

Closing and Opening of Mails.

Mails leaving Ann Arbor, East and West, will close as follows: GOING WEST. 8:30 a. m. Through and Way Mail 10:50 a. m. and 6:50 p. m. Way Mail between Ann Arbor and Jackson and Chicago and beyond. 7:30 p. m. CHICAGO AND BEYOND. 8:30 a. m. Detroit and Chicago. 8:30 a. m. Through and Way Mail. 10:50 a. m. and 6:50 p. m. Eastern Mail distributed at 8 and 10 a. m., 12 m. and 6:30 p. m. Western Mail distributed at 8 a. m. Chicago Mail distributed at 8:30 p. m. Jackson Mail and Way Mail between Jackson and Ann Arbor distributed at 11 a. m. Mail by Toledo Railroad closes at 11:30 a. m. Toledo Railroad Mail distributed at 8:30 a. m., except Saturday evening, when it is distributed before the office closes. The mail to W. L. Moore, Lake, Webster and Brighton leaves Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 8 a. m., and is received from these places Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at four o'clock p. m. CHAS. G. CLARK, P. M.

Travelers' Guide.

Trains arrive and depart from the Michigan Central Depot in this city as follows: TRAINS EAST. Atlantic Express. 2:05 a. m. Night Express. 8:35 a. m. Grand Rapids Express. 10:35 a. m. Day Express. 1:40 p. m. TRAINS WEST. Mail. 8:30 a. m. Day Express. 11:00 a. m. Grand Rapids Express. 7:35 p. m. Pacific Express. 7:55 p. m. Evening Express. 11:30 p. m. All trains are run by Chicago time, which is fifteen minutes slower than Ann Arbor time.

Friends of The Courier, who have business at the Probate Court, will please request Judge Hartman to send their printing to this office.

LOCAL.

The Congregational church, at Augusta, is being thoroughly repaired.

A change is to take place on May 10 in the time-table of the M. C. R. R.

Judge Cheever is to address the reform club at the opera house next Sunday.

Co. A had a target shoot on Wednesday, but we have been unable to obtain the score.

The Hon. Edwin Willits will accept the thanks of the COURIER for valuable public documents.

R. E. Frazer, Esq., spoke at Delhi last Sunday evening and secured 12 signers to the pledge.

Don't forget the entertainment to-night at the opera house, for the benefit of the reform club.

One of the rooms under the Chandler house is to be opened up by a sewing machine agency.

A student of the medical department, rooming over Dr. Frothingham's office, has the scarlet fever.

Eighteen new members united with the Unitarian church, Sabbath of last week, instead of thirteen.

The wood-work in the court house has received a fresh coat of oil, much to its better appearance.

The April showing which greeted us last Sabbath morning had a large quantity of hail mixed with it.

Vanderford & Werner are to have a billiard tournament next week at their rooms for a champion cue.

Gillie S. Kirk has been appointed quartermaster of Co. A, in place of J. Berolzheimer, left the city.

The Democratic county convention, to elect 18 delegates to the State convention, will be held in this city May 27th.

The drug store of Emanuel Mann has been removed to the old city arcade building, and he now has a fine, neat store.

Mr. D. F. Schairer supplied some 700 ladies with Japanese parasols at the opening of his store last week; all gratis.

J. A. Polhemus being the lowest bidder, will carry the mails from the post office in this city to the depot for the coming year.

About $34 was the net receipts of Gen. Cary's lecture last Friday night, to be divided between the reform club and city band.

M. D. L. Branch has removed his store from the post office block to the store on Main street, recently occupied by Emanuel Mann.

It is altogether probable that the fair to Chicago will be reduced to $5.00 for the round trip during the coming national convention.

A collection taken at the M. E. church, Sabbath before last, in aid of pioneer Methodism in northern Michigan, netted $92.00.

At the M. E. church, next Sunday evening, Rev. J. Alabaster will speak upon the subject, "What shall a young man do with his doubts?"

The COURIER office under the painter's brush, is fast assuming the appearance of a new building. It is being entirely repainted and the brick work nicely penciled.

Several members of the Ann Arbor reform club went to Saline last Sabbath to hear Gen. Cary, who had a crowded house there both Saturday and Sunday evenings.

