While a wild Texan steer was being transferred from the pier to a steamer, in Bos ton, the animal broke away and ran at full speed through the streets. One little boy was caught on the horns of the enraged animal, and horribly gored, the horn tearing its way up through the throat, and the tongue torn entirely out. He was thrown high up in the air and then plunged to the ground. Several other persons were more or less injured. The steer rushed out on the pier and jumped into the water, but was finally las-oed and drawn to shore by the aid of a derick, and killed.

A dispatch from Washington says: The solicitor of the treasury rendered a decision that may ultimately lead to the breaking up of the practice of overloading passenger steamers. The law has been understood heretofore to provide that the government must proceed against the violators of the steamboat law only by information furnished by outside parties. In consequence vessels are often overcrowded with impunity. The solicitor of the treasury decides that it is within the power of government officials to directly prosecute owners of steam vessels for violation of the law. The decision was rendered on a test case brought from Florida.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A few weeks since we published a letter giving Colorado from one writer's point of view. Below we insert a communication from a former resident here considering Colorado from a somewhat different standpoint. The letter will doubtless prove very interesting:

EDITOR COURIER: In a late number of the Courier I read an extract from a let-ter written by Emory Townsend, in Colorado. He says: "there are thousands and thousands of acres of nothing but sage brush and sand. Step outside of any town, and that is all that meets your view except mountain scenery which is very fine.' Pity he could not have taken some of that | which all commercial values are establish back to Michigan with him, as I have no doubt he is there ere this. I would wager Arbor after his name on any hotel register in Colorado, simply E. Townsend, Mich. He thought that was near enough to locate his residence when he was so far from from home. But had he gone out among the sage brush and sand he would have seen a very small insignificant looking grass, he would also have seen thousands and thousands of horses, cattle, and sheep, fat and sleek from eating this self-same grass, on which, alone, they live and thrive the entire year making the millionaires he speaks of in Chevenne, and in many other towns throughout the State. In other places he could have seen luxuriant meadows where sage brush never grew. In other places he could have seen where the sage bush had been cleared off waving ain, the like of which cannot be grown in Michigan, in quality or quantity per acre. He says: "there is not a spear of clover, they cannot raise it." If he will come to Gunnison I will show him clover, timothy and blue grass equal to any grown in Michigan, and growing on the ground where the Ute Indians had their race course less than five years ago. I will ing has been heard of them. As Mr. B. show him in a town just four years old and is a poor man he cannot afford to lose where the rifle pits are not yet obliterated made less than four years since to protect what few inhabitants there were here at that time from the Indians, churches equal in number, capacity and finish to what Ann Arbor had in 1854 or when it was about twenty years old. I will show him three school houses that are far ahead of any that Ann Arbor had until the Union School house was built, that are equal to any Ann Arbor has to-day except I will show him a hotel equal, if not superior, to any hotel in Michigan. I will show him gas, and water works put exclusively. As to shade trees, we may not have any equal to the hard maple with which Ann Arbor is beautified, but they are not far behind. Cottonwood is not the only tree we have here, 'tis not the only tree they have in Denver. They have magnificent churches also. The other towns he cent churches also. The other towns he from our village, wish them success and prosperity in their new home. churches or shade trees. But people who come to Colorado to look for work in the shade are extremely liable to be disappointed, while there is plenty of room here for men of energy and determination. A friend of mine, a carpenter, came to Denver in the spring of 1879 he could not get work at his trade so he went to driving team at one dollar per day, and at the same time he was paying $7.00 per week for board, not very encouraging you will say, but it was better than nothing or loafing. Soon he had an offer of $2.00 per day and board which he accepted, and for the last three years he has had plenty of work at wages that would make an Ann Arbor mechanic think of starting a National Bank soon or taking a trip to Europe.

