Among the latest discoveries in American mineralogy is a gemstone heretofore wholly unknown to scientific men. It is an emerald of the green variety of spodumene, a mineral consisting chiefly of silica, alumina and lithia.

The crystals are of different shapes and sizes, and bear a strong resemblance to the ordinary emerald. Some of the gems have been cut and set and are valued at from $40 to $100 a carat.

The mine is now only 31 feet deep, with a tunnel 261 feet long for drainage to a neighboring creek. The vein in which most of the crystals have been found is only about three inches wide and two feet long.

The largest piece of the new stone yet obtained weighs 5 1/2 carats. The color varies from light to deep emerald green.

The prismatic cleavage is perfect, and the surfaces are of the highest luster, some of the specimens being even more brilliant than the emerald. One of the gems, weighing 3 1/2 carats, has been purchased for the British Museum.

Michigan University.

From the Presbyterian, Nov. 19. The great University of the Interior, located at Ann Arbor, with its fifteen hundred students and its corps of instructors, came in for some special attention at the synod of Michigan, at Ionia.

The subject was introduced under the discussion awakened by the report on education, which was a very timely and earnest paper. Dr. Poor was present, and gave one of his keen, racy addresses, which makes him a most welcome visitor to our educational gatherings.

Among other points on which he touched was that of the small number of candidates for the ministry from this section of the church, and the need of a more liberal and practical education for the young men of the West.

Very much has been said on this subject, and the impression is in some quarters cultivated that things are not as they should be at this important center of culture. But we are persuaded that there is a great need of a more liberal and practical education for the young men of the West.

The church going habits of the students are not creditable. To our regret, we are persuaded that there is a great need of a more liberal and practical education for the young men of the West.

Whatever impressions differing from these statements may have gained currency throughout the State, we are persuaded are erroneous, for we have derived from our personal knowledge upon the subject that the prevailing sentiment of the City of Ann Arbor and the University of Michigan is strongly in favor of the appointment of a committee to visit the State, to inquire into the state of religious work among the students, see what can be done to care for the spiritual welfare of the young men of the West.

Dr. Herick Johnson has recently visited Ann Arbor to deliver the annual address before the Michigan Association of the University. In the morning he preached in the Presbyterian church, and in the evening in the large University Hall.

Both sermons were largely attended, and the doctor gave two discourses, timely, earnest and powerful that will long be remembered. The trumpet that he gave no uncertain sound to the students and places in our several libraries, or even half of that number, they would do good service.

In spite of the cold and storm some forty guests assembled, nearly all bringing some kind of wooden ware or utensil. The presents were all appropriate to the occasion, and ranged from a Chinese fork and spoon to an elegant lamp stand. The latter being the gift of several young ladies. After an evening of social enjoyment suited by speech-making and fashionable ceremonies and after partaking of an excellent repast, the guests at a late hour took their leave with hearty wishes for the happiness of the worthy couple.

Taking into consideration the condition of the weather last Friday night, a good sized audience assembled in University Hall to listen to the eloquent oration of Hon. Geo. R. Wendling. For nearly two hours the audience was held in wrapped attention. As a plea for Christianity we have never heard one so forcible. While the speaker gave Voltaire credit for all his literary ability, his style and originality, he showed very plainly that his influence so far as "crushing the infamous" was concerned was not felt at all. The influence of Christianity was continually increasing. The progressive thought idea was well answered. Thus far the Lecture Association has met with the best of success, and as long as they furnish such entertainments as we have had this year, and such orators as Mr. Wendling, it deserves the patronage of every citizen and student in Ann Arbor.

Friday morning of last week, a little after 12 o'clock, an alarm of fire was given, but failed to call out as large a crowd as usual. The seat of the fire was found to be an inner closet on the second floor of the building known as Brown's drug store. The fire company turned out and had the new engine around in position on very short notice. Then from half to three-quarters of an hour was spent in building a fire and getting up steam—all of which ought to have been done inside of ten minutes. The hand-engine did good work, and considerable property was destroyed by water before the flames could be checked. $700 will probably cover the amount of damage done. Had the fire reached the chemicals in the lower rooms, nothing could have saved the building. The steam fire engine could do good work if some one that understood how to run it had charge of it.