The circuit court adjourned last Wednesday, after having been in session since Tuesday, March 16th. Several old chancery cases of long standing, have been disposed of.

Rev. W. R. Alger, of Boston, Mass., preached morning and evening at the Unitarian church, last Sabbath, both discourses being spoken of in terms of the greatest praise.

Mrs. Jefferson Warner, a resident of this city and county for 41 years, died of pneumonia, on Thursday last week, at the age of 64 years.

Last Wednesday afternoon engine No. 136 bound east on the M. C. R. R., had 39 white refrigerators, "in tow," said to have been loaded with beef for England.

A meeting of the ladies' library association is to be held in the parlor of the Presbyterian church to-morrow, Saturday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, to consult upon the purchase of a lot.

Burglars entered the home of Louis Schlieher, near the M. C. R. R. depot, last Saturday night, cut out the bottom of his till and secured $6.00 in money, a revolver, pipes, etc.

Mrs. Julia A. Randall, sister of the late Norman and Volney Chapin of this city, died on the 20th inst., aged 73 years, 9 months and 12 days, at the residence of S. O. Tubbs, in Scio.

One of the nicest invoices of wedding stationery, invitation paper and envelopes, and visiting cards in most elegant designs, which has ever been received at this office, is now in stock and for sale. Ladies desiring calling cards in the latest and most fashionable designs, are especially invited to inspect our stock.

"Society notes" of the Sunday Detroit Post and Tribune says that Miss Allie McLean, of Ann Arbor, is to be married in May to Throp Morley, of Marine City, a graduate of the university, class of '78.

"A student" writes that a chair of pigeon shooting has been established at the University of Michigan. "Don't believe it!" - Detroit Evening News.

Quite right in your belief. It was not a chair established at all, but a stool-pigeon disestablished, so to speak. "Alle samee."

Rev. Joseph Cook, of Boston, Mass., will probably need merely the announcement that he is to lecture, Friday evening of next week, to fill university hall. He comes under the auspices of the students' christian association.

Mrs. Sallie Woodruff, the mother of Thos. M. Woodruff, both formerly of this city, died in Reed, Seneca county, Ohio, Saturday, the 17th, of paralysis, aged 83 years. Her remains were brought here for interment Monday last.

The Dodge City Times of April 17th, has the following in reference to the former agent of the Michigan Central railroad at this place: "Mr. G. W. Sharpless, formerly agent of the Denver & Rio Grande at Colorado Springs, will be agent of the Santa Fe, at Albuquerque."

The old saying that "When Christmas on a Thursday be, a windy season will ye see," has proven a very correct one so far this year. The wind runs riot most of the time, perfectly regardless of gentlemen's chapeaux or ladies' raiment, and making it difficult for pedestrians to travel.

Lightning struck the residence of Alonzo Healey, in the 2d ward, cor. of Catharine and Second streets, last Sunday morning. It went down through the kitchen, giving the cat and dog a close call for their lives, and prostrated Mrs. Healey who was sitting by the window. No further damage.

Complaints are being made by parties interested that the new manager of the D. H. & S. W. and T. A. & N. R. R.'s is building up the business of the former at the expense of the latter. How true this charge of "robbing Peter to pay Paul" is, we are not prepared to present to state.

Bishop Borgess administered the sacrament of confirmation upon over fifty candidates at St. Thomas' Catholic church, in this city, last Monday morning, services commencing at 10 o'clock a. m. In the afternoon the Bishop administered confirmation upon several applicants at Northfield.

A change has been made in the original plan for the new Baptist church on Huron street, and the structure will be of stone instead of brick. To outward appearances, if not in economy also, the change will be a grateful one. The building committee think about $1,000 will be saved by the alteration of plans.

The preserving rascals who make their living by swindling farmers, are already on the war-path as consuls takers. They get a farmer to sign what he supposes to be a statement of his property, products, etc., which signature in a few days turns up as a promissory note. Look out for them. No census takers will be around until next June.

