THE GRAPE BERRY MOTH.

A Widely Distributed Pest Which Damages the Ripening Grapes.

As grape berries become full grown and begin to ripen many of them will 260 bushels of wheat from 10 acres of often be observed to be discolored, and GRAPE BEERY MOTH LARVA AND PUPA. found eaten through the pulp from the discolored spot and within it a whitish larva. These injured berries begin to appear while the fruit is young and green and as it ripens they increase in number. Frequently several of these discolored and shriveled berries will be fastened together by silken threads inlanti and generously offers to send his termixed with the excrement of the larvæ and the sticky grape juice. The appearance is not unlike that of black rot. When full grown, the larva attains a length of about one-third of an inch, and, abandoning the grape, cuts out of a grape leaf a little flap which it folds and fastens with silk, forming a little oblong case in which it changes to a chrysalis, a little slate colored moth appearing in 10 or 12 days.

Our grape berry moth is widely distributed, occurring probably wherever the grape is grown to any extent, from Canada to Florida and westward to California. It attacks all varieties, but is especially destructive to grapes with tender skins and such as grow in compact bunches. It is probably three brooded, except in its more northern range, the first brood developing on the leaves in May and June, the second brood on green grapes in July, and the third brood on ripening grapes in August and September. The early brood of this insect is so scanty that it is rarely noticed, and hence protective steps are seldom taken. Later in the season it multiplies with great rapidity, and particularly does it become numerous and destruc tive if grape gathering be deferred until a late period.

In a bulletin of the department of agriculture, from which these facts are learned, C. H. Marlatt, entomologist, says the use of poisons is not practicable as a remedy except against the first brood. Bagging as soon as the first grapes set is recommended, but of greater value is the prompt collection and burning of all fallen leaves in au tumn, thus destroying the hibernating larvæ and also the collection and destruction of diseased fruit.

Gathering and Packing Prunes.

Prunes intended for shipping green should always be picked in baskets before fully ripe and carefully graded into sizes. For evaporating gather when thoroughly ripe by picking them or shaking trees, going over the orchard several times as they mature. If gathered by shaking, spread sheets under trees, which should be emptied into baskets, handling fruit carefully to avoid breaking the skins. If skins are broken, prunes will drip in drying. Grade into three sizes to insure uniformity in drying and remove leaves, twigs, decaying fruit, etc. Grade again after they are through sweating to sizes indicating number of dried prunes to the pound. Before packing many growers "gloss" or "finish" prunes with glycerin, etc., to improve appearance and prevent their sticking together. Much fruit is packed in sacks, though it will pay better to pack in boxes, as fruit looks better and does not lose weight by drying.—Oregon Experiment

Fertilizer Facts.

It is a well known fact that practically all the mixed fertilizers sold in Ohio are made of three materials, tankage, acid phosphate and muriate of potash. Tankage is a waste product of the great slaughtering establishments, being the settlings in the tanks in which the scraps and offal are rendered to extract their grease. These settlings are dried and ground into a fine meal, and either sold direct for fertilizing purposes or first mixed with other materials.

Tankage, like bone meal, is useful as a carrier of both ammonia and phosphoric acid. It differs from bone in carrying a larger percentage of ammonia (6 to 10) and a smaller proportion of phosphoric acid.

The phosphoric acid of both bone and tankage is somewhat slower in action than that of acid phosphate, but when finely ground it soon becomes available by decay in the soil.—Ohio Station

MODERN POTATO GROWING.

Views of an Advocate of Northern Grown Seed and Late Planting.

To the discussion as to the comparative merits of southern and northern grown seed and early versus late planting a writer in Orange Judd Farmer contributes the following:

Of late years much has been said in regard to what is known as the southern second crop potatoes for seed purpose and they have some points of merit, because, not being fully matured, they can be kept for spring planting where fully matured tubers cannot, but they lack the vigor obtained by northern growth and in that respect are not equal to northern grown seed. After several years' experimenting I have found that, by planting my main crop late in the season I am able to combine the good points of second crop seed with our advantages of a location in the great potato belt of the north.