On Tuesday evening last, about 7:15 o'clock, Franklin Tate in company with Frederick Cross went down to the Huron river to spear fish by torch light. They were on the river for about two hours. Mr. Tate doing the rowing. About 10 o'clock they separated at the foot of Fifth street, each one going his own way home. At 11:15 o'clock a gentleman going along the street across from the freight house saw some object lying near the walk by that building. After procuring a lantern he found it to be the body of Mr. Tate. He was lying on his back with his vest open and still holding a string of fish in his left hand. The verdict of the coroner's jury was that the deceased came to his death from a heart attack, death being caused by congestion of the lungs. The deceased was 74 years old. One son absent in the South on a conductor's excursion sent word that he would be here on Friday. The funeral will be held from the house Saturday at 11 a. m., Rev. John Alabaster officiating.

Comparing the week ending Nov. 12, with the preceding week, there has been a considerable increase in the area of prevalence of diphtheria, and a considerable decrease in that of diarrhoea and remittent fever. Judging from past experience diarrhoea has now reached about its least prevalence, but remittent fever may be expected to still further decline during the next three months.

Special reports have been received of small-pox at St. Joseph, Berrien county, and in Bingham and Leelanau townships, Leelanau county. The disease was brought to St. Joseph from Chicago. In Leelanau county it began with two Indians who contracted it at Traverse City while loading a vessel with wool. One case of small-pox at Albion reported November 20, 1881. Because small-pox may be brought to any locality at any time by immigrants or travelers it is prudent for all persons to seek protection by vaccination or revaccination with pure vaccine virus. Local boards of health are authorized by law to make provision for free vaccination.

THE WEDDING.
On Monday evening last, Nov. 21st, Mr. Charles A. Hendrick and Miss Edith M. Curtis were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The ceremony was performed at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Curtis, Rev. Dr. Alabaster officiating. A small party of the friends of the bride and groom were present. Everything passed off pleasantly with nothing to mar the happiness of the occasion. Many beautiful and costly presents were received. Among the most substantial were a fifty dollar bill from Mrs. W. J. Jacobs and a deed of a village lot from the bride's parents. The happy couple left on the western bound train for a short tour but we hope to see their smiling faces in our midst again soon. We sincerely wish them the greatest amount of pleasure and happiness that this world can afford.

A Surprise Party.
The house of the Hon. A. J. Sawyer was the scene of a very pleasant surprise party last Friday evening. While the family were sitting at the tea-table several ladies arrived from the depot, bringing a number of the old time friends of Mr. and Mrs. Sawyer from Chelsea. The party had been preceded by Mrs. Tichenor and Miss Maggie Sawyer who had made preparations for the unexpected guests. The persons from Chelsea consisted of the following gentlemen and their wives: Messrs. James P. Wood, R. S. Armstrong, G. W. Turnbull, James Hadler, Wm. Martin, J. L. Gilbert, J. Cronell, E. L. Nigus, Thomas Wilkinson, H. M. Woods, and Mr. O. M. Thatcher. The Hon. Edwin Willits, who happened to be in town, was sent for to make the party complete. After all had partaken of a bountiful repast provided for them Mr. Thatcher with a few appropriate remarks in behalf of the company, presented Mrs. Sawyer with a birthday present—a beautiful gold headed cane. Mrs. Sawyer was also remembered and presented with a sil-very case and snuff box. Mrs. E. L. Nigus did the presenting. The evening passed pleasantly and about nine o'clock the backs called again to take the party to the cars. The occasion will long be remembered by all who were present, and the gifts will be greatly treasured by those who were so completely surprised.

