The Star Route Verdict. N. Y. Tribune.

The jury system is not likely to gain n popular estimation by the verdict rendered yesterday at Washington. The 791 most serious reverse expected for the prosecution was a disagreement; instead of that there comes, after more than forty hours of deliberation, a judgment of acquittal, not only ending this case in triumph for the defendants, but greatly discouraging, to say the least, there is a least occurred at Sydney-town, Pa., a few days ago: Johnny Moore thought he saw at a window the face of his father, who was killed in a mine accident five years ago. He called his mother and a friend in the house. Both saw the face. The mother was so frightened that she jumped out of the window, 20 feet, and was killed, the boy went into hydryphobia spasms and is now a raving lunatic. But the chief element of danger at the capital is in the existence of a loose sentile out among certain classes.

The Washington postmaster has been appointed and he is not Mr. Frank B. Conger. The President has named Col. David Braker, who is at present chief postoffice inspector. Col. Parker was appointed because of his peculiar fitness for the place. He has been in the postoffice service for many years and knows every detail of the work. Mr. Conger did not apply for the position, for his lation of men who live by their wits, in the countless ways which are open about a great Government machine, and who would regard the chance to go on a jury in such a case as a brilliant being a constraint. #### THE FIRST NINE YEARS.

By the courtesy of Mr. T. R. Chase, the editor of the Michigan University Book, we are enabled to print an interesting resume of the lives of the graduates from the first nine classes which left the

During the first nine years of the University's existence one hundred and fortynine were graduated in the literary department, and five of the non-graduates have since received degrees and their names now appear in the lists of their respective classes-making a total of alumni of the old regime of 145. During this time eighty-seven men left the college, and are known as non-graduates. This period includes the continuance of the dormitory system, and ends with the classes who did not fairly come under the instruction of Dr. Tappan.

Of alumni sixty-two have teen admitted to the bar, and practiced law. Of them there have been three railroad attorneys, twenty prosecuting attorneys, one U.S. District attorney, four city attorneys, and two Attorneys General.

Show us a college which turned out its nine first classes of more successful men than these, and that, too, before any but one of them was three score years of age. Forty-four are dead, four of whom died in the ar.ny.

As this period embraces the era of the secret society war, the number of non graduates is abnormally large. As a large proportion of these men pursued more than half of a full college course with us, it may be of interest to trace their course There were eighty-seven names dropped from the college catalogue in the first decade of the University history. Of these persons ten died in college, and fifteen have disappeared, leaving no history attainable. Of the others, twenty-five graduated at other institutions, and four graduated from our own medical department; eight became physicians, thirteen attorneys, seven ministers, four editors, five teachers, six college professors, and two college presidents. HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian HAIR RENEWER was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its un-paralleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises. The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all im purities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push for ward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alco holic preparations, but remain a long time, which nakes its use a matter of economy.

COMMENCEMENT WEEK.

MEDICAL CLASS DAY.

Monday was devoted to the exercises of the medical graduates. In the Hall in the afternoon the oration was delivered by Arthur G. Oven, the poem by Mrs. A. L. Yeomans, the history by Chester E. Coulter, and the prophecy by Harriet Beringer. The history shows that of the 161 who entered, 70 will graduate; the average age is 2614 years; the cost of the course was $111,825; the average $355 per year. In the evening a hundred and twenty-five sat down to a banquet at the St. James.

LITERARY CLASS DAY.

It is said that Tuesday was the first rainy class-day in eleven years. It was a dirty drizzle but it did not prevent a fair attendance at the exercises forenoon, afternoon or evening. Mr. W. B. Garvin delivered an oration on "National Aid to Education," and Miss Van Harlingen an essay entitled "Carleon." It was a knightly story of deeds clustering around the search for the Holy Grail.

The after dinner exercises were also held in the Hall and consisted of the history by J. C. Moore, the prophecy by A. M. Brown and the president's address by H. A. Mandell. The history told how 185 entered college with the class of '83, and 85 graduate. The average age is 23 years 4 months and 26 days-three months more than last year. The class have spent $140,943 making an average expenditure of $1,761.38. The largest sum spent by one man was

COMMENCEMENT.