Now do not take it that I am saying any-in at an expense of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, of a capacity for a city of twenty-five thousand inhabitants. As to the women being as dark as Indians, he must have confined his attentions, while here, to the Mexican females thing against Ann Arbor, or Michigan, it was my home for eighteen years, it is where I got my education what little I have. Ann Arbor is a beautiful and thriving city. Washtenaw county is a rich and prosperous county, and Michigan is a great State of beautiful towns and splendid farms with fine farm buildings. There is hardly looking for three men to work at having, he could not find one. In one of our Gunnison dailies only last week I saw an advertisement for experienced men to run moving machines. In the Denver News of the 28th an advertisement for one thouof the 28th an advertisement for one thousand five hundred men to work on the Railroad at $2.25 per day and board at $5.00 per week, also for sheep herders, ranch hands, cooks and blacksmiths, looks as though a few men could find work here. If all the people in Michigan who are troubled with asthma would come to Colorado, nine out of ten of them would find entire relief at some altitude, so long as they stayed there, and people troubled with weak lungs, or consumption in the earlier stages, will find in our rarified air, and pine and spruce laden breezes, entire cases a permanent cure. C. E. TREADWELL.

COMMUNICATION.

We are in receipt of the following in weeks:

nterest an article on the subject of money, 50 cents. published in your paper, and, not agree-ing with the writer on the more promient points he presents, I have concluded to give you my views on the subject. The oney question is one of the most imporant subjects of the day. It affects every nterest of society, the industrial, agricultural, professional, and commercial; there-fore that money that fills its office in the cheapest, safest, easiest, and most correct manner, is the best. The first question to e settled is, what is money? Money performs two offices. It is a measure of value. and a medium of exchange. It is an invention to meet the demands of trade, just as the plow is an invention growing out of the necessities of agriculture. Phœnecians invented coin, about 1200 years before Christ. Previous to that all value of money as a medium of exchange, was ascertained by weight; hence the term shekel, so often used in the Scriptures, neans to weigh.

The commercial interests of the nations, as they advanced in civilization, led to the adoption of checks of deposit, and bills of exchange. "Fiat money" was introduc-ed by the Lombards in the eleventh century. Hence we see that money has existed in some form from the earliest dawn of civilization. It has differed as much in its denominations, as a standard of value, as the nations have differed that used them. And to-day there are no two nations that have the same standard; hence it cannot be assumed with any degree of correctness, that the cost of mining and the exmining the value of the coin; at least, there is nothing in the laws of Congress, or was not four years ago, on the subject but the value of gold and silver in markets of the commercial nations is taken to regulate the value of coins, in this and in other nations. The whole subject comes under the dominion of law; while the material out of which it is made has nothing to do with its office as a measure of value, or medium of exchange. Uncoined chunks of gold and silver have no more power as coal, until they are coined and their value established by law. Thus we see why 412½ grains of silver will pay a debt of one dollar any where in the United States of America, when 420 grains will not. It is the "fiat" of the law that makes all makes it. Our gold and silver coins are not money among any of the Eastern nations; but it will sell for what bullion is worth in the market, just as wheat or any other product does.

"Does Mr. Hall consider his bonds. mortgages, or notes of no more value to him than the cost of the paper on which they are written, cr printed? Does he consider the bonds of the United States of America worth no more than the cost of the material, and the expense of printing? I quote his language: "Such, too, is the true measure by which all commercial values are determined, including money' which has not and never will have any greater value, than the material on which the denominations are printed.'
But after all his illogical and unsound theories, 'for the edification of your readers' he virtually concedes his error, on the point of intrinsic value, by saving: "When oin is not desired, in exchange for bullion certificates convenient for currency should be substituted therefor," which, according to his statement in regard to 'fiat money, can never have more value than the "material on which the denomina-tions are printed." He says that the basis, which he has laid down for "establish ing the value of coin, is the principle by

Now I want to ask Mr. Hall "how we a box of cigars that he did not sign Ann farmers can possibly accumulate any wealth, if our products must be sold in the market only for the exact cost of raising and marketing them." Here, too, he is in error. The price of what is produced for the markets of the world is regulated on the principle of supply and de mand. When the market is overstocked, prices will be low, and when there is not enough to meet the demand, prices will be high. These facts are well established by every producer's experience, as Mr. Hall admits, in regard to the purchasing

The Huron County News of the 31st ult. reports some very daring robberies committed in that county last week by a man of the Jesse James type. Presenting a revolver he expected everybody to do his bidding, and was very successful in accomplishing the same recently in the vicinity of Port Austin.