Much has been written, and much more might be said, about the changes and the improvement wrought in American art, as illustrated by the recent issue of Scribner's Magazine, and that their beauty and excellence have fully justified their publication, is gratifying testimony to the worth of the work accomplished. Some of the more notable pictures in the volume for the year last past are worthy of high praise. The full-page portrait of Gladstone, Baconfield, Dr. O'Rourke, Father Hyacinth, and the other illustrations, taken from the art of which those who have furnished them, for the good of readers may be proud. In the volume before us, Eugene Schuyler's history of "Peter the Great," Geo. W. Cable's "Madame Delphine," Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's "Aunt Phillis's Story," D. Howells's "A Fearful Responsibility," and other equally important contributions, taken from the art of which those who have furnished them, for the good of readers may be proud. AMONG OUR EXCHANGES.

Shiwassee Journal: A Mecosta woman got so mad because a locomotive came up behind her unawares and stood her on her head in a ditch, that she would let her passengers touch her, and walked home in a tit.

Charlotte Republican: According to several prophecies the world was going to go up in fire and smoke between Nov. 12, and 14. The time is up, all getting ready for it, and we are collecting subscription in advance, just the same.

Three Rivers Tribune: The business of punching a nickel or a three cent piece for the purpose of suspending it to the baby's neck as an object of diversion may be a small one, but it is not near so little as the act of rejecting that coin when presented at the counter in payment of a purchase of similar value.

Manistee Times: A few days ago, while the workmen were engaged at work around the Ranz salt well, a tremendous explosion was heard in the works of the well, and the mud and dirt were thrown clear to the top through the pipes.

Harbor Springs Republican: A harbor will admit three or four times as much dockage, and where machine shops, elevators, furnaces and mills can be erected along its shore, and where railroads can be built along the water's edge, making it one of the best ports in the world for shipping and easy transfer, is a pretty good point for live business men to keep their eye on.

Kalamazoo Telegraph: John Clendish, of White Pigeon, a swiftness in the railroad yard, had a narrow escape from death recently. His foot became fastened in a murderous frog, just as a car was upon him. By the mereest chance a bolt on the brake caught in his pantaloons, pulled his foot out of the boot and threw him out of the way of the wheels which passed over the call of his pantaloons and bruised the skin. It was a close call with one chance in a thousand of escape.

Delia Gazette: The committee on ways and means, a German, has borrowed and expended two thousand dollars—and competent civil engineers predict that the west end of the Pike street bridge abutment will fall by spring if not before. Liquor tax gone where the woadline twine, the taxes of last year's collection all gone, two thousand borrowed and gone, and debts piling up. Give us anything—but give us a change.

Wayne Co Review: In vain have we sought to divide thirty halves, quarters and dimes which have been multiplied by having holes pierced through them, for necessary articles of merchandise at their real value, and we are of the opinion that the business men have, en masse, shut down on them; therefore, we trust that our patrons will not take advantage of our difference by unwillingly purchasing our goods.

Alpena Reporter: Under the instruction of a lady friend a young lady of this city took "Arsenic" to drive away fleas from her face thinking of course the bigger she lost the sooner the fleas would leave and she accordingly took ten spoonfuls of pulverized arsenic—being an over dose she took to vomiting which saved her life. The physicians were not called in for several hours later and think her not out of danger. Old women should be careful how they prescribe for the young, and druggists should be very careful how they give Arsenic to the infant.

Allegan Tribune: Liquor-sellers are every day selling contrary to law, to patrons in the habit of getting intoxicated. Let us not be misled by the apparent honesty of the law, and summoning a person complained of for being drunk to testify of what he bought his liquor. The justice of the law is enforced quite thoroughly here, but if you don't know what you are doing, and you are not against the liquor-seller, the drunkard has no money to spend for lawyers, and if he is hurt he isn't the kind of a man to be able to sue.

Port Huron Times: A funny incident that happened near one of the saw mills in this city a few days since came near being a tragedy. Some little dogs were playing on the logs in Black river, with a number of the girls and the dog fell into the water. The girl clung to a log and called lustily, while the dog paddled about seeking its place to land. The girl, thinking of the mill behind her, called to the men and the man, considerably excited, started to do so, but first helped the dog out and took it ashore, and then went to the assistance of the girl. As the girl was not injured further than a thorough wetting the incident amused the lookers on.

