five in one night. I tried any number of physicians, paying to me alone, a fee of $500.00 and have done little for years but search for something to help me, and have taken all the leading remedies, but received no benefit. A year ago my son, Chas. S. Gallaher, druggist at 191 Reed St., Milwaukee, gave me Dr. Miles' Restorative Nerveine, and I tried it with gratifying results. Have had but two fits since I began taking it. I am better now in every way than I have been in 20 years."

Good Words for Prof. Jonas.

The following is taken from the Chicago Chronicle for October 23. Commenting upon the chamber concert in the Summy series given on Tuesday evening October 22, it says:

Alberto Jonas is a pianist of far more than ordinary acquirements. His technique is equal to any demands; his command of the pedal is one of the greatest charms of his playing, and that he has much fire and fine musical feeling was manifest, although the unthoughtfulness of his selection, the ballet music from Gluck's "Alceste," arranged by St. Saens, prevented him from showing those qualities to advantage. The Beethoven trio was given with fine effect, due in a great measure to the fine playing of Alberto Jonas.

The Chicago Tribune for October 23, in speaking of the chamber concert in the Summy series, given in Central Music hall, on Tuesday evening, October 22, says:

Two improvements last evening over the opening concert were the shortening of the program and more even selections in the matter of assisting musicians. The first of these to be considered, the pianist Alberto Jonas, displayed finish and delicacy that in frequent movements approached Joseffy. His response in the matter of breadth is limited, but in clearness, fluency and a certain musicianly poise he attained to admirable things. In addition to the Saint-Saens number, excellent propriety of selection, Mr. Jonas assisted with Mr. Spiering and Mr. Diestel.

The Times-Herald says: Mr. Alberto Jonas is scholarly, thoughtful, intense, and commands his piano admirably.

Senator Hill at University Hall.

Senator Hill made a good impression at University hall last Friday night. He was a little while getting the audience with him, and there were some beatitudes and platitudes at first which made some fear that his untired experiment of becoming a lecturer might only mean that he would indulge in high sounding phrases and much rhetoric. But shortly the platitudes became eloquence and the eloquence was followed by some good honest thoughts from a man of vast information and good reading.

From the platform where Cleveland inaugurated his western boom three years ago, in the face of an audience that was coldly critical, fresh from New York City where he had been hailed but a few nights previous with every acclamation of homage from his political followers, this man, great in the councils of the Empire state politics, could not but have felt that he was being weighed in the balance and that everything he said was being placed upon the mental scales of every person in his large hearing. That he acquitted himself favorably before the audience that he had is sufficient encomium of praise for the ruler of Tammany.

Mr. Hill was not met by any howling mob of students at the depot. His reception was from members of the S. L. A. committee, who showed him about the city. Otherwise he put in the afternoon in denying interviews to the reporters who were close at his heels and in finishing his evening's lecture. Notwithstanding that there was a lack of enthusiasm over his arrival, Senator Hill did not seem to be the least bit disgruntled and when he came before his audience he was simply affable looking gentleman who had something to say and proceeded to say it in an unassuming but telling way. He commenced by the recital of the legend of an old baron, who, in wandering over his possessions, came upon some old landmark which would show to him that he was away from his own locality and that he must hasten back to his domains ere some hostile foe should do him harm. Communities and states, like this old baron, needed certain landmarks beyond which it was dangerous to proceed. The first of these landmarks were the American Revolution and the Declaration of Independence. For the latter the United States was indebted to Jefferson. He had heard it repeated by a man (referring to Chauncey Depew), who "spoke so often that he could not be expected to speak with accuracy," that Jefferson was not to be placed on the roll of the great men of the Revolution, and that Hamilton was really the great central figure of that epoch, next to Washington. Depew had claimed that Jefferson was not constructive, that he was the dreamer, Hamilton, the executor of the early times. This statement Mr. Hill proceeded to characterize as deception on Mr. Depew's part, for Jefferson, in drafting the constitution had executed the greatest constructive element of his time, had given his name to an instrument which would last to the end of the republic. In speaking of the Revolution and its generals, its men of the pen as well as the sword, the speaker made an impassioned flight which had the true ring of eloquence. The landmarks which were to be laid in the future for the good of our country were few, the speaker thought. These were: Extension of the presidential term to six years, election of senators by popular vote, granting the president power to veto separate items in appropriation bills, the prohibition of the issue of any legal tender money. Of the first three, he had little to say; they were well understood by every person. About the last he talked to some length, giving the reasons for being a "hard money" man. These reasons were much the same as usually advanced and were well argued and made sufficiently interesting to hold his audience to the close. In closing the senator was duly gallant and said that the University was one of the great "landmarks" of the country and paid it a high compliment as being an educational institution famed the length and breadth of the country. Only once or twice did he allow the facetious to enter into his lecture, and his best hit was the recital of a bit of humor of which he himself was the butt. He and Chauncey Depew were talking at a fair down east and one of them told a story of a man who put up a watering trough for every son born to him. An inquisitive woman approached the stand after the speech and desired to know what Mr. Hill was doing in the watering trough line. Mr. Hill being a bachelor this, of course, was supposed to be embarrassing, but, judging from the manner the senator told it, he thought it was only a very tickling bit of humor.