A potato which has been grown early in the season and then has to pass through the long hot months of late summer and fall soon loses its crisp firmness and evaporates a part of its moisture, after which it is not capable of producing a full crop if used for seed purposes. Nature's law is-maturity once reached, then start the decline and wasting away of old age. In order to retard this plan of nature one must as soon as his crop is mature place it at once into practically cold storage. But few are able to do this. I have found that by growing the crop late in the season it reaches maturity during the cool days of late fall and often the tops are killed by frost before fully ripe. This checks nature's plan and holds them full of that thrifty vigor so much desire by the wide awake potato grower.

I have found that I get the best results by planting during the month of June. Most of my crop of 1897 was planted between June 8 and 22. It was harvested during October and yielded from 200 to 433 bushels per acre. I aim to plant on new land if possible or upon a clover sod.

The scab is the easiest fungous disease of the potato to combat. Soak all seed, even if it appears to be perfectly clean, with the corrosive sublimate solution, 2 ounces to 16 gallons of water, and then if planted on land free from the germs of the fungus the crop will be clean. For this reason a crop of potatoes should never follow any other root crop until several seasons have elapsed.

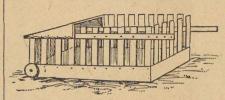

The early and late blights can be controlled by the free use of the bordeaux mixture, but remember that it is not a cure but a preventive, and its use must commence early, before any trace of blight appears, and must be followed up at frequent intervals during the season, so that every leaf may be kept coated. Paris green can be applied with the bordeaux mixture if desired.

The Plow a Back Number.

the recent meeting of the New Jersey a favorite, being found under different State Horticultural society, remarked: I believe that a great many farmers and globe. fruit growers have come to the conclusion that the old fashioned plow is a back number. On my farm I plowed only two acres last year and I was sorry I did that. On a light sandy loam the cutaway harrow does better work than the plow, because we do not want to plow so deep. Our land has been plowed to death.. We use the disk harrow and or with the wood ashes, as it did not bring a good crop. My experience has convinced me that the ashes contain lime and that the stable manure is alkaline, which acts contrary to the solubles in the soil. I don't believe in turning it from the bottom side up. I believe that those disks and cutaway harrows are better than plows.

THE PILL THAT WILL.

The Word "Dollar."

According to one authority the word 'dollar" is a corruption of the German word "thaler," the form in Dutch being 'daalder," Danish "daler," and Italian 'tallero." All these different forms were derived from Joachim's Thal, a Bohemian town, where the count of Schliek, A. D. 1518, coined some excellent pieces in silver of one ounce in weight. From the name of the town came Joachim's thaler, applied to the above-named coins, as well as that of Schlickenthaler. Hence Joachim's thaler pieces were first contracted into Joachim's thalers and then into thalers. These coins gained such a reputation that they became a pattern, so that others of the same kind, though made in other places, took the name, the word assuming different spellings through the low countries, reaching Spain as dollars, and through its provinces transmitted to the western hemisphere, where it was applied to coins prior to the adoption of the federal cur-H. Spouting Blue Clay.

A strange account is given of the performances of a government artesian well at Lower Brule Agency, in South Dakota. When first driven, the well threw up a column of water six inches in diameter. After a while it began to the ordinary cutaway harrow, instead of the plow. We concluded that there the clay, and the pressure upon it in spout, alternately, sand and water. the bowels of the earth must be tremendous. It completely fills the sixinch pipe, and issues at the top like a gigantic sausage, rising to a height of five or six feet before it topples over. It is necessary to remove the deposit of clay in order to save the well from becoming buried under it. The clay does not flow continuously, but, it is said, usually commences a little before the advent of windy and stormy weather, indicating a change in the pressure due

Luminous Paint. Luminous paint has so many uses that expert and amateur alike are interested in everything new concerning it. Most of these self-lighting colors are made of barium sulphide or calcium sulphide. A luminant which is highly spoken of is made of calcium tungstate. To prepare this, put into a Hessian crucible 30 parts calcium chloride, 30 parts sodium tungstate, and 30 parts sodium chloride, which have been well mixed. Keep it at a red heat for several hours. The heat breaks down the mass, which becomes a vitreous paste. After cooling and breaking up, the mixture is thoroughly washed with water. Fine crystals of calcium tungstate remain after this process. A coating of strong glue is put over the surface, knows German in a pitiful manner. which it is desired to cover, and the crystals are thickly strewn over the glue, which hardening, holds them firmly in place. This is said to be by far the most brilliant self-luminant extant.