Two suits against saloon keepers of the city for selling liquor to a person while intoxicated have been tried before Justice Granger, on complaint of A. Diable, of Lodi. The first against Chris. Sansi, resulted in a verdict of $25 and costs—which was appealed—and the second against Geo. F. Lutz, the jury failed to agree, and the case postponed until to-day at ten o'clock.

One great evidence of prosperity in a city is the demand for houses. Ann Arbor has hardly a vacant house within her borders, at least in a convenient location, and if any one doubts our word, just let him hunt for one, as the writer had to this spring. In our exchanges from different portions of the state, we notice a demand in many of them for more residences. This denotes prosperity.

With the return of summer do not forget sanitary matters. Have your premises thoroughly cleaned, sprinkle all ceilings freely with lime, and see that the drainage about your residence or place of business is good. Remember that pure drinking water is necessary to good health. Let everybody pay attention to these matters, and the general salubrity of our community will be greatly increased. "An ounce of prevention, etc."

After the walls of Ludwig Walz' new building on Liberty street had been completed to the roof, it was ascertained by the cracking of the same, and leaning toward the west, that the foundation was not sufficiently firm, and now the process of taking down has commenced. Mr. Walz says that it will have to be taken down and rebuilt from the foundation, which will entail the loss of much time and considerable money.

Have we no pine forests in Michigan, that the state has to import and pay for four carloads of pine lumber from Alabama for the new university museum at Ann Arbor? - Lansing Republican.

Yes, there are undoubtedly plenty of pine forests in this state, but then, you know there is a certain quality of excellence always added to a commodity which comes from a distance. But seriously, it is generally conceded that the pitch pine from the southern states is far superior to our white pine for flooring purposes.

Tuesday evening the fire department was called out by another attempt to fire the end of the old Presbyterian church in which John G. Gall's meat market is located. The flames were extinguished by a few pails of water. But for the timely discovery the building would have soon been in flames, and much valuable property endangered. What can be the motive for the persistent attempts to burn the property in this vicinity, is a mystery as great as that of river Raisin notoriety.

A horse and carriage came down Huron street from State last Tuesday evening at a pace which equaled Parole's best time. After circling around the square, the lady in the carriage—who had two children with her—succeeded in stopping the horse, by the aid of the outside multitude. The running was caused by the slipping of the bride from the horse's head. This occurred on Thayer street, and the self-possession of the lady driver probably saved herself and children from serious, if not fatal injuries.

A certain window in a house in East Saginaw is reported to have in it a pane of glass on which is indelibly stamped the impress of a human hand, which it is said neither soap, water, knives, chemicals, or any other agency has as yet been able to remove. The writer of this is troubled in the same way at his house but more especially with the door knobs. In fact, most any house where children are, can report the same thing. The mystery generally is how any one of the panes happens to escape such an impress.

W. W. Nichols will surely be the "boss" fruit grower of Washtenaw county in the early future. On 50 acres of ground he has 7,250 fruit trees, as follows: 3,600 peach trees; 1,500 apple trees; 500 plum trees; and 1,650 pear trees. He also has 2,000 currant and 500 gooseberry bushes. All of the above are in fine growing condition. The peach and pear trees will be in bearing this season. Mr. Nichols has spared no pains to cultivate and stimulate the growth of his fruit orchard, and will soon have the pleasure of reaping a rich harvest of wealth.

The common council is to be congratulated upon its choice of city treasurer and city attorney. Mr. Webster is a gentleman who will discharge the duties of the treasurer's office in a business-like, gentlemanly way, while Mr. J. C. Knowlton, one of our promising young attorneys, will so attend to the city's litigation that we doubt if any complaints will be entered at the end of his year of service. The reelection of Mr. John G. Johnson as city marshal by a unanimous vote, is a high compliment to that gentleman's efficiency as an officer.

County Clerk Clark and his deputy Wade, are full of business now-a-days, sending off blanks to the various supervisors, township clerks and assessors of the county. To the supervisors for the returns of births, deaths and cereal products, and to the remainder for the jurors' list, etc. The law is explicit in respect to filling out the blanks for the return of jurors, and Mr. Clark desires us to call attention to the fact that a slight deviation from the prescribed form and method will invalidate the entire panel. Consequently too much care cannot be taken in filling out the same.

