Rheumatism; general loss of appetite, and separately costive, sometimes alternating with lax; the head is troubled with pain, is dull and heavy, with considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of leaving undone something which ought to have been done; a slight, dry cough and flushed face is sometimes an attendant, often mistaken for consumption; the patient complains of weariness and debility; nervous, easily startled; that sold or burning, sometimes a prickly sensation of weariness and debility; nervous, easily startied; feet cold or burning, sometimes a prickly sensation of the skin exists; spirits are low and despondent, and, although satisfied that exercise would be beneficial, yet one can hardly summen up fortitude to try it—in fact, distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred when but few of them existed, yet examination after death has shown the Liver to have been extensively derapped. have been extensively deranged.

An animated discussion occurred in the Senate a few days since concerning the arbitrary dictation of the printers' union. It is a well-established fact that the government printing office, on which millions of dollars are annually spent, is helplessly in the hands of a secret organization, which controls its management and monopolizes its employment. When the present public printer came into office the typographical union was absolutely running the office, and the opinion was current that the office could not be run without the consent of the union. ## SUPREME COURT JUSTICES.

The nomina ions of Ex-Gov. Austin Blair and Thos. J. O'Brien for Judges were wise ones and for the good of the party as well as for the best interests of justice. The advancement of Mr. Blair is especially gratifying to the proprietor of the COURIER, inasmuch as it was by his exertions the Governor was made a regent two years ago, and it is believed that the assuming of the ermine will not cause his resignation from the Board of Regents. With such a man on the bench of the state all the important decisions coming therefrom will not now emanate from one brain to which hitherto the others have been subservient. There will now be less chance for Justice to peep out from under the bandage to see who is friend and who is foe. There is more likelihood of its being dealt out even-handed. For this we congratulate the citizens of the common-

AT LAST.

The deed is done. Thomas W. Palmer don't like it. But as we don't know of like it is not because we have anything against Mr. Palmer but because we dislike the means his friends used to defeat Mr. Ferry in order to compass his own However, now he is elected we find much to console us, and the more we think of it the more we are inclined to rejoice at the choice, for the reason that he has all the traits, characteristics and ability to make him one of the best senators the State has ever had. We prophesy he will do it. His election will spoil the fine calculations of a good many prongent politicians in Detroit and there will be a new order of things. We hope to see Wm. Livingstone made Collector of the port of Detroit as Mr. Palmer owes his election to him more than to any other man. Michigan as a State is honored by his election. We would like to say more on this matter, but having just heard of it as the forms are going to press we find ourselves unable further to express our mind.

THE REGENTS.

Although the Republican convention at East Saginaw did not adopt the suggestion we offered last week in regard to the nomination of Mr. Norris, we are pleased to see a recognition of the principle we believe should obtain. That is, that there should be on the Board of Regents severthan this we deem it wise that some should be recent graduates who more

Harry Burns Hutchins, Ph, B., after graduating from the literary class of the _C M :.. 1071 ... the Owosso schools in '71-2; instructor and assistant professor in history and rhetoric at the University from 1872 to 1876; admitted to the bar in '79, since which time he has practiced law at Mount Clemens. He is a son of Mr. C. B. Hutchins, of this city.

Mr. Joseph Comstock Jones, M. A., matriculated at the University in 1865; was principal of the Houghton and Tappan schools in Detroit, 1867-'69; graduated with the class of '72; superintendent of the Pontiac schools, 1872-'77, and since that time of the schools at East Saginaw. Thus from the nature of his profession he is thoroughly en rapport with all educational matters and will undoubtedly be valuable acquisition to the Board.

This young spirit coming into the life of the body which rules the affairs of the State institution is an assurance of a broad, liberal and enterprising policy. We believe such a spirit will brook no bull-dosing on the part of professors threatening to resign. The counsel of and Smith thinks two sessions are prefer-old men is usually wise but it is apt to be able. over cautious and even timorous.

PENSIONS.