Miss Julia Kirchhofer is attending WHAT IT MEANS TO PUT A WARSHIP IN COMMISSION.

> The Enormous Amount of Work That Must Be Performed and the Ceremonies That Are Observed Before the Pennant and the Stars and Stripes Are Hoisted.

In times of peace as well as when war's dark clouds gloom the nation you are liable to read in the newspapers an announcement to the effect that one of the vessels of the navy is going "into commission." It is not a very impress-New cement walks are being laid in live phrase, but the full meaning of the term is something of which few have any adequate conception. To put a modern warship into commission involves an enormous amount of work, which can be fully appreciated only by one who has observed the process from beginning to end.

When a vessel of the navy is laid up in reserve, "in ordinary," as it is called, it is far from an attractive object and could hardly be recognized as the same ship when in thorough trim, with crew aboard. The ship is anchored at a convenient navy yard; the stores are sent ashore, her engines and guns covered with oil and an antirust paint; her decks are allowed to become dirty, her sides dull and stained from rusty chains. Thus she lies perhaps for months, and then an order comes from the secretary of the navy, through the chief of the bureau of navigation, directing the commanding officer of the yard to get her ready for sea.

The first thing to be done is to bring as many men as possible from the receiving ship, which lies hard by, and these, with the force of the yard, under the direction of whatever officers are available, begin at once to put things to rights and remove the accumulated dust and dirt from the different parts of the equipment; the engineer's force goes at once to the engines and boiler rooms; the anitrust paint is removed from the engines; new packing is put in the valves and joints; the pumps are tested, the rust and dirt knocked from interiors of fire boxes, and boiler tubes and grate ger. Outwardly everything is now in fair condition, but this is only the beginning. It remains to get up steam in wife, Saline, $600. some of the boilers, turn over the engines to see if they are in proper trim, start the dynamos, test the electric lights and the pilothouse, signals, turn on the searchlights, start the fans, work the steering gear and steering engines, set the hoisting machinery in motion and put the boat cranes in operation. Every engine, boiler, pipe, wire, tube, rivet, bolt, nut and plate is carefully inspected, and if found unserviceable from any cause repaired.

Next the equipment storehouse is visited, and a full allowance of beef, pork, beans, potatoes, coffee, sugar, salt, flour, meal, clothing, shoes, hammocks, blankets, paint, tobacco—in short, the whole miscellaneous assortment of the commissary department, is placed on board. The paymaster of the ship is responsible for every article received, and a strict account is kept of each. Then the galley, or cooking stove, has to be examined to see whether it is complete in all its findings. The outfit of a galley usually consists of two copper kettles of 30 gallons each, a 50 gallon kettle, with cast iron jacket and copper hinged cov ers, two steamers for vegetables, each with a capacity of 32 gallons; two sets of saucepans, a fine set of tools for lifting and firing and the ordinary cooking will.

The line officers look after the condition of the guns, the rigging, the boats, the cables, the anchors, the flags and signals, the charts, the nautical instruments and other parts of the ship's equipment. What this means can only be appreciated by one who has actually

After Bridget departed the housekeeper investigated the culinary department, and her soul waxed wroth at the disarray of the pots and pans; but when she reached the store closet she despaired. Bridget had covered the various crocks after she had taken out preserves and pickles, but she hadn't matched them, and the New England spirit could never stand such carelessness. "But this shall never happen again," said she. "Never! When the next servant comes I'll have them fixed so she can't mix them." In 1897, the Michigan school census showed that there were 697,680 persons of school age in the state and yet the total enrollment of all the Sunday schools of the state is 371,000. It is evident that there is a large mission field for our Sunday school workers.

The fact that Mr. Wedemeyer came within five votes of a nomination and held his forces there for so long a time gives some idea of the kind of a congressional fight he could have put up. Among all the pirates who have figured in history, legend or song there is one whose name stands pre-eminent in America as the typical hero of the dreaded black flag. The name of this man will instantly come to the mind of almost every reader, for when we speak of pirates we usually think of Captain

In fact, newsver, Captain Kidd was not a typical pirate, for in many ways he was different from the ordinary marine freebooter, especially when we consider him in relation to our own coun try. All other pirates who made them selves notorious on our coast were known as robbers, pillagers and ruthless destroyers of life and property, but Captain Kidd's fame was of another kind. We do not think of him as a pirate who came to carry away the property of American citizens, for nearly all the stories about him relate to his arrival at different points on our shores for the sole purpose of hiding the rich treasures which he had collected in other parts of the world.