Senator Hill left Ann Arbor the same night for Ohio, where he was booked for four democratic speeches for his friend, ex-Governor and next Governor Campbell.

John Griffith, who made an excellent impression here as Mephisto in "Faust" last season, will appear in the same role tonight at the opera house. ## TO SCARE BURGLARS.

A FEW DEVICES SOMEWHAT OUT OF THE COMMON RUN.

They May Happen to Frighten People Who Are Not Burglars, but There Is No Doubt That Most of Them Are Calculated to Scare Every Time.

A little party of women, brought together last week by a family reunion over in Brooklyn, had under debate a communication recently printed in The Sun respecting domestic devices to serve as burglar alarms.

"We believe in tin," said one. "John cut a little groove like half of an anger hole across the tops of the front and back doors, a few inches back from the outer edge, and before we go to bed we poke into each one a stick supporting some old tinware on the extreme end. A leaky watering pot, with some old tin cups inside, hangs on one, and on the other an old dishpan, with a couple of baking tins tied to it. So long as the door stays shut nothing happens, but if it is pushed open the least mite of a crack down comes the tinware with a clatter fit to wake up everybody in the ward."

"That's all well enough for your doors, but how about the windows? A thief can open one of these new fangled catches by poking a table knife up between the sashes, as easy as you'd say scat."

"But that wouldn't open our windows. John has bored holes slanting in through the window casing into the sashes and put long iron pins in them. It is just as if every window was nailed fast, and a burglar, to get in, would have to cut away the whole sash."

"Did any of you ever try newspapers?" asked another. "No? Well, let me assure you, from my own experience, there is nothing better. Lay one or two dry newspaper sheets in the lower hall and pin a couple on the stairs. It is impossible to step on them without making a noise that, in the stillness of night, would surprise you if you never tried it before. And you can't pick them up or fold them or slide them out of the way or step over them without more noise. As for the ones on the stairs, they are simply the thief's despair. My husband laughed at me when I first put them down, but within a week, as it happened, their efficacy was proved. I was awakened one night by the rustling of paper in the hall below and awoke my husband. We lay quiet and listened. Presently there was another rustle. Then a long silence. Then more rustling, and as the sound of it died away we could hear somebody swearing in a whisper. It was so funny that my husband burst into a roar of laughter, and the fellow down stairs jerked the front door open and fled."

"I don't think scaring a burglar away is enough punishment for him," commented an elderly woman. "He ought to be hurt somehow. Mr. B. thinks so, too, and his 'warm welcome for the uninvited' is something that, as he says, 'just about fills the bill.' The bolts on our front door and the arc light before it free us of all apprehensions of attack from that direction, but twice our house was entered by petty thieves through the back door, which faces a dark garden and is in the shadow of a vine covered porch. The second time inspired Mr. B. with an idea. At one side of the door, about the height of a man's face, he fastened to the wall a springy bamboo cane, with a tin cup wired to its free end. During the day it can be turned up 'on the wall' out of the way, but at night, when he sets it for business, it is sprung out about 1½ feet and held there by a short stick and a figure 4 trigger so set that opening the door will trip it. The tin cup, I omitted to mention, holds a good ounce of cayenne pepper."