It has come to be generally considered that our pension lists which are increascult matter owing to the secresy of the least, is being discussed not a little by Tribune thus voices the idea: "There is a widespread belief-whether well or ill-founded—that a considerable proportion of our great pension list is fraudulent; that names have been added stimulated their efforts. To determine the truth or falsity of these repeated charges, might it not be well to author ze annually or semi-annually the public exhibition of the list of pensioners on the olls of each agency—the names to be conficuously posted in the counties and where the pensioners reside? To legit to te and honorable pensioners this will or ag relief. They will take pride in seeing their names published among their friends and neighbors, whereas those same friends and neighbors will quickly discern if there be fraudulent or unworthy names each town or village, you get a great cloud of witnesses as to the integrity and worthiness of every pensioner, and you will find a hearty readiness to expose and denounce the fraudulent names if there be any. The plan would cost little to each agency. Is it not worth trying?"

We do not see how the proposed scheme could injure any honest pensioner, but on the other hand we can see how it would annually save a great amount to the Government by cutting off all false claims.

It is generally believed that a large part of the money annually paid from the United States Treasury on the pension accrowded with amusements of other kinds, count goes to the claim agents. They are following in rapid succession, interlapping continually on the alert for soldiers who and offering such attractiveness and varihave been in the war, and if they can find ety as to render choice often difficult. The one who was ever sick while on duty they rich and the poor, the high and the low, immediately urge him to apply for a pen- cultured aesthetes and common-place peosion, promising to get it for him for, say ple, can be accommodated with entertain-$10.00. If he pays this, matters are un- ment exactly adapted to their degree of necessarily delayed until the expectant appreciation and to the calibre of their not, as thousands of cases already permawould-be-pensioner is willing to be bled purses, from the ten cent museum to the from $25.00 to $100. Upon the reception Italian opera for ten dollars a seat. This Bright's Disease, Weak Back, or any urin of this money the papers are pushed week, comic opera, classic opera, and the ary complaint quickly cured. They purify on the promise of a share, fixed up claims for those who were never in the war, and without any just claim for money from grown up around this semi-secret system and none have dared to oppose it, either in Congress or on a party platform for the fear of being accused either of a lack of patriotism, an unfriendly feeling against the soldier, or of having a niggardly spirit. Only by this method of publishing the names of those who draw pensions can fraudulent claimants be rooted out.

OUR SCHOOL SYSTEM.

The subject of the unsanitary results of school work is one of very close and vital importance to us, for, whether in all cases our school system is the best possible one, or whether in some instances its results are injurious to health, it must tell powerfully on the physique and even on the mind of the one upon whom the system is operated. We have before us a pamphlet containing a paper read by Dr. Breakey before the Sanitary convention last year. It discusses the unsanitary methods and results of school work in an admirable way. It does not, as might be supposed, treat the subject solely from the stand-point of a physician, but the writer of the paper by correspondence gathered together the ideas of one hundred each, of the leading teachers, superintendents and physicians

We note the preponderaace of evidence to be as follows: 1st. The superintendis elected United States Senator. We ents do not think the work required of scholars in the graded schools is too much, any way to help ourselves we are going either in number or character of studies to stand it like men. The reason we don't for the average age of those attending the schools. On the other hand the physicians do think it is too much. 2d. Both agree in saying it causes nervousness in very many. 3d. The task is greater for girls. 4th. Many physicians testify that it has caused "serious, protracted, and fatal illness." 5th. A large majority of the superintendents think the discipline of schools in the requirement of attendance not too exacting; a smaller majority of the doctors think they are: 6th. Both classes are nearly unanimous in affirming that "absences properly accounted for should not appear, in any system of marking, to the discredit of the scholar." 7th. As regards the question whether there is "a tendency to overstimulation of the nervous system and disproportionate development," the physicians say yes, while the teachers are about evenly divided. 8th. Precocious scholars do not take the lead in practical life. 9th. The good scholars are those who have more frequently broken down in health. 10. The majority of superintendents and physicians believe that "the courses of study can be made more elective and the rigidity of class work, and the ex- her. The dogs receive many attentions acting system of marked examinations can be relaxed, or made more elastic, without | wary as to where they bestow their caloss in efficiency." 11th. The doctors say resses. A pretty girl was observed pet-"undue prominence is given to studies overtaxing the memory and the analytical him by endearing names, while a society al graduates of the institution. Further powers of the children, e. g., the details of beau looked on wistfully and nurmured history and advanced mathematics;" but the superintendents disagree with them on the bull purp for just five minutes." thoroughly will understand the wants of that point. 12th. It is the almost unanimthe students by vividly remembering their ous opinion that the specialists or experts these and other reasons we are glad to judges of the difficulty with which children put at the head of our columns the names: of different ages, temperaments, tastes and Harry B. Hutchins and Joseph C. Jones. abilities can acquire that special kind of the celebration of the natal anniversary knowledge. 13th. A continuous session of being born in Newbury, Vermont, and five hours is not preferable to a forenoon and afternoon session. 14th More attenpractice of physiology and hygiene in the public schools