This could not fail to make Captain ding, Veranda and Lawn Goods. Kidd a most interesting personage, and the result has been that he has been lifted into the region of legendary romance. There are two Captain Kiddsthe Kidd of song and story, and the other the Kidd of fact.-Frank R. Stockton in St. Nicholas.

Lassoing Pork en Route.

From the New Orleans Times-Democrat: "We are a pig short in Mississippi City," protested a resident there yesterday, "and we want to know if Uncle Sam is going to pony up or the Arizona packer who yanked it aboard the train Saturday when it slowed up. Everybody about the town had turned out to see the soldiers, as we thought they were, go by, and a white pig was on hand, too, to take in the sight. The train hardly stopped long enough for us to see anything, but that didn't deter a long-haired individual from the plains from swinging off, and, whirling his lariat in the air quicker than you could bat an eye, he had that poor, lonesome pig fast. It all happened in a minute, and evidently willing hands helped to jerk the pig aboard, an unwilling passenger.'

Old Things.

"'As easy as an old shoe,' is a familiar saying," said Mr. Staybolt, "and there can be no doubt that an old shoe is a mighty comfortable thing. After we have worn the new shoes, close fitting, hard and formal, how gladly we put them off, and with what joy we put on the shoes that are old and worn and familiar to the feet! Old shoes, however, are not the only things old that we like. We like an old bed, if it is not too old, but just old enough, so that while still soft and comfortable it is also shaped somewhat to the body, which it supports at every point, yield ing a degree of comfort which not the finest of beds can afford when it is new.

"But it is so with all things old, that are not too old, including old habits. We cling to them so long as they give us comfort, and we hate to change. We are creatures of habit, who would if we could follow to the end along the first comfortable rut we fall into and never look out above its sides. And it is well for us that our shoes wear out and that we have to buy new ones and wear them, that we are in various ways compelled to change, that we are rooted out now and then and set going anew."-New York Sun.

The Passion of the Hour.

Every year modern habits become more unlovely and modern sensibilities more blunted. The preservation of what is beautiful, per se, at the present time is almost always ridiculed, unless it can be shown to be joined to some profit or

The characteristic passion of the hour is greed—greed of possession, desire of acquisition and passion for ostentation. Trade has become an octopus embracing the whole world. The thirst for gain engrosses all classes. Beauty, unless it be a means of gain, is to this temper a useless, or worse than a useless, thing; it is regarded as a stumbling block and incumbrance. It is doubtful if even the power of perceiving what is beautiful has not in a great measure left a large part of the population in all countries. Spaniards Lose Heavily, but We Did Not Lose a Man.

Key West, Fla., July 25.-The United States gunboats Topeka, Annapolis, Wasp and Leyden silenced the Spanish fortifications in Nipe bay, on the northern coast of the province of Santiago de Cuba, on Thursday, and sank the Spanish gunboat Juan Jorge, which lay in the harbor. Her crew escaped in small boats under a heavy fire from the Leyden. The four ships mentioned, which had entered under orders from Rear Admiral Sampson, pounded the forts for an hour, when the Spanish flag was hauled down. The Americans did not lose a man, but the Spanish loss must have been heavy.

Shafter Thanks His Men.

Santiago, July 26.-In his address of thanks to his army General Shafter reports 230 soldiers killed and 1.284 wounded in the campaign in Cuba. The general, after briefly going over the events to date, says that all has been accomplished "through the heroic deeds of the army." That Letter from Garcia.

Santiago de Cuba, July 25.-It now turns out that the letter alleged to have been addressed by General Garcia to General Shafter complaining of the treatment accorded the Cubans and advising General Shafter of General Garcia's resignation was prepared by a newspaper correspondent named Arms, who has been acting on the staff of General Castillo. It is not clear that General Garcia ever saw the letter.

War Department Officials Not Much Alarmed Over the Dispatch, Although They Have Received No Word Direct from the General-Cable from St Thomas Shows That Miles Had Succeed ed in Landing a Part of His Force.