Ann Arbor and vicinity had very hard frosts on Sunday and Monday nights cutting down things generally in field and garden. At 5:30 Sunday morning several thermometres stood at 30° here. We notice it was the same at Hillsdale. At the same time on the following morning 42° were registered here.

The Prohibition club last week elected O. R. L. Crozier, president; J. Q. A. Sessions, vice-president; James B. Saunders, secretary; S. T. Speechly, treasurer. The ward committees, elected at the caucuses last spring, were reindorsed. Ladies are to be admitted hereafter as members of the club. The club decided to take no part in the coming fair, if liquors are sold on the grounds.

George Keck, Louis Taylor and Charles Wagner at 5:30 p. m. last Wednesday started for a run to Ypsilanti going by the south road. Twenty-one years ago W. H. Holmes, now editor of the Republican, Waupaca, Wisconsin, informs us he was foreman of the COURIER when C. G. Clark was proprietor. In 1861 Mr. Holmes' brother and Mr. Wilstie were associated with Mr. Clark as proprietors. The two former were killed in the 20th. Mr. Holmes writes us that he has a wife and five children, his oldest girl, who is nineteen, working in the office with him.

It is doubtful if there are many notes of the Hungarian fund of 1852 now existing in this part of the country. The other day we were shown one by Mr. Jacobs. It is to the amount of $1.00, and it says: One year after the establishment in fact of the Independent Hungarian Government the holder is entitled to one dollar," signed, L. Kossuth. There is danger that this dollar is fated merely to be a memento of a struggle for liberty.

Two runaways occurred this week so far s reported: One near the Ann Arbor depot, the brewery team, throwing out of the wagon the driver and a little girl. No serious injuries were received by either. On Wednesday afternoon we noticed a runaway horse delivering lumber with more dispatch than necessary, in the vicinity of the M. C. freight depot. One man in attempting to stop the horse succeeded-in stripping the fly net nicely, to the amusement of lookers-on.

Didn't some one tell us that E. B. Hall had a new suit of clothes, or an old one rejuvenated? It must be, for one evening recently when he came home he was informed that his stock needed some looking after, and on his return to the house he saw just ahead of him what he took to be a black and white cat. It was, but not of the kind he supposed, and on attempting to jump over cat number one, he struck cat number two. The condition of E. B. need not be told, but it took a dollar's worth of perfume to make him presentable. Further deponent saith not.

The issue of the new postal notes began Monday, 3d inst., and Q. A. Turner secured No. I, from Assistant Postmaster Lathrop, for $1.00 to be sent to Cincinnati. Nos. 2 and 3 for 14 cents and $1.28 respectively were issued to Rev. R. B. Pope, the former going to Paul Pope at Petoskey, and No. 3 to the Chicago office. Such is the history of the first three postal notes issued at Ann Arbor. These notes ciety will hold their twelfth annual fair at may be had for any amount from 1 cent Ypsilanti the 26th, 27th, and 28th of Sep- to $4.99 at a uniform cost of three cents. There is nothing like it. Take three rustic sticks or poles of small dimensions, the uglier the better, and about six or seven feet long, fasten them together at the smaller ends five or six inches from the top, and stand them up tripod fashion in your lawn. From the intersection of the poles at the top suspend by a diminutive chain any old kettle you can find, the more antique the better of course, place therein a flower of some sort, anything that has a red blossom will harmonize best perhaps, paint poles, kettle and all a deep red, and you have our recipe for decorating your lawn according to the latest style adopted in this city.