The graduating exercises of Thursday morning were well attended, and the address of Professor James O. Murray was distinguished for its eloquence and finish. It held the large audience in rapt attention and when completed was applauded to a degree not before heard in the Hall. The alumni dinner in the Law lecture room was attended by a crowd completely filling the large room. The toasts were many and excellent.

On Wednesday occurred the exercises of the laying of the corner store of the Alpha Delta Phi chapter house. Bishop Harris delivered the oration and Hon. day was attended by the G. A. R. Post of Edwin Willits the history. A banquet was held in the evening.

H. S. Alumni.

The sons and daughters of the High School tried an experiment Friday evening which proved entirely successful. Hitherto they had met in the Hall where the literary exercises and the banquet had been given. But this year they assembled in the Unitarian church, listened to the literary program in the andience room and had the supper in the parlors. Mr. Sheehan gave a short President's address which was followed by a scholarly and finished oration by Mr. W. B. Cady. The essay of Miss Mittie Curtis was bright and interesting, and Mr. Brennan's poem was funny. It was a parody on Hiawatha. The music was ably rendered by a quartette composed of Messrs. Wines and Boyer, Miss Whedon and Mrs. Arthur Worden; also by Miss Strickland with solos. At the business meeting officers were elected as follows: President, J. V. Sheehan; vice-president, M. H. Brennan; secretary, Mary Hendrickson; treasurer, L. D. Taylor; orator, S. R. Beckwith; alternate, Delos Fall; essayist, Emily Smith; alternate, Belle Hull; poet, Mrs. D. A. Dickerman; alternate, Miss Flora Mc Donald; executive committee, J. E. Beal, Lizzie Cooper, and Carrie Wilmot; musical committee, L. D. Wines and May Whedon. When the bountiful supper, served by the ladies of the church, was spread the rooms were filled with the feasters who afterwars listened to toasts, until after midnight. In this exercise Mr. Donovan was especially happy in his remarks. The success of this reunion was such as to ensure its continuance in the manner partments. Professors Hennequin and Adams go to Martha's Vineyard this summer to teach at the Institute. E. H. Bowman, '81, attended Commencement and the laying of the corner stone of the Alpha Delta Phi chapter house Sunday afternoon and evening despite Memorial addresses. J. W. Baird has resigned his position in the chemical laboratory to accept an offer from Lehigh University. His place is filled by F. C. Smith. Those gorgeous and gaudy red silk hats of the seniors astonished the gaze of all beholders for the first time Saturday morning. Some say they are loud.

Rev. Nathaniel West of the second class which was graduated from the University, that of 1846, came Wednesday night. He is now preaching in the Detroit Presbyterian church.

Dr. Dight has severed his connection with the medical school and gone to his home in Pennsylvania. After a short stay there he starts for his work in the college at Beiruth, Syria.

A base ball nine composed of colored men from Louisville, Ky., amused the University nine a while Monday afternoon. There was considerable fun for the spectators and when the rain stopped the game at the close of the fifth inning, the score stood 9 to 2 in favor of the home nine. Ordinary amateur ball tossers must get up early in the morning to get in more runs than our players. A very pretty ball game was played Saturday afternoon between the University and Cass teams. It was closely contested, the game being won by the home team in the last half of the ninth inning. The

The best features of the game were two three-base hits by Walker, seven men be ing struck out by Packard's pitching, and twelve men being put out by Blackburn

The Students' Christian Association have purchased the lot on State street opposite University Hall for $2,500. They have raised seventeen hundred dollars and propose to get enough for the lot subscribed among the people of Ann Arbor. The plan for the proposed building will demand an outlay of $15,000. It will be of stone in the Norman-Gothic style, one story high, and with two audience rooms. The trustees are Profs. M. L. D'Ooge, Dr. Herdman, C. K. Adams, J. B. Steere, E. Olney, V. M. Spalding, A. B. Prescott and H. S. Frieze.

To-Morrow's Circus.