> In regard to the thirteenth point, it may be said that the plan of having the fivehour continous session is now being tried do with it?" The Republican caucus yesin the High School. After a year and a terday furnished no answer to the queshalf of trial the professors and citizens differ as to whether or not it gives the best results. Prof. Perry says: "I incline, not strongly, to the affirmative." Prof. Chute says: " Most emphatically is a continuous session preferable in a school organized on the plan of the Ann Arbor high school." Prof. Pattengill thinks "it requires the pupil to spend less time in the school room, and gives time to do more work by daylight." Prof. Dunster declares: "I should prefer the double session, unless the continuous one is broken by frequent recesses-not less than four of 10 or 15 minutes each." Prof. Payne says: "It appears to me that a continuous session of five hours is very unwise, though I cannot speak from personal experience." Drs. Kapp

We believe the verdict is right from one standpoint, but wrong from another. That is to say, the question as asked was too broad in its scope. The doctors, and the teachers of the smaller scholars at once ing in amount at an alarming rate are thought of the effect on the little ones, of being enlarged considerably by fraudulent | a five-hours continuous session, while they claims. To prove this however is a diffi- lost sight of the fact that in a high school organized as is the one here in Ann Arbor, work of the pension claim agents. A the students have to be at the school only method to obviate this suspicion, to say the | when they have to recite, and further that no one has enough studies to keep him or the press of the country and the N. Y. her in school for the whole session. Under these conditions, after interviewing many of the scholars themselves, we find it is the almost unanimous verdict that the one session of five hours is preferable, to it by thousands in consequence of the because it saves them time, extra walking energetic course of agents, whose fees and from being compelled to study entirely by gas-light. We admit that a forenoon and afternoon session is better for the health of the younger scholars, but we are satisfied that a distinction should be made in favor of high schools by which they should be exempt from the rule. The pamphlet brings up many other points which would be of interest to discuss, and we believe that in the sensible way they are presented, they ought to have good consideration on the part of those on the list. When you come down to who are interested in the welfare of the human race. It is not all of life to have an advanced education; it is not for the highest good merely to have sound health. But the combination of the two makes the ideal. Horace's maxim: "Mens sana in corpore sano" should always ring in our spoils. Cases have been known where in justice to each. For, while many affect a times dull to the claim agents, they have, preference for Patti's or Schalchi's golden vocal chords, others of a totally different musical school prefer the canine chorus that may be heard for fifty cents at the the Government. Great frauds have dog show, and which is composed of a soprano of sharp yelping pugs and spaniels, a contralto of baying hounds and beagles and basso of hoarse voiced mastiffs and St. Bernards. The international bench show is being held at the skating rink, and is a novelty here, so that everybody asks everybody else if he has been to the dog.show. There are three hundred and fifty-two dogs entered, many of them being the finest specimens of their kind that ayune. can be found in this country. The kennels are arranged in double rows, extending the entire length of the rink, with aisles between that are so narrow, visitors feel in great danger, while trying to keep at a safe distance from the bull-dogs and blood-hounds on one side, or being nabbed by some other kind of dog on the opposite side. Every breed of dogs is represented, and they are well classified. Considering their unnatural surroundings they are pretty well behaved, for most of them are far from home and among strangers. This feature seems cruel, and many of them send up indignant protests against their forced situation in a variety of barks, howls, yelps and whines that are both distracting and deafening. There are many famous dogs here, and a large number are for sale at prices ranging from thirty to fifteen thousand dollars. This is absurd to the disinterested and unprofessional, but good "dog men" say these are not fancy prices. The dog is judged by the shape of his body and legs, size and shape of his head, droop of his tail, and the texture of his coat, not at all by his requirements as some have supposed Pugs are most fashionable now, and ladies are exhibiting their pets in cages decorated in most artistic styles. Some are satin lined, with lace trimmed draperies festooned and looped with rosettes and ribbons. Others are furnished with pictures, mirrors and velvet cushions for the darlings to repose upon, and trifles such as india rubber dolls and balls for them to play with. The poor things do look unhappy, but loving hearts have tried hard to surround them with home luxuries and comforts during this trying ordeal. One tiny exquisite wore a blue embroidered pieces, inscribed with the name of each donor, (Col. Ingersoll's being conspicious among them;) and to this necklace was attached a diamond cross. This wee dog received a diploma for being the smallest and most thoroughbred black and tan known. She has traveled extensively, is seven years old, her name is Fanny Cabell. She is owned by a lady of this city who told me that a fortune would not buy from visitors, but the latter are a little ting a repulsive looking dog, and calling he "would give five hundred dollars to be