Charlotte Amalie, St. Thomas, D. W. I., July 26.-General Miles' troopships arrived off Ponce on the southern coas of Porto Rico and the work of effecting a landing was begun. General Miles took with him from Guantanamo, when he sailed on Thursday last, Batteries ( and F of the Third artillery, B and F of the Fourth, and B of the Fifth, the Sixth Illinois, the Sixth Massachusetts the Seventh hospital corps, 275 recruits who had been sent to Shafter, but had not landed at Santiago, and sixty men from the signal corps, a total of 3,413

Washington, July 27 .- War department officials are not much alarmed over the Madrid dispatch, which says the attempt of General Miles to land part of his expedition at Bahia Honda was repulsed. Best Harbor on the Coast.

Bahia Honda, a little westward of the south point of Puerca island, is one of the best harbors on the east coast of Porto Rico. It is about a mile in extent and open to the southward, being protected by reefs, which contract the channel from a mile to one-tenth of a mile in breadth. The eastern side o the bay terminates to the southward in a low, sharp point; the west side in a bold headline, crowned by a little hill, near which, on a reef, a dry dock is sit uated. The Cabras, two small, flat in lets, hug this reef. The interior of the bay is skirted by a reef, patches of which lie under thirteen feet of water. These, however, are easily seen. In the harbor there is a depth of from five to eight fathoms, but as the anchorage is quite limited in extent, large vessels are compelled to lie outside in deeper water While the harbor facilities are excellent, there is no landing place at which troops could debark easily.

Said to Have Landed at Ponce. A cable from St. Thomas, D. W. I. dated July 25, shows that General Miles has succeeded in placing part of the expedition in Porto Rico soil, near Ponce, which is on the south shore and from which point a railroad extends to Coamo, which is in the direction of San Juan, the capital, which lies on the north shore. A further dispatch from Turks island says the British schooner Zeta, which arrived there Monday from Jamaica, reports having seen on last Friday fourteen ships of the United States expediion to Porto Rico. The Zeta was fired upon by the Dixie and was allowed to proceed after an officer from the Dixie had inspected her. Adjutant General Corbin says the department has had no word from General Miles, but he does not believe that the troops have landed near Ponce. General Corbin says he does not believe the brief press dispatch furnished the morning papers.

Meeting of the Cabinet.

When the cabinet assembled at 11 o'clock Secretaries Alger and Long both announced that they had received no dispatches from the Porto Rico expedition. Secretary Alger especially was expecting to hear from General Miles and was much disappointed that no word had come from him as to his landing, reports of which had been transmitted to him through press dispatches Secretary Long was also keenly expectant of advices from that quarter. Referring to the expedition of Commodore Watson to the Spanish coast, Secretary Long said there was nothing new with regard to that project. surely going, is it not?" he was asked "It is waiting orders from the president," was the reply. The sufferings of pellagra are those well known in times of famine. The effects sometimes do not entirely disappear. A woman of my acquaintance near Monza, who had the pellagra some years before, was considered cured. She was the wife of a prosperous shopkeeper when I knew her. The World's Population.

Hubner's statistical and geographical tables, as a result of the latest investigations, give the population of the world at 1,535,000,000. This is an increase over the figures of 1896 of 23,-000,000. To this increase Europe is credited with contributing 5,700,000; Asia, 6,200,000; Africa, 7,500,000; America, 3,200,000. The United States, with its great growth, estimated by this authority at 2,800,000, and its present population placed at 72,300,000, represents more than 53 per cent of entire population of North and South America-a circumstance adduced as highly significant, and occurring in no other parts of the earth. The population of Europe was increased to 378,600,000, which is about a quarter of the entire population of the earth.

An Eminent New York Chemist and Scientist American Troops Which Are Now in Cuba.

Until Every Vestige of the Terrible Disease Is Thoroughly Stamped Out.

Washington, July 25 .- To the question 'What is to be done with General Shafter's Fifth corps, now at Santiago?" the heads of the war administration can find but one answer. That is to keep it in Cuba until every vestige of yellow fever is stamped out of it. It can be stated positively and upon the highest possible authority that there is no intention of bringing the troops back to this country at the present time. The authorities here believe that it would be dangerous and criminal to run the risk of spreading the fever broadcast throughout this country by bringing the men back here so long as the pest is among them, and it is agreed that the, best place to fight the disease is right where they now are.