Notwithstanding the fact that this has been the liveliest week of all the year in Ann Arbor, to-morrow will undoubtedly be the biggest day, for Barnum's Greatest Show comes from Lansing in the early morning and gives two performances—one in the afternoon and the other in the even ing. The street parade, with its richly decorated wagons and chariots, its brass bands, its horses, elephants, camels and wild beasts will line the streets with peo ple in the forenoon and old men and children will eagerly crowd forward to see the mastadon, Jumbo. The old fellow has a good capacity for candy, fruit and peanuts, and there is generally a scarcity of these articles after he has left the town. The canvass which covers this wonderful aggregation of curiosities and exhibitions is said to be the largest in the world, as it will cover 15,000 people—five times as many as the University Hall will hold. The races afford a thrilling spectacle. The large ring gives a good chance for the ladies' race. There are also wheel-barrow and obstacle races which excite considerable mirth. Another exciting race is where an Indian maiden is pursued by a cow boy who finally lassooes her with his With these attractions and those mentioned in another column, the circus and menagerie will be a big sight and whether it rains or shines there will be immense crowds in town from all over the county.

THE HIGH SCHOOL.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES, The twenty-fourth class to graduate from the city High School received their diplomas, Friday morning on the platform of the M, E. Church. The room was filled with the friends of the graduates and of the school. Fourteen speakers relieved themselves of their ideas of how the world might be improved, and how good or bad it was now or had been. The crowded Mayor Harriman goes next week to his state of our columns this week prevents our giving a detailed notice of the speeches, so we can only refer to the best ones: Ex-Gov. Jerome, Hon. #### LOOK! LOOK!

Two Hundred and Fifty purchases w made at Joe. T. Jacobs Clothing House, Saturday, June 23d.

I am glad to know the people realize that I mean what I say, and the goods are going fast with a rush. I now reap the reward of having always done, just as I promised in my advertisements. At the commencement of this great sale | 2 East Huron Street. I expected I would be able to retire about July 1st, but owing to the unfavorable weather my stock is some larger than I thought it would be at this time, and consequently may not have the arrangements made as soon as I expected, until I have matters arranged the people will get the goods less than other merchants own

My advice to all is to take the bargains while they are to be had. Most everything in the store is being sold less than cost. In Boys and Children's Suits we still have a good assortment but they are going fast. Do not delay making your purchases for any day this extraordinary sale may stop. Remember terms of sale: all sums inder twenty dollars, Cash. Sums of twenty dollars and over, approved note, six months.

Lay in your winter overcoats, lay in your winter underwear while you can buy at these prices. In men's suits the assortment is still very good, by actual count June 27th, we had on hand four hundred and forty (440). Come, Come, Come. JOE. T. JACOBS,

THE ORPHAN BOY.

Miss Abigail Burr was a little brown old maid, who lived in a little old brown house with her cat, Debby, and her woman-of-all-work, Prudence, sharp of tongue, and long of visage, herself. There was nothing of grace, nor sweetness, about Miss Abigail's life; everything was dry, and hard and husky. Indeed, some people were so uncharitable as to say that her heart was like a very much dried up kernel in a nutshell, and would rattle if she were to be shaken hard enough. But I never believed that. I always said that there was a soft spot in Miss Abigail's heart, to be found when the time came to find

One spring twilight a boy opened Miss Abigail's garden gate, and walked up the path between the rows of straggling lilacs. He was not a boy who lived about Caperstown, or he would not have dared venture, I am sure, for Prudence's sake, besides having nothing to venture for. He was an unkempt, starved looking specimen of humanity. His coat was a world too long, and patched at the elbows; and his trousers a world too short and patched at the knees. His hat was guiltless of brim, and through a hole in the crown bobbed a little tuft of hair, which had once been brown, but now neither the heard click of the gate latch nor the footsteps on the hard-trodden path, and she did not look up till the boy's figure inter-posed itself between her work and the fading sunset light.

He doffed his tattered hat-crown. "If you please, ma'am, will you-may I have something to eat?"

It was not at all a tramp's manner of asking; there was a manliness in his voice which Miss Abigail could not help noticing. Perhaps that was the reason she looked at the boy sharply for a moment before she answered. In that moment, Prudence, tall and angular, stood in the door, with a shawl thrown over her head, and her right hand swarthed

"I'll have to get Jones Barrows to do the milkin,' Miss Abigail," said she.
"I can't. I've burned my hand that

The boy looked up quickly. "Can't I—could I milk for you?"