One of the brightest and best plays here this season is Herne's Hearts of Oak next Wednesday night. All the scenery is carried by the company and is new and painted especially for this piece, and it requires a whole car for its transportation. The grand scene of the wreck on the waves in a terrific storm of thunder, lightning and rain, all realistically represented is alone worth the price of admission. The Missouri Republican, of January 3, says "Hearts of Oak" is a very strong play, and its motive and action enlist the finest sympathies of the human heart. Mr.

James A. Herne plays the leading role with fine force and effect, and Miss Catharine Corcoran as Chrystal is clever and winning, and thoroughly sympathetic. It deserves the success it has achieved and the fame it has won in the hands of Herne and his company.

The Honorable Alfred Tot—
It was our hero's mournful lot
To hear this tragic name—set sail Upon a whimsical sea-lark; His oily words, poured round the bark, He knew would still the wildest gale.

But his relentless larynx brought
A fate of which he'd never thought:
A few weeks out the captain died,
By vapid chat completely floored;
The crew fled madly—overboard, And Tot was left in lonely pride

Yet he kept up, through sun or fog.
The ship's and his own mono-logue;
He talked the storm down, and at last With many a pensive, lingering qualm, Amid a wide and death-tired calm, On Patagonia's shore was cast.

The ill-bred natives planned to eat him—
That was the only way to beat him,
They wished to banquet him; and what,
In view of their seant larder-shelf,
Could do more honor to himself, ching hot? Than to serve him up smoking hot?

"But," said their chief, "life's very dull:
Take heed, take heed, before you cull
So fair a flower as this. If we Should slay him now, no doubt it would Be quite exciting, but how should
We next enliven our ennui?"

That saved the captain's life. And now, Pondering it o'er with thoughtful brow,
I'm led to this profound belief:
We do not kill our bores because
We know each time they hold their laws
Our ennui finds such sweet relief.

