Gen. Weaver, the greenback presidential nominee, has come out with a vigorous letter, appealing to his party to stand firm and free from any unholy alliance with the old parties...

That letter of Gen. Hancock's respecting rebel claims, reads very nicely. It is in fact faultless in grammatical construction, and in orthography would doubtless pass the critical eye of Richard Grant White...

We read of a great many deeds of violence in the papers of to-day, but the meanest, most despicable, and cowardly murderer is the one who steps up to a defenseless woman and puts her out of existence...

In both instances the women were young, respectable, and innocent of any crime or evil deed. One had to lose her life because she could not marry a man she did not care for...