As I have intimated, Prudence did not like boys; and that she sometimes expressed her dislike in a very forcible manner, many of the village urchins could testify. Now, she surveyed this boy, standing by the porch steps, from his bare head, not forgetting the faded little tuft, in dumb astonishment.

You might let him try. Prudence. said Miss Abigail, thinking dubiously of the nervous, mouse-colored Alderney the yard

"I chored on a farm all last summer," explained the boy, eagerly, glancing from mistress to maid. "I want some supper, and I'll be glad to do something to pay for it."

"Well, you kin try it," said Prudence, after a momentary deliberation. "It's better'n beggin' a favor anyhow." She led the way to the kitchen, and took a shining tin pail from the dress-"Here's the milk-pail." said she, to the boy, who stood waiting; "an' the cow's in the yard yonder. Pay day comes when the work is done."

And Prudence smiled as she went about setting a lunch of bread and butter and cold meat. She felt morally certain that the flighty Alderney heifer, used only to women-kind, would be much more likely to spread a pair of bovine wings and fly away than allow herself to be milked by a boy. "He can't do it," she said to Miss Abigail, who brought her knitting work into the kitchen. "The heifer will send

But he could, and he did. Soon he appeared in the doorway, his pail brimming with snowy foam.

"Well, I never!" ejaculated Prudence.
"You didn't think I could?" asked the boy, smiling brightly,

'No, I didn't," admitted Prudence; and straightway, in her astonishment, she added to his fare a segment of rhu-

"Wasn't there a bit of cheese left over from tea?" asked Abigail. Prudence thought there was, and while she was fetching it from the cellar, the boy gave himself a scrubbing at the pump coming in from his abolu-tions fresh and ruddy as a rose. He was very hungry; there was no doubt of that. He looked at Miss Abigail with a depreciating smile, as Prudence carried off the bread plate for a third replenishing. "I'm pretty hungry," he said. "This is the first bite I've had since morning, and it tastes good."

To be sure it did. Miss Abigai thought of a little brother who died years and years before, ere his tender feet began to feel the pricks in life's How strange that the sight of this little vagrant, satisfying his hunger at the kitchen table, should bring to her remembrance the child who had so early put off the mortal for the im-Presently, when the boy had finished his repast, he laid his knife and precision which it pleased Miss Abigail to see; and then he glanced from Prudence, standing near her with arms akimbo, to Miss Abigail. "Thank you for my supper," said he. "Maybe I'd best be getting along You don't want a boy to work, do "A-boy-to work!" echoed Prudence.

once. "Did you ever."
"No, we don't!" said Miss Abigail shortly. And then-it was enough that she could not help thinking again of that frail life which had blighted in the bud so long before.

"How far are you going?" she ask-

"I don't know ma'am." "And where have you come from?" proceeded Miss Abigail. "Trescott, ma'am. Mother died there three months ago." There was a pathetic quaver in his voice. And then, with a little questioning, he told his simple story. His name was Barry Olmstead, and he was twelve vears old. He had lived in Trescott a long time—he and his mother; they were very poor, but they had kept a little home together. His mother had taken in sewing, and he had worked for the neighboring farmers summers and gone to school winters. And be had been happy, for all they were so poor, until -mother died.

"Then I stopped with Deacon Staples a spell; he said he wanted to try me. But they were going to bind me out to him, so I ran away."

"None to blame, nuther,"interposed Prudence with a great deal of emphasis "I've seen old Staples, down to Tres-cott. He's that mean he'd skin a mouse or the hide and taller!"

"I've been trying along for a chance to work," continued the boy, smiling faintly. He was very near to tears, now, but he held them back sturdily. "But there don't anybody eem to want me."