NORA'S PERIL

After breakfast the next morning Colone De Burgho said,-

"I shall be glad, Mr. Mervyn, if you can place a day or two at my disposal; I wish to consult you about my plans for the renovation of my long-deserted castle, -that is to say, have as yet really formed no plans; what rather meant to propose was that we should inspect the premises, and the estate, which i very considerable in extent, and discuss to very considerable in extent, and discuss together the best means of making the former habitable, and the latter more productive. From the experience I have gathered during my foreign residence, I am led to believe that much might be done to develop its resources—that, I think, is the correct phase. As regards the building, it is so vast that to repair the whole of it would be an almost impossible task for a man of even the largest fortune to attempt; but a judicious selection may be made, and as I now contemplate residing here for the remainder of my life. I cannot too soon mature mainder of my life, I cannot too soon matur some plan, and partially carry it out, befor I replied that nothing would give me greater pleasure than to assist him in giving effect to his views, and that as I had traversed every portion of the estate, I could, I felt confident, suggest several ways of improving its value, at no very considerable cost.

Thanking me for my compile

Thanking me for my compliance with his request, Colonel De Burgho said: quest, Colonel De Burgho said:

"Well, then, we will spend to-day in inspecting the demesne attached to the castle; it is, or was, some three thousand acres in extent, and my directions to my agent on leaving home were to keep it always in hand, which he writes me he has done, although he has latterly pressed me to let off some portions which could be profitably rented; and, by the way," said he, "I may as well inform you at once of my position when I inherited the property, which forms but a fourth part of the possessions of my ancestors, and of my present hopes and expectaestors, and of my present hopes and expectaof manhood.

"A place like this has great attractions for a youth of vigorous constitution and active proclivities. I enjoyed the sports of the field and the mode of life pursued by my father, whose there we always a full of greats to whom here.

The National Association of Stationary the mode of life pursued by my father, whose house was always full of guests, to whom he dispensed liberally a rough but abundant hospitality. When I had almost reached my twenty-first birthdsy, and preparations were being made for celebrating my majority by the usual festivities, my dear father met with an accident in the heunting field, from which he never rallied, and, after a few weeks' severe suffering he died, leaving me sole inheritor of a heavily engumbered estate and a dilandiated a heavily encumbered estate and a dilapidate

Having paid the last honors to his remains, I took counsel with some old friends of my family, and they advised me to sell so much of the property as would discharge the debt, which I very reluctantly agreed to do, as it involved parting with nearly three-fourths of it. When the sales were effected, I found myself owner of a vastly diminished rental and territory but. of a vastly diminished rental and territory, but released from debt and the importunities of creditors, who made my father's life miserable; and also free to travel, and see the world while I was yet young.

I had reason, not many years afterwards, to I had reason, not many years afterwards, to congratulate myself on having taken this course, for, had I delaved, the great depreciation in the value of property, resulting from the famine of 1846, would have ruined me, as it did so many indebted proprietors; what I sold realized good prices, and left me a respectable remnant of the ancestral estate intact.

"While upon this topic," continued the Colonel, "I may as well observe that, in my opinion no more cruel act of parliament ver research.

ion, no more cruel act of parliament ever passed the legislature than that called the 'Encumber-ed Estates Act,' and none to which the anhor-ism 'flat experimentum in corpore vili' more truly applies. Sir Robert Peel, no doubt, was truly applies. Sir Robert Peel, no doubt, was a great statesman, but he was a man of apprehensive, nervous political temperament; and indeed, all English statesmen of that era acted upon a 'panie view,' both as regards free trade in corn, and Irish legislation; both these measures were earried by an impulsive 'spurt.' Against the principle of either I do not mean to argue; but they should have been more prospective in their operation. As it was, the unfortunate Irish landlord had at the same time to encounter the potato famine and a the sudden abolition of the corn duties, being at once deluged with unusually large importa-tions of foreign produce. At this juncture, nortgages, influenced by panic and greed, sud-denly foreclosed to an enormous extent, lodged petitions for sale, and hurried into the market millions of acres in the south and west of Ireland, which are bought up by land speculators, many of them the petitioning creditors, at half their value. Hundreds of the old families of the country were thus suddenly ousted and thrown upon the world without a shilling, and where they have all vanished to is incomprehensible.