This city lays claim to one of the coolest individuals under adversity inside the state. He is a boy of some 16 or 18 years, and one day last week, while standing on Huron street, totally unconscious of danger, he was assaulted by a man in a red hot manner, who followed blows from the shoulder by blows from the hip. After a lull in the chastisement allowed the boy to arise, without any show of ruffled temper or resistance, he simply remarked: "Say, when you get through, please let me know, for I should like to go about my business." It is perhaps not necessary to say he was allowed to depart.

The next social of the reform club having fallen to B. F. Watts, with characteristic promptness, and a desire to secure something in which the people would be interested, he induced the Barrett dramatic club to give their entertainment this Friday evening for the benefit of the reform club. The cast of characters will be the same as published in last week's COURIER. Mr. Watts has always been very successful in pleasing the people, and the previous rendering of the play, "Dollars and cents," was so satisfactory that it is quite certain that the present event will be no exception. Go and hear it.

That excellent paper, the Adrian Daily Times, is now issuing morning 1/4s, issued, coming on the 8:30 A. M. train on the T. A. & N. R. R. At least twenty-five subscribers should be obtained for it in this city. - A. A. Courier. The Times is an excellent paper, but as it is an evening paper, we don't understand how they can get it at Ann Arbor, unless it is sent by express to Manchester Enterprise.

We have always thought the enterprising editor of the Enterprise kept up with the age, but we see he has sadly fallen behind the times. Why, we sometimes receive even New York papers two weeks previous to date, and the leading magazines a full month ahead. "It isn't no great shakes" to receive a daily a few hours ahead, as advance sheets are quite frequently exchanged by prominent newspapers.

The following scholars of the high school have been selected to speak at the commencement exercises in June: Mattie V. Barry, Ann Arbor; Willis S. Knowlton, Ann Arbor; Harry Binner, Mount Carroll, Ill.; J. A. Case, Auburn, Ind.; Charlie Cooley, Ann Arbor; R. M. Dett, Anamosa, Iowa; Mary Farnsworth, Ann Arbor; Lulu M. Gott, Ann Arbor; Emily D. Stobbs, Ann Arbor; Belle Hull, Hamburg; Frank C. Wagner, Ann Arbor; Bessie Hunt, Ann Arbor; E. R. Wagner, Ann Arbor; Clemmie Houghton, Ann Arbor; E. C. Williams, Glidden, Iowa; Mary Hendrickson, Ann Arbor; Jessie Wood, Ann Arbor; Addie M. Knight, Ann Arbor.

The streets were well filled last Saturday evening to listen to the Ann Arbor city band, which played upon the south balcony of the court house. But few cities in the world have so fine a place for open air ball-stone concerts as this one, and we doubt not many concerts by a little encouragement from our citizens, would be willing to give one or two concerts a week. If they can receive reasonable assistance from the people of the city, sufficient to keep up the organization, their ability to take rank made indicates their spirit in a little time. It is to none in the state in a little time. It is quite certain Ann Arbor would feel proud of a good organization of this kind.

The same party who executed a bird's eye view of this city thirteen years ago, J. Stoner, of Madison, Wis., is to publish another view of the city of the same general style, yet of much better workmanship. We have been shown the pencil sketch, drawn by A. Ruger, which is taken from the fair grounds, looking northwest, and shows every building in the corporate limits. In comparing with the former publication one gets an excellent idea of the growth of the city. It will be found that while the extent of territory is perhaps no greater, the number of buildings have increased wonderfully. We bespeak for the agent, Mr. J. Warner, a cordial reception by the people of the city in his work.

A very small but unusually refined audience gathered to hear Anna Dickinson read her play "Aurelian," Wednesday evening. Having been an ardent admirer of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is somewhat difficult for us to realize the difference between our expectation and the realization. While making no pretensions to dramatic criticism, yet we certainly believe that the stage is not her forte. The tragic, masculine, and forcible passages she renders in an excellent manner, but the soft, tender, pathetic parts it is as impossible for her to properly express as it would be for the eagle to imitate the cooing of the dove. A change, also, has taken place in her style and person, and the plain, elegant Anna Dickinson whom we remember several years ago, telling in inspiring language the story of this lady as a lecturer, it is