Miss Abigail was moved more than she would have cared to own by his recital. Even to her who had lived for self so long, there was something indescribably pitiful in the thought of this little wanderer battling alone with the world, buffeted by fortune, drifting here long since been lighted; and there were mutterings of distant thunder in the

Barry thanked her. The storm broke with great violence And while Miss Abigail listened to the sharp peals of thunder and the pouring of the rain against the windows, she the stubby undergrowth of pines and thought of the lonely little wayfarer in the stable loft, with a new, strange throb of pity. Morning came, merry with bird songs, and glistening with myriads of raindrops. Prudence was up, betimes, but, early as it was, she heard the sound of an ax in the wood-noise seemed to awaken the whole barshed; and when she opened the door

"I don't think I paid enough for my supper—I eat such a lot," he said, "so I've split some kindlings, and I'll milk for you this morning if you want me

Barry gave a little incredulous laugh, battle-field was sickening in the exbut he went out to the porch. Miss woefully faded. He went stright up to Miss Abigail's porch steps. "I dunno." answered Prudence Barry heard and turned. "I guess its because you leave the old blossoms on," he said, hesitatingly. "Mother used to say I must pick the blossoms off one year if I wanted any the next.' And then he went out of the gate closing it carefully behind him, and "So it is,' said Miss Abigail. She gazed reflectively along the road which wound serpentine, to the little hamlet a mile away. Barry was climbing the heads, milk, house, green and black hill, a mere, pitiful, lonely speck in the and among them were two hoop-snakes distance as he was a mere, insignificant atom in the great body of humanity.

Miss Abigail's eyes filled. "We might have kept him," she said. "'Taint too late, yet," put in Pru-

The two women looked into each other's eyes. "If you can make him hear," began Miss Abigail.

For answer Prudence strode to the road and sent a long quivering cry after kitchen, Miss Abigail!" called Prudence, excitedly. "Quick!"

Miss Abigail, staid spinster that she was, without a thought of the ludicrousness of the proceeding, ran to the kitchen, snatched the horn from its nail, and ran out with it to Prudence. And Prudence put it to her lips, and blew a blast so long and so loud, that it startled the birds into silence, and set the echoes ringing from hillside to hillside.
"He c'n hear that if he c'n hear any-ning," she muttered. He did. He stopped. Prudence flourshed the horn in frantic excitement. There was a moment of suspense; and who was standing by the gate.

"He's a comin' back," she said. When Barry, breathless with the haste he had made, reached the cottage, Miss Abigail was on the porch.

"We made up our minds to keep you," she said, "so long as you don't give too much trouble."

"Oh, thank you, ma'am!" cried Bar"Indeed, I'll try to please you!" I am sure he has succeeded, for the lilacs have been in bloom three times since that morning, and he is with Miss Abigail yet, growing tall, and strong, and manly, as the years go by. He tills the bit of a farm which had so long lain unimproved, and in winter attends school at the village where he is in excellent repute. He is so faithful and helpful and kind, that Prudence is fain to apothegmatize the horn after this

"Harnsome is as harnsome does; an you are deservin' of a bed o' velvet, ole horn, for the deed you done that day!'

THEY SAW SNAKES.

Terrible Battle of Three Colorado Men With a Sea of Serpents. Last night's Denver & Rio Grande train brought, says the Leadville Chronicle, three men who had just passed through an ordeal that is terrible to contemplate, and the many wounds go to show that the story they tell is but too true and horrible in its details. The men are E. W. Smith and George H. White, Jr., of Pueblo and Thomas Mc-Gough of Colorado Springs. They detail the account of their adventure about as follows: Nine miles from the mouth of Cottonwood Creek, up the stream, is a barren wilderness of scrubby undergrowth, and bowlders, and rocks, and stones. To stand on the verdant shore of this sea of waste land, one would naturally conclude taat they were many miles from nowhere, and, for aught they knew, were the first to discover this blank sea ot waste, barren. worthless fly-speck on the shirt-front of creation. The men were on a fishing expedition, and started Wednesday morning from the mouth of the Minnehaha stream to wend their way towards its source, when they reached the spot above mentioned. Here night overreached them, and having a lunch, they built a fire and made themselves as comfortable as possible on the surface of a shaggy mossed rock. Being tired and footsore, as soon as their scanty repast was eagerly devoured they were soon reveling in dreams, that, perhaps, are more or less pleasant to the mind while flitting in the realms of such fancies One of the party had not been tangled with Morpheus long until he was awakened by something choking him, and, feeling, found his strange collar was cold and slimy. It was a very fine spec-imen of the black species, which was girding his throttle in its anything but loving embrace The monster was soon dispatched, and the party were about to lie down again after ridding themselves of his snakeship, when they found by the aid of the dying embers, and the or there, as chance might dictate. It had grown dark, now—the lamps had long since been lighted; and there were the venom-tongued trailers. Two of the party proposed to decamp for a more congenial clime, but when about to leave the rock they found themselves gail; "you needn't go to-night; you trampling on a living sea of serpents. may sleep in the stable loft."