Best Place to Fight It. Adjutant General Corbin, when asked what it was proposed to do with the Santiago army, said: "What can we do but leave the troops there until they are free from the fever? We can't fight it anywhere else as well as there. Undertake to bring them back to this country now and it would infect every transport we have, and if we brought them back, where would we land them? There is no city on the coast that would not rise up in arms at the very suggestion of landing a fever-infected army within its limits Besides, there is no reason to believe that a removal at this time would be of advantage to the men themselves. terrible was his mistake. It does not do is to fight the fever on its own need now that a man should curse the ground, and until it is driven out of the army it would be madness to bring

Must Remain in Cuba. The administration would welcome nothing more cordially than the opportunity of bringing the men who fought so bravely at Santiago back home and his sneers, or by looking backward, or giving them the best camp to be had in the most salubrious climate the country affords, but it is their conclusion that for the present at least, and so long as the fever rages, the Fifth corps will have to be kept where it is. THE POET AND THE CHILDREN.

With a glory of winter sunshine Over his locks of gray, In the old historic mansion He sat on his last birthday.

With his books and his pleasant pictures
And his household and his kin, While a sound as of myriads singing From far and near stole in.

It came from his own fair city, From the prairie's boundless plain, rom the Golden Gate of sunset And the cedarn woods of Maine

And his heart grew warm within him, And his moistening eyes grew dim, For he knew that his country's children Were singing the songs of him.

The lays of his life's glad morning, The psalms of his evening time, Whose echoes shall float forever On the winds of every clime

All their beautiful consolations, Sent forth like birds of cheer, Came flocking back to his windows And sang in the poet's ear.

Grateful, but solemn and tender. The music rose and fell, With a joy akin to sadness And a greeting like farewell.

With a sense of awe he listened To the voices sweet and young.

The last of earth and the first of heaven Seemed in the songs they sung.

And waiting a little longer For the wonderful change to come, He heard the summoning angel Who calls God's children home!

And to him in a holier welcome Was the mystical meaning given

AN ABDUCTION.

In the absence of Jules, Mme. Champonnet's one female domestic, Melanie, serving in this bourgeois household in the double capacity of cook and chambermaid, opened the door to Raoul de Malplaquet and ushered him into the

"My mistress," she said, "will be down in a minute."

A minute? Yes, but such a minute as one only experiences in hairdressers' or barbers' shops, and which enabled Raoul to completely inventory the furniture of the room in which he found himself while the hands of the clock were making the round of the dial.

On the stroke of the half hour, in fact, Mme. Champonnet appeared, hot, flushed, breathless with the speed of the toilet she had made.

"Your pardon, monsieur, for keeping you so long; also, as I do not know you der has been sent to General Shafter at all, for asking you the object of your Raoul rose to his feet.

"With love-I confess it!" "But no, no, I tell you. Your proposition is simply preposterous." "But reasonable, all the same, madame, since I simply loathe conventionality and seek my happiness in an individual way. I love your daughter. I prove it by wishing to abduct her. If she on her part permits herself to be abducted, it establishes beyond cavil landed. Quarantine for yellow fever is her profound love for me. We become strict. 'But Georgette herself-she will never consent, monsieur. Abduct a girl Comtesse de Malplaquet! Two hundred thousand francs a year!

Mme. Champonnet began to soften. "But wait, but wait; you go too fast, monsieur," said she. "You spring up in my way like a Jack in the box! Your credentials, your references, please; for, after all, understand, I do not know you.

"Credentials? Certainly, madame; a perfectly proper precaution. My notary, Maitre Pitou, 18 Rue Bonjard, will put you au courant of my entire history. "And Georgette-she does not know you, monsieur." "Wrong again, madame. I saw her at the vaudeville some days ago, and she responded to the ardor of my gaze Denver Times.

with a sympathetic blush. Ask her, madame, ask her if I may abduct her. I desire no more.

"Well, so be it, monsieur. I have only the interest of my child at heart. Six days from today, then, return for vour answer.'

"Six days from today, madame." Raoul bowed and departed.