Adrian Press: Hon. Brackley Shaw, of Dover, Wednesday, accompanied by his wife, started for the city in a wagon, containing some articles for the market. The wagon dropped in one of those mammoth mud holes created by the rain and upset, the wagon box turning squarely over the occupants, imprisoning them in a mud hole. We have not heard what kind of language the state senator made use of on the occasion, but it was profane, he was excusable for a worldly standpoint. Assistance arrived and the unlucky couple were extricated, but in such mud plastered order as to require a return home and a new start.

Mr. Shaw was not known to be a pronounced teetotaler, and his case would call for inquiry, as he had one or two jugs with him.

Dundee Reporter: Mr. E. Gray now has an exhibition clock that deserves more than a passing notice. A little over a year ago Mr. Gray commenced the work of building a clock for a regulator, and conceived the idea of a historical clock so arranged that an observer could see the different events that America has passed through to recover and maintain her liberty. To do this Mr. Gray has worked constantly for over a year and there is nothing about it in mechanism or design that has not been wrought out by him. The case stands eleven feet high, is four feet wide and six feet deep. The panels are of rosewood trimmed with black walnut, and two sides at the top are filled with pictures illustrating the several incidents of our struggle for liberty and how we have preserved it. The weight of the clock is six hundred pounds. What it will do, first, it will keep accurate time, and make a complete regulator; second, it shows the time of all the principal cities of the globe as compared with the time at Washington. This is done by a novel arrangement of dials on which are twenty smaller dials. The large ones revolve from west to east, and is arranged with a combination, so that one minute hand marks the minutes in all the principal cities on the dials. The middle dial at the station with hands same as an ordinary clock. On the front of time part of the clock he has five figures which strike the minutes, with another one representing Columbia to strike the quarter hours and still another for the hours. By another dial he has the figures and the proclamation, and on the other side another hand presents the declaration of independence to the view every hour, and two figures representing Union and Confederate soldiers salute them and between them a British soldier salutes all of them. In making the different figures and in arranging the case the figures and implements used represent many of the different periods of the country's progress. He also has used on one side for facing a face simile of one of the first newspapers printed by William Bradford, at Philadelphia, in 1765. The clock as a whole is a credit to Mr. Gray's skill and will well repay him for the time expended on it.

True to Her Trust: Too much cannot be said of the ever-faithful wife and mother, constantly watching and caring for her dear ones, never neglecting a duty that devolves upon her. When they are assailed by disease, and the system should have a thorough cleaning, the stomach and bowels regulated, and the malarial poison exterminated, she must know that Electric Bitters are the only sure remedy. They are the best and purest medicine in the world, and cost but a few cents. Sold by Eberbach & Son.

Kansas school teacher: "Where does our grain go to?" "To the hopper." "What hopper?" "Grasshopper" shouted a scholar triumphantly.

The best strengthener of mind and body is Brown's Iron Bitters. It is very soothing and refreshing in its effect.

Christopher Columbus.

It is becoming customary for the Italian citizens of America to celebrate the discovery of this continent by Christopher Columbus, October 12th, 1492. The anniversary of this day has been widely celebrated this year than usual. There is in Chicago a society known as the Societa Italiana, who are celebrating a rich silk and gold jubilee anniversary in McCormick's Hall on the evening of the 13th ult. Among the ceremonies of the evening was the presentation of the rich silk and gold jubilee trophy to the Italian ladies of that city to the above named society. Mrs. Annetta Baccalini made a very appropriate presentation speech from which we select the following beautiful passage showing to what extent we are indebted to a woman for the discovery of this country: "Gongol daughter of the sea, gave her son to sail in the bosom of the sea a new world, Columbus, like the dove of the patriots who found the holy land of liberty having traversed a weary and stormy three times, in this heroic stand alone and found no sympathy among men until the great and noble-minded Isabella, Queen of Spain, assisted the new enterprise with her generous help, having a great soul capable of comprehending the genius of the great discoverer. And proud are we as we are to know that a woman who had this important share in the greatest discovery of the fifteenth or any century. May the women also have a share in the admiration of the world in this heroic thirteenth century. May the Italian women share in the intelligence and educational advantages now so liberally given in this our new and beloved country."