Dr. Wilson received last week, and has on exhibition at his office now, a fine specimen of a mastodon skull found several cured for $1.75 on Thursday of each week | years ago in Crawford county, Pennsyl- | years of age. In 1854 he went to Morenci and vania. It was sent to him with a view to placing it in the museum, if satisfactory arrangements could be made for the same with the university authorities. The skull probably measures three feet in both width and length. There were probably six monstrous teeth on the upper and lower jaw each, three on a side. Four of them are preserved with the specimen, two each side, the crown of the teeth measuring from four to six inches in length and three in width. At one point on the skull may be seen a very smooth semicircular indentation, evidently the location once of an enormous tusk. We are informed that the specimen under consideration represents a thousand dollar venture of two persons who secured it for use in connection with a lecture upon his mastodonic majesty. It is evident that our mastodon possessed a very small brain, but it proved expensive enough to break up the parties referred to. The better to represent the comparative size of the skull, a horse's skull is placed along side of it, and shows the mastodon to be at least four times as large. It is said the remainder of this huge animal is in the British Museum. The skull weighs perhaps two hundred pounds, and will be a valuable acquisition to the museum if secured.

Obituary.

SMITH—Died in Adrian, Mich., August 27, 1883, Col. Sylvester B. Smith. Col.Smith was born in Raisin, Lenawee Co., Mich., September 19th, 1832. His father was one of the pioneers of the county and took up land from the government in 1834. Sylvester lived with his father upon the farm until he was sixteen years of age, when he engaged in other business. He received a fair education, and began to teach when eighteen acted as salesman and book-keeper for different firms until 1861. During his residence there he was elected clerk of the township of Senaca and also elected to other offices. At the breaking out of the rebellion he was active in raising recruits for the union army, his company being assigned to the eleventh Michigan infantry. He received the commission of major in August 1862. During the engagement at Stone river he was seriously wounded in the face and neck, which rendered him unfit for service afterward. Immediately after the battle, he was commissioned lieutenant Colonel, but was obliged to resign, and returned home in 1863. He moved to Adrian in the fall of 1864. Many and varied were the offices of trust that were conferred upon him, all of which he filled with honor, None ever questioned his honesty or integrity, but he ever had the confidence and esteem of the people. We have long and intimately known Col. Smith, and we think we are correct when we say that in his death Adrian has lost one of her most valued citizens. He was active in business, and ever aimed to exert an influence in the right direction. The cause of justice and humanity was ever near his heart. He was twice married and besides a large circle of relatives and friends he leaves a widow and two sons upon whom this bereavement falls with crushing weight. The leceased was a cousin of Miss Sarah Beal and Prof. J. B. Steere of this city.

If you are thinking of purchasing a cyclopedia, do not fail to avail yourselves of the offer made elsewhere on Appleton's American Cyclopedia. Notice the opinions of Drs. Work of the kind ever published.

Read what Professors Frieze and Winchell say of Appleton's American Cyclopedia.

University of Michigan, August 29, 1883. The American Cyclopedia published by the Messrs. Appleton is fully deserving of its name; the articles that make up its contents being in general peculiarly adapted to the wants of American readers and as comprehensive and complete as could possibly be expected in a work of Constant use of this admirable work for several months past has convinced me that it is decidedly superior to any other hitherto published in this country; and that it should have a place in every private as well as public library.

HENRY S. FRIEZE

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN, Chair of Geology and Paleontology, ANN ARBOR, Aug. 31, 1883. I have owned a copy of Appleton's New Cyclopedia ever since its first publication and have used it daily. In my scientific pursuits it has afforded me much aid especially in the line of biography and his-But it seems to me specially suited for the more general uses of an intelligent family. I have found my wife and daughters very frequently resorting to the Cyclopedia for precise information about some personage in literature or history or art, and have often done the same myself. Whatever other sources of information may be accessible, the Cyclopedia is almost accessible, for every subject stands in a fixed alphabetical position, found in an instant.