"For a month after Mr. B. rigged that contrivance up nothing happened, and he was getting low spirited over the neglect of the burglars to take note of his new invention. Then, one night, the sharp 'spang' of the cane against the wall rang sharply all through the house and woke us up. That was followed immediately by language on the back porch fit to make your blood run cold. We got to the window in time to see two men in the garden, one leading the other, who was howling and swearing terribly. We fancied that some of the pepper had got into his eyes. Before Mr. B. could get his pistol they had disappeared in the shrubbery, and we have not been troubled since."

"That trigger, set to go off when the door was opened," remarked another woman, "reminds me of a horrid thing my husband brought home with him from a trip out west last year. It was like a pistol barrel, with a long screw on one side for fixing it to the door frame and a long spring on the other to project over the edge of the door. A little touch would make the spring fall hard on a cap and fire the thing off. The first night after Jack got home, when I was setting a chair upside down against the door, as I always did, he stopped me and put on his new contraption. When I got up first in the morning, as usual, I had forgotten all about that thing, which was down as low as my knees, and did not notice it when I went to go out. Then it suddenly seemed to me as if the world had exploded. The thing had worked all right, and in addition to making a noise louder than the sunset gun at the fort, had rattled the vestibule wall with buckshot. Jack said 'it would have filled a burglar's legs with lead,' and I believed him, but I never would allow him to put it on the door again. One such scare is enough for a lifetime."—New York Sun.

THE NEW CHILD.

It Is a Dreadful Little Animal, Pert and Precocious.

"A is not an article," remarked a child the other day to her mother, who was helping her with her school lesson. "Fancy your not knowing that it's a distinguishing adjective!" We asked a small schoolgirl the other day if she learned astronomy. "Astronomy! Of course not! That's an infant's subject," she answered, with great contempt. "Have you read Pope's 'Essay on Man'?" we inquired lately of a girl of 13. "Pope! Why, nobody thinks anything of him nowadays," she replied. "Do you know Milton's 'Paradise Lost'?" "Oh, we got beyond that long ago."

The worst of a childish dictum of this sort is that you feel yourself so absolutely quenched. There is no getting any further in the argument, for no pigheadedness equals the pigheadedness of the very young person—in fact, of the new child. And then he—or she—is never amused with the simple games that used to delight us. Modern children are willing to play if only to please their elders, but they are mildly and politely bored. They are bored with most things. They have 20 picture books where we had one—none of your garish, crude illustrations, but aesthetic designs, and yet they don't seem to care about them.

There is a good story of how an old gentleman with much toil and trouble manufactured a large kite for his small grandson. He and another old friend, with the boy, went out to fly the kite. The two old men were deeply engrossed, but the grandson got so bored that he quietly absented himself, and after some time the two old fogies found to their disgust that they had been larking about all alone with a kite, much to the amusement of the passersby. And another story—of a little girl of 8 who said to her mother (an authoress), "Oh, mummy, why not call your new book 'The Rod of Love'?"—does not ring quite pleasantly. Ah, There is something terribly unchildish about the "new child!"—New York Times.

THE EGG DANCE.

A Beautiful Feat That Is Performed by Hindoo Juggling Girls.

One of the most wonderful of the many feats performed by Hindoo jugglers is the egg dance. Usually it is executed by a girl, fantastically dressed. She makes use of the willow wheel, around which at equal distances are threads, and at the end of each thread there is a noose, held open by a bead.

This wheel the girl places on her head, while she carries a basket of eggs on her arm. When the music strikes up, she begins to dance, and the wheel begins to spin around. She then takes an egg from the basket, places it in one of the thread nooses and throws it from her with sufficient force to draw the knot tight. The spinning of the wheel keeps the thread stretched, with the egg at the end of it.

She then takes another egg from the basket, places it in another noose and repeats this until there is an egg in every noose. Her fantastic costume, her perfect motion and all the eggs swinging on the stretched threads at once present a very pretty sight indeed. It requires much art to execute the dance, for at one false step the eggs would be dashed together, the dance spoiled and the dancer thereby disgraced.

After dancing for a time with all the eggs swinging around her head she takes them out of the noose one by one, all the time keeping the wheel balanced and in motion, and again places them in the basket on her arm.

When the dance is finished, the spectators are allowed to examine the eggs to see that they are real.—Philadelphia Times.