"Had the act been prospective, allowing some two or three years to elapse before be-coming operative, many of these unfortunates coming operative, many of these unfortunates would now be in my happier position, of having a portion of their estates left to them; but the cry in parliament then was, 'Force the embarrassed proprietors to sell; capitalists will buy them out; settle, improve the country employ the people, and emigration will cease.' This cry was irresistible, backed up as it was by the whole Manchester party, with Peel and Cobden at their head; and many of the old Irish proprietors were swept away, unnitied Irish proprietors were swept away, unpitied and unwept. In some few instances capitalists did take their places, but by far the greater number of purchasers were speculators, who at once proceeded to clear the land of population, with the view of reselling at a profit which many of them have since done.

"Sir Robert Peel, as also those who succeeded him, I repeat, were impulsive, sensational legislators, as regarded their Irish measures, holding on to the last to an antiquated and unsound political economy, and then giving way in a panic of demonstrative repentance—'coming down by the run,' and ruining hundreds of the liftsh aristocrary, by their reediess precipilations. Irish aristocrary by their reckless precipitancy."
"Your strictures on their policy, Colonel,"

said I," are very severe."

"Not a whit too severe," he replied; "and the natural result will supervene—their example will be followed by other 'great statesmen' hereafter, and we shall have a crop of sensational, otherwise 'exceptional,' legislation for Ireland. for Ireland. Some of my relatives were among the sufferers, and I feel so actuely on the sub-ject, that you must pardon this long digression. "I will, now," said Colonel De Burgho, "con-

I thanked Colonel De Burgho for his kind proposal, and said that I should be most happy to undertake the duties he wished, and, in fact, before our walk terminated, we concluded an engagement satisfactory to both.

We then returned homeward, dined, and walked in the evening for several hours admir. valked in the evening for several hours, admiring the natural beauty of the extensive demense, and projecting many changes, in which Nora and Kathleen also took a lively interest.

But this may be upset by subsequent developments, for only part of the "debbil" has been removed, and only one instalment of him has been captured. A Provident Englishman.

From the Toronto News. An affable, though somewhat dessi cated American was on his way the other day to the city of Boston. He had with that thrifty forethought of his nation, secured a lower berth, and was meditating upon the wisdom of gathering his body behind the curtains when he was accosted by an Englishman in a tweed suit. The Englishman was of an ample presence and had the air of one who had been pastured on mutton chops all his life.

"You will excuse me," said he of the tweed suit, "but am I right in suppos-ing that you have the lower berth?"
"You bet your life," replied the

"My sister," said the owner of the weed suit, "has the upper berth, which berth. Now, might I ask you, sir, to ter to take your's?'

The request was scarcely preferred when the American, with the gallantry of a genuine Yank, hastened to assure on the hearth, which melted and made a his English acquaintance that nothing could give him more pleasure than to be of service to a lady

On the following morning the Ameritweed legs emerge from a lower berth opposite that which he had politely given up, and the next moment the "Say," said the American, as an air of grave disgust began to creep over his astonished physiognomy, "didn't yo ask me to give up my lower berth to "Certainly, my dear fellow," replied the gentleman addressed, "hope you slept well?" "And you had a lower berth?" "Of course." "And then you got me to give up ine to your sister, sir?"

"Why, my dear fellow," said the Englishman, in his turn, "you didn't expect I'd give up a lower berth to my wn sister, did you?"

Gold in Ancient Times. pular Science Monthly.

Gold was in excess in ancient times and mostly taken from the rivers in Asia. The fables of Pactolus, of th golden fleece of the Argonauts, of the gold from Ophir, the history of King Midas, etc., all point to an Eastern origin of this metal. According to Pliny Cyrus returned with 34,000 pounds of gold (about $10,000,000). The treasure exacted from Persia by Alexander the Great amounted to 351,000 talents, or $400,000,000. Gold also came from Arabia, and upon the Nile from the interior of Africa. Pliny called Asturias the country in which the most gold i found. A tablet bearing the following inscription was found in Idanha Velha Portugal: "Claudias Rufus returns his thanks to Jupiter for having permitted him to find 130 pounds of gold."