Raoul, Comte de Malplaquet, had really been, up to this hour—so Maitre Pitou, 18 Rue Bonjard, said, whose income was large from his care of the comte's estate, and larger still from his care of his morals, according; that is, to the report he gave of them-a young man of the steadiest habits, wholly ignorant of the taste of absinth-in his bitters, at least—his fortune a reality; briefly, a rara avis in the matrimonial

It was only this crazy abduction scheme of his that worried good Mme. Champonnet, with her old fashioned way of regarding things. Still, after all, it was merely a pretense, the foolish notion of a romantic lover, a mock abduction, in truth, since she, forewarned of it, was an accomplice in it.

Then the title of comtesse and 20,000 francs a year falling to the lot of a descendant of the hardware trade certainly merited some little concession in the way of maternal scruples.

She decided to lay the whole matter before Georgette.

"Abduct me," cried she, "like a real Lochinvar! Why, mother, how charming! "And you are sure, you are sure, Georgette," the mother continued, determined to do her whole duty to her child, "that you have observed this gentleman sufficiently to be certain that he will be agreeable to you?"

"Observed him sufficiently when he has followed me like my shadow every day for a month past!"

Naturally, therefore, when Raoul arrived promptly to the moment at the appointed hour there remained only the preliminaries to settle for the affair. "Which will take place, madame,"

Raoul concluded, "on Friday next at the midnight hour"-"The hour of crime!"

"For me the hour of happiness. On Friday, then, I say, at 11:30 p. m., I stop under your window. The sound of a mandolin played by me will be the signal. The dead latch will be up, and you will be sleeping-like the dead, madame. Georgette will descend; we spring to the carriage; I'll have it in waiting; gallop to the station, jump aboard the rapide, and next day find ourselves the leading article in the morning papers. You, by noon, will be interviewed by all the reporters of the city, visited and condoled with by all your enemies, and a day or two later will receive from us a letter detailing our happiness. Now, as I have still many things to do before my departure, I bid you au revoir."

"Without seeing Georgette?" "To see a girl I am going to abduct would be improper, madame.

And Raoul, the case won, withdrew. On Friday, then, at midnight, the abduction, as arranged, came off, Mme. Champonnet, even by a happy forethought and an eager desire to increase the comfort of the affair, having dispatched, secretly, of course, to Raoul's address a trunk containing Georgette's handsomest and thinnest clothing. It was always so hot in Spain!

A Florida Frost.

Far on in March, when the thermometer had long been in the eighties, says F. Whitmore in The Atlantic, the wind whipped suddenly into the north and the air cooled 50 degrees in a night.

We were in the field perspiring in linens when the change came, with an abrupt overcasting of the sky. A whiff like the breath from a glacier struck us, the wind blew each moment keener, and before we fairly saw how it was our teeth were chattering. It seemed unbelievable, but presently there was no doubt that a January norther was upon us two months out of season. When we realized this, we set all hands at work to earth over the half grown potato vines. Only a few hours of the day were left, but the men worked desperately with hoes and plows through the bleak twilight, and much was done, but not all. When we came out, shivering, in short harvest was to be lamentably shortened.

We perceived now at last how it was with us. We were not farming, but gambling with the elements. The climate had been merely toying with us, a trump card of spring frosts lying in its Bicycle Shoe Clerk Loses a Customer. A Denver shoe store recently employed a young man for clerk who had been cient; my income, alone, 200,000 francs in the bicycle business so long that he was an enthusiast. A young lady called at the store for a pair of shoes.

"I want a pair of shoes," she remarked demurely. "What gear?" he inquired, bowing.

"Sir!"

"I meant what size." "About 21/2.

"What model-er, what last?"

"A C last, I think." "Do you like the high sad—the high heels?'

"Just medium." He got the shoe she seemed to want, and after fitting it carefully remarked absentmindedly: "You can wear loose bloomers with that frame, and it will never puncture.

HOME MIXED FERTILIZER.

Items From the Ohio Station About Fertilizing Materials and Their Cost.

For several years the Ohio station has been using a mixture of equal parts of tankage and acid phosphate, with a small addition of muriate of potash (200 Hon. W. A. MacCorkle, Ex-Gov. of West pounds to the ton), with most satisfactory results, but in order to make a more direct comparison of this mixture with factory mixtures the station began a year ago a comparative experiment in which four brands of factory mixed fertilizers, bought direct from four of the oldest fertilizer manufacturing firms in the state, are being used side by side with four home mixtures, made from the materials named, in such a way as to give approximately equal percentages of ammonia, total and available phosphoric acid and potash in the home mixtures to those claimed in the factory mixed brands.