"Ancient Italy, the Italy of the Romans, carried the victorious standard of the eagle through all the ancient world. A son of the soil, the Italian hero, Christopher Columbus, under the banner of victory upon the shores of the new world. In memory of this great man, our countryman, from whom this society has taken its name, the ladies of the Christo Columbus Club present this banner, with love for the society and the Nation. They hope it will be accepted and called forever 'Columbia.'"

Said to be Three Centuries Old.

Mr. G. W. Simpson, of Old Mackinac, brought into our office this week a relic, it is a curious combination of wrought silver, consisting of five pieces—two seals, one watch, one ring and one bracelet, all at one time must have enclosed a watch-glass. One of the seals was in comparatively good shape, and showed the original design very plainly, and the plate figures the date 1653 appeared to the native eye, or 318 years ago. On the ring, which connects the different pieces together, is the device of a dragon and the initials 'M. C.' indicating that it might at one time, possibly, have been possessed by Father Marquette, who founded the first mission at Old Mackinac over 200 years ago. The bracelet, a gentleman looking for relics inside the old fort grounds there, and from him it was purchased by F. J. Simpson. Our jewelers think that it is French work. Mr. M. C. was not once owned by Father Marquette, doubtless it must have belonged to some of the early French settlers. Still, it might have belonged to some of the inhabitants of the fort before the massacre of 1763. Quite a number of interesting relics of bygone ages have been found there recently, including a silver bracelet now in the possession of J. D. McDonald; a large silver cross by Mrs. G. W. Simpson; and about nine yards of beads woven by the French missionaries and several finger-rings and other curious trinkets.—Cheboygan Tribune.

Caught by a Bundle of Oranges.

A gentleman's destiny threw him one day, alone and unprotected, in the immediate vicinity of two artificial oranges attached to a brown chip, and the orange is a Broadway omnibus. The oranges, potent to attract and concentrate the attention of the passers-by, were powerful to compel the humbling fact that the gentleman, for some cause or another, was wanting in that most excellent thing in woman, a portemonnaie. Owing to the fact of this trifling accident the brown chip but might have been indignously expelled from the vehicle had not the gentleman, without once removing his eyes from the oranges, called out to the driver: "I have a half dollar in my pocket, and your behalf five cents in the money-box, a process which gained him a charming look of acknowledgement from a pair of bright eyes, and from under the hood of the omnibus a young fellow in a neat coat and a bowler hat, and an intimate friend of his own providing for them an eligible house on the deck of the steamboat. A passenger to the society of the omnibus, the vast number of facts built into the pyramid whose apex Hindley selects to pedestal his lie. Toward the close of the fifteenth century—certainly in that generation after the date given above, 1492 lived the woman who became known as Mother Shipton, whose name is so prominent in the annals of the world. She was a woman of the year 1644. At that time a pamphlet appeared with this title: "The Prophecy of Mother Shipton. In the reign of King Henry the Eighth. Envoiced by the Cardinal Wolsey, the Lord Percy and others, as also what should happen in ensuing times." London. Printed for Richard Henry Chiswell, in the Strand, 1644. On the title-page is a nearly full-length and very coarse woodcut, not of the conventional "witch," but of a woman of the time, whose name was evidently forged, probably by an astrologer of the time, Lilly, and it is to be noted that the woman is a woman of the time of two hundred years ago set an all too tempting example before the artful effort of 1842. As a specimen of the "prophecy," I have inserted in this issue a copy of the pamphlet. The ancient book itself the concluding sentences: "Then shall she be in the North that a woman shall say unto another, Mother, I have seen a man sitting, and for one man there shall be a thousand women. He shall be a man sitting upon St. James's Church Hill weeping his ill; and after that a ship come sailing up the Thames like it come against London, and the Master of the ship shall weep, seeing he hath made so good a voyage, and he shall say, 'What a good voyage is this, which is in the world comparable to it, and now there is scarcely left any house that can let us have drink for our money.'" This was Lilly's great mistake, for, as it is probable, he wrote the book—the great fire in London occurred twenty-five years later, and the astrologer had no direct means of putting the date together. The last lines in the book are these: "Unhappy hee that lives to see these days; But happy are the dead, Shipton's way says:—Harper's Magazine for December.