Without failing to appreciate the value of Appleton's Cyclopedia to one engaged in scientific pursuits, I think it especially adapted to family use; and I believe no more efficient impulse could be given to the education of a family and to the pro-motion of its general intelligence, than to place the volumes of this Cyclopedia where they can be constantly and conveniently consulted. My convictions on this point are so strong and so clear that I venture to say that a set of this Cyclopedia would, if used as it might be, quite double the value of every year's instruc-tion at school. I speak expressly of Ap-pleton's Cyclopedia because it is full enough to give satisfaction on every subject and not too profound for average good intelligence; while the same can-not be said of any other Cyclopedic pub-lication which I know in the English language. ALEXANDER WINCHELL, Prof. of Geology and Paleontology J. H. Slipper is the general manager or this and adjoining county. He will furnish you the work complete in 24 vol-umes within a few days after giving the order, and will only ask you to pay for two volumes. Once a month somebody will ask you to pay for one, thus giving you two whole years to pay for the work which is in your possession all the time. #### TWICE BURIED.

A Tale of the Rocky Mountains. BY MAJOR HAMILTON.

Half way from Leadville to the plainshalf way, and by a new trail running into the southwest and down along the canyon of the Platte; half way only, and my horse worn, my food gone, and night close at hand. Night in February—death, cold! I wrapped my blanket yet closer about my shoulders, and urged my steed forward through the gloaming Curse my luck!" I muttered. "Except for Black Dan's threat I would have gone by the stage in comfort. And yet, to have to brave his gang would have been certain destruction. I'll warrant they've ambushed the night coach, intending to catch me But I've slipped them this time, and Uncle Sam has the proof that he wants at last. Three days more, my rascals, and you'll jump these mountains or wear hand-cuffs, if I reach Pueblo alive." I shook Charley's reins to hasten his speed, and whistled cheerily to Don, my St. Bernard.

"We must reach Johnston's ranch on the Platte, old friends, or sleep out, and it's too cold for that," I muttered. I was returning from a search for certain desperadoes wanted in the courts at Pueblo The cut-throats had hidden in the mining camps about Leadville, and my search had been a long one. Finding them at last, however, and the proof of their crime with them, I was about to return and make arrangements for their arrest, when by some unknown means they learned who I was, and I fled. Fled, pursued by the wrath of the worst man between the Gunnison and Denver-Black Dan. Had he found me my life would not have been worth a toss of a card. I must reach the settlements quickly and return with a force in order to capture my game, and that without delay.

In the gloaming of the morning I had begun my perilous horseback journey; in the gloaming of the evening I was continwagon trail, and I believed that I had tricked my enemies.

The blackness of the canyon crept up, the narrow trail ran down, and among snow, and again along the bare earth, followed with watchful eye the indistinct path until, just at the verge of the las steep descent that should carry me into the river gulch I halted a moment to rest my weary horse.
"Only a little further, Charley," said I

he sprang toward the shadow of the pine behind me, a single lance of light, a ringing report, and without a moan I threw my hands quivering into the air, whirled eavily away from my horse and fell. Black Dan had found me.

Slowly, and with great pain, consciousness returned—consciousness, for my brain was still alive, but not personally, for or What had happened?

Laboriously my mind traveled through the midst of death that still surrounded in Slowly one idea followed another until a last came the knowledge that I sought. had been waylaid and shot. Yes, I remember now. Remembered the cry of my dog, the ring of a rifle, the shee of flame, the blow of the ball, and then-I had been shot and was dead.

And yet not dead, for pain revived, and dead men feel no pain. I was shot but not dead. And so came at last the conscious ness of matter. I still lived.

I sought to rise, but could not, for I was bound, bound hands and feet, arms, legs body, neck and head, fingers, lips and eye lids even, bound, yet not with cords. Where was I? What was the trouble? Nearer and still nearer came the truth as

I groaned in spirit and struggled to gain knowledge of myself; nearer and stil nearer, until with a mighty effort, throwing off all lethargy, I made one desperate at tempt to rise; but the damp weight of newly-turned earth pressed upon my heart the clinging bands of newly dug ear' bound me, and with a wild cry of horror and despair I recognized my situation—I was buried alive.

I did not faint at first-life was too dear -but lay simply deadened, crushed by the blow, the loose mould admitting air for my respiration, my poor stunned brain rolling these words up and down: "Buried alive! Buried alive!" until from sheet madness and loss of desire knowledge fled

And then it was the tongue of my dog that awakened me. Don dug me out and lapped e back to life again.