The general outcome of this test to date is that home mixtures of similar chemical composition, made from the materials named, have given an equal increase of crop when used on corn with standard brands of factory mixed fertilizers, and at a reduction of more than 40 per cent in cost.

Acid phosphate is the basis of the phosphoric acid in practically all factory mixed fertilizers. It is a fossil bone, found in South Carolina, Florida and Tennessee, which is ground to a fine powder and mixed with sulphuric acid in order to make its phosphoric acid more easily soluble. The northern markets are supplied chiefly from Baltimore, where it may be bought at prices ranging from $10 per ton for single sack lots down to $7.50 per ton in carloads in bulk for a grade analyzing 14 per cent soluble phosphoric acid. In the experiments made at the Ohio experiment station a pound of available phosphoric acid in acid phosphate has apparently been as effective as a pound of phosphoric acid in bone.

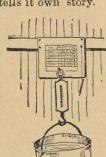

Tankage is made at all the great slaughter houses. It contains both phosphoric acid and ammonia and is variable in quality. Different grades are classed as 6 and 35, 7 and 30, 8 and 20, 9 and 20, etc., meaning that they contain 6 per cent ammonia and 35 per cent bone phosphate or 7 per cent ammonia and 30 per cent bone phosphate, etc., the term bone phosphate meaning that combination of phosphoric acid and lime which is found in bone and of BREAD, CRACKERS, CAKES, &c. which about 46 per cent is phosphoric acid. The lower grades shade off below into raw bone, which might be called a 5 and 50 tankage, and above into dried blood, which contains 10 to 14 per cent ammonia with 2 or 3 per cent or only a trace of phosphoric acid. A 7 and 30 tankage has been sold in Cleveland for several years at the uniform price of $17 per ton in single sacks or carloads. The latest quotations in Chicago range from $12.50 per ton for 6 and 35 tankage up to $15.50 for 9 and 20 tankage, this being the standard grade. Muriate of potash is a product of the Stassfurt mines in Germany, and its sale is controlled by a German syndicate. It may be bought in New York or Cleveland at about 2 to 21/4 cents per pound. Both acid phosphate and tankage are fine, dry meals, in perfect condition to be used in the fertilizer drill, and mixing them does not alter their condition. Muriate of potash resembles common salt in appearance, except that it is usually somewhat yellowish in color. In its commercial condition it is

News and Notes.

It has been held that a mean temperature of 70 degrees F. for the summer the first daybreak, we saw that our months, June, July and August (combined), is conducive to the best development of the sugar beet, provided there is also adequate rainfall.

> According to a recent report of the agricultural department on the sugar beet industry, there were last year nine sugar beet factories, only one of which is located east of Nebraska. It is expected that this year there will be 17 factories in operation.

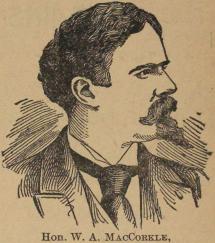

An exchange quotes statistics of the department of agriculture to the effect that the farmers of the United States received from their cereal crops of 1897 something like $130,000,000 more than for those of 1896 and $80,000,000 more than for those of any preceding year since 1892.

J. H. Hale is credited by an exchange with the statement that the native seedling apple, budded or grafted right where the seed sprouted, so that the stock has the original taproot and all others uninjured, does make a longer lived and more healthy tree than one transplanted from the nursery.

A man who has made money with brussels sprouts says they do best on the lightest sandy soil. The seeds should be sown about the middle of June, and the plants transplanted twice before being put where they are to remain.

The Journey of Life.

The whole journey of life is best divided into three stages—the period of Carl Roe, of Champlain, Ill, has ascent or youth (1-25), that of level ground or maturity (25-50), and that of descent or decline (50-75). Old age may set in anywhere along the last stage. It must not, however, be supposed that the last stage necessarily ends at 75; for, of the late years, especially, in many cases, the period of old age has not begun until years are past, life being prolonged over the century; Prof and Mrs Blakesley, of the Lans- while on the other hand, all the signs ing School for the Blind, are visiting of old age before twenty years have