Uncertainty of the Press.

"I don't know whether they do it intentionally or not," said Jack Kanebiter, thoughtfully, "but somehow these newspapers pass on and an awful lot of unreliable information." "How's that?" languidly inquired his running mate, Jim L. Ardick. "I was reading the paper this week that a poor young fellow in St. Louis borrowed an umbrella of a bank president, and the next day returned it." "Oh! no, he did, really," continued Kanebiter; "he walked into the bank the very next day and returned the umbrella. The president was so much pleased that he called the young man back and made him his cashier at a big salary." "Because he was so honest, eh?" "Rightly so, as I had gotten one of the first editions of the paper, I thought I'd work the same racket before any of the other boys caught on." "Good scheme." "So I rustled round to the Nevada Bank and asked Louis McLane to lend me an umbrella. There was a director's meeting going on at the time, so I thought I had 'em, sure." "What did you moneybags say?" "He said, 'Why, it isn't going to rain for a month yet.' I know I'm right, I thought, 'Just you lend me an umbrella.' So he told the clerk to let me have one and take ten dollars for security." "Great Scott!" "But that ain't the worst of it. When I looked at the umbrella I'll be hanged if I wasn't one that McLane had borrowed from me two years ago."

Why are you so out of sorts, never able to tell a lie without being detected, and it's all caused in the first place by habitual constipation, which no doubt finally caused deranged kidneys and liver. The sure cure for consumption is the celebrated Kidney-Wort. It is also a specific remedy for all kidney and liver diseases. Thousands are cured by it every month. Try it at once.—Tobler's Blade.

Mother Shipton's Prophecies.

There has recently come under my own personal observation evidence of the extreme anxiety of the common people to verify any alleged "prophecy" of Mother Shipton. My attention was attracted to the notices of publishing the "Prophecies of Mother Shipton"—certain prophecies of the evening. These prophecies, which were embodied in that kind of runic doggerel which prevails in the Roxborough Ballads, and they represent the old female "astrologer," Mother Shipton, who lived about the year 1488 as predicting: "Carriages without horses shall go. Around the world horses shall go. In the water shall float. Land shall be not known. Gold shall be found, and found. It is a land that is not known. Fire and water shall move wonders. Do. England shall at last admit a Jew.

"A house of glass shall come to pass In twenty years' time. War will follow with the work. And stand of paper shall be. Will seek each other's life. In the year 1850 shall be the South. An eagle shall build in a lion's mouth."

"The world then to an end shall come In eight hundred and eighty-one. There will be a war between the nations. The American war (going on while Hindley was writing), and even the Crystal Palace, designed to be a monument to the antiquarians. A correspondence occurred in Notes and Queries (Series IV., Vol. II.), and in the Hindley's confession of forgery was made public. Hindley, however, tried to give his patients relief; nor should he take any other preparation of Iron, for with the exception of Brown's Iron Bitters, they all blacken the teeth and often give headache, which Brown's Iron Bitters never did, but in fact cured headache. The effect was most satisfactory; he immediately realized wonder of his own strength and vigor, and his old natural force came back, and he felt himself altogether a new man, full of health, strength and vigor. Do not be contented to remain so ever since. Now he recommends Brown's Iron Bitters to all his friends which we unhesitatingly do to our readers.—Hobbs.

How to Secure Health.

It seems strange that anyone will suffer from derangement brought on by impure blood, when SCOVILL'S SASSAPARILLA and STILLINGIA, or BLOOD SYRUP, will restore it. Mamma's.

"Mamma," said a weeplet, "they sang I was to be an angel in Sunday school this morning, and I sung with them." "Why, Nellie?" exclaimed mamma. "Could you keep your promised verse of 'I kept ahead of them most all the way through.'"