As the dull gray of the winter's morning

dawned, with groans I dragged my stiffen ed limbs from my narrow bed, and crep trenblingly down the trail toward the river, the blood oozing from a hole in my head, my eyes wild and fierce, my heart my life half gone.

As I thought, Black Dan must have for lowed and ambushed me, then, supposing me slain, he had the grace to bury me. It was owing to his haste or carelessness that my dog had been able to paw the loose dirt from my grave, and save me.

If I could reach Johnston's ranch I might live; if not, I had been saved but to die a second time, for a fierce storm was brewing along the mountain tops above my head. My horse was gone, my rifle, pistol, knife, gone; only the dog remained, and faithful to the last, followed as I slowly and painfully trod the descending trail n the direction of the river.

Suddenly amid a wild roar of wind and creaking of trees and whirl of freezing snow, the storm burst, and in its fury swept me from my feet, and rolled me, crying and shouting, far down the canyon side, until a great boulder caught and held

Then it raged on.

And as the darkness crept up from the east my dog, who all the day had laid at my feet, deserted me, speeding away through

And so, faint, wounded, cold, desparting as the moments grew life flickered, and when at last midnight broke my lamp went out. Aagain I lay unconscious. All night the gale continued, and not

When my eyes opened they point out, by a yellow tint or color, those which are mature enough for house-ripening, and if the stems cracks off when stretched they touched only the stone and the snow, when my tongue cried out no ears listened. Again I was entombed, and the fruit is partly lifted, they should not be left any longer on the tree. The fall-webb worm is now making very thought quieted me. There was no struggle, no moaning, no agony; only a dull recklessness and want of care for life that betokened the depth of my despair. I was dying. Slowly the moments passed. My thoughts were few and simple—thoughts of fire and flood, thoughts of home and friends and comfort, thoughts of things warm and bright, but even these were fading and my mind was wearily wrapping itself in the cloak of annihilation, and my body was sinking toward inanition when a bit of snow fell upon

A strong nad with the thought of life.

Nearer and nearer came the rescuing feet, deeper grew the pile of snow beneath me, brighter the light above. The whining was mingled with growls now. Don had friends to aid him. The barrier was but three feet thick-two-one, it was one, and even as I breathed the air of heaven and my heart leaped within me and my lips uttered a glad cry, a dozen pairs of great hollow eyes burned into mine, a dozen gaunt forms crouched before me gnashing their gleaming fangs. I had been rescued by a pack of mountain wolves. For a single instant I surveyed my enenies-I, weak, wounded and unarmed; they strong, hungry and ferocious, a dozen —and then with a well I sprang into their midst.

It was the act of a madman, but I was mad. Death should tear me limb from imb now, and with brave hands I clutched at the first grey monster before me, and grasped his shaggy throat as with hands of steel seeking to throttle him.

Then the entire pack with demoniacal howls hurled themselves upon me.

The struggle was short. I felt the hot breath of the brutes in my face, their red mouths yawned upon me; their strong claws tore my buck-skin shirt; their teetl snapped, when suddenly a great big white something was hurled from the bank of now above into the mids of the melee. A half dozen dark forms followed. Wild houts, mingled with pistol shots and neavy blows, broke upon my ears, the red blood of my assailants dyed the spotless snow; their hideous eyes faded before me, and falling backward, I felt myself caught by strong arms, and the well-known voice of old Johnston cried, "Saved, thank God!" A simple method of performing the rather difficult operation of grafting the walnut tree successfully is mentioned by the Revue Horticole as practic ed and recommended in France "One year-old seedlings are grafted in the orlinary way, close down to the root, and then potted and placed in a close frame in a propagating house, where the union is speedily effected."

Well-managed, clay soil is known to be capable of yielding the largest crops of grain; and, if properly drained, with greatest certainty. The reason usually given for this is that clay is retentive of both manure and moisture. But there is another reason of scarcely less importance. Insects that attack the roots of plants living unseen and often unought of or unsuspected, find it difficult to live or work in clay. They cannot penetrate it or they perish in it.