The hissing and rattling became more audible, and it was but a few minutes until it was as loud as ordinary toned commenced lashing the writhing sea of darting, hissing snakes, Realizing fhat they had an all-night job, they added ren waste into a tempest of hissing and Barry smiled at her from his post at the chopping block.

The waste into a tempest of missing and rattling. Each began the slaughter with redoubled vigor, vainly endeavor-Ing to fight their way to the stream, some hundred yards away, down a slanting hill. They would gain a few paces only to be driven back again to the out a word. But when she had prepared Miss Abigail's morning meal, she made ready a good substantial and substantial and hissing became so loud that their voices were not audible unless close by. The sound was something like four or first and hissing became so loud that their voices were not audible unless close by. made ready a good, substantial break-fast for Barry, also. When he had eat-terrible. The hair on their heads was standing straight and stiff like the wires elbows, and the stench from the snaky charms than the place it seemed their fate to die in. Two of the men were bitten and their legs and arms began to swell and pain badly, and they frequently had to rest and permit one to do the killing of three. The hours wore slowly by, and the slaughter was kebt up as est they. At last morning came and lifted the curtain of night from a most appalling scene. For fifty feet all around the huge rock lay a heap of stunned, squirming and dead snakes. As far as they could see all around the along the moist, brown highway.

"That is a very uncommon boy," said Miss Abigail, looking after him with seof reptiles that came toward the rock rious eyes.

"Yes," assented Prudence; "he's a clever enough little chap—for a boy."

"To think of his knowing about lilacs!" continued Miss Abigail, meditations and off the flowers this is better chance to care for their wounds. "An' he got as good a mess o' milk from the heifer as I could ha' done my-

"Yes, he would have been handy but milking and getting the wood for the continuity said Miss Abigail."
"An' britain' the water and reached the other side, completely overcome by the terrible ordeal just passed through, and after some time they bandaged their bleeding and swellen limbs." By nine o'clock they were sufficiently recovered to continue to Cottonwood a good piece over to the village in mud-dy walkin." Springs, where they took the first train for Leadville to secure medical aid, arriving here last night. They described the snakes as being specimens of all kinds, such as adders, vipers, copperand a racer, which they declare was no less than twenty-two feet in length. Death of Rev. W. G. Sprole. Rev. Dr. Wm. G. Sprole, for many years a prominent Presbyterian minister in Detroit, died in that city a few days ago, aged 75 years. Dr. Sprole had held other important pastorats, and for nearly 10 years was chaplain and professor at the West Point Academy. His West Point chaplaincy brought him an inter esting experience. There was some personal enmity between Dr. Sprole and Jefferson Davis and when the latter became Secretary of War, the minisiter was removed. It appears that the enmity between the two gentlemen first arose in Washington, where Dr. Sprole had charge of a church as pastor and while Jefferson Davis was in the United States Senate. What the quarrel be tween the two gentlemen was about i not stated, but Mr. Davis is reported to have said to Mr. Sprole, that if it was not for his white necktie he would give the preacher a sound threshing. At this remark Dr. Sprole took great umbrage, and in a twinkling he took the white necktie from his throat and said to Mr. Davis that he was ready for him. and that he need not stop on account of the necktie. This seems to have taken the pluck out of the fiery Southerner, and he concluded not to thrash Dr. Sprole. The doctor was a well built, powerful man. Mr. Davis, however, is reported to have never forgiven Dr. prole, and when the opportunity came obtained revenge by putting another man in Dr. Sprole's place at West It is said that a young lady can never whistle in the presence of her lover. The reason is obvious. He doesn't give her a chance. When she gets her lips in a proper position for whistling, something else always occurs.—Rochester
