Bad Breath; Pain in the Side, sometimes the pain is felt under the Shoulder-blade, mistaken for Rheumatism; general loss of appetite; Bowels generally costive, sometimes alternating with lax; the head is troubled with pain, is dull and heavy, with considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of leaving undone something which ought to have been done; a slight, dry cough and flushed face is sometimes an attendant, often mistaken for consumption; the patient complains of weariness and debility; nervous, easily startled; feet cold or burning, sometimes a prickly sensation of the skin exists; spirits are low and despondent, and, although satisfied that exercise would be beneficial, yet one can hardly summon up fortitude to try it—in fact, distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred when but few of them existed, yet examination after death has shown the Liver to have been extensively deranged. AN AWFLUL TRAGEDY.

Household Murdered in Cold Blood A tearful crime was enacted during the night of November 21, at the farm house of Jacob D. Crouch in the town of Summit, Jackson county. The murdered people are Jacob Crouch, an old resident of Jackson county and one of the most wealthy farmers, a widower, 74 years of age; Mr. Henry D. White, an elder brother of Dr. Georg J. White of Jackson; Mrs. Eunice Crouch White, daughter of Jacob Crouch, and Moses Polley, a stranger from Pennsylvania, who came to Crouch's house to buy stock. The first discovery of the murder was by the hired girl early in the morning She went to call Mr. Crouch, as was her custom on all mornings, when she found him lying upon his left side in bed, with his feet toward the wall, with a bullet hole behind the left ear, cold neighbors came and at once dispatched peobolt-heads will be secured to the second tier of ple to notify the officers in the city, who went out to see what could be done to unravel the fearful mystery and bring the murderers to justice. Upon the arrival of the officers an ex amination of the bodies was had, and it was found that all had been murdered by the bullet, Mr. Crouch, as above stated, being shot wife lay side by side in bed, and no disarrange ment of the bed clothing could be noticed, with the exception that the left foct of the former was partly uncovered Henry White was found to have been shot in the left side of the neck, and there was also a bullet hole in the top of the head. One hundred years ago, the 26th of November, the British forces withdrew from American soil. A century later the event was most enthusiastically celebrated in New York. Business was almost entirely suspended, and every energy spent to make the celebration one of the most magnificent of any ever held. The decorations were most elaborate, and the parade both marine and on land were attractive exhibitions. Points of historic interest were surrounded all day by patriotic citizens, anxious to recall the day and scenes of the times when the British withdrew from American soil and independence was really ours. President Arthur, Gen. Grant and other distinguished men of the times took part in the ceremonies. One principal feature of the celebration was the unveiling of the statue of Washington on the steps of the sub-treasury. Remarks were nade by President Arthur, and George Wiliam Curtis delivered an oration, which critics pronounce one of the grandest efforts of this alented man.

The propeller Manistee, one of the oldest and staunchest boats on the lakes, is believed o have been lost on Lake Superior. The Manistee left Bayfield Friday Nov. 15, for Ontonagon, and nothing has been heard of her since. Tugs were at once sent out in search of the lost propeller, and returned to port bringing articles of ship furniture marked 'Manistee." She is believed to have met he fate suddenly, as the China and Duluth left Bayfield an hour after the Manistee cleared that harbor, and neither of the former have seen anything of her. The direct cause of the disaster will ever remain a mystery, but the story is advanced that after she was well out to sea her machinery broke down, and she became unmanageable; or realizing something beyond the protection of land, she attempted to return, and in either case foundered. There were on board when the Manis tee left Bayfield, seven passengers destined for Ontonagon, and a crew of thirty persons, making a total of 37 lives lost. Tugs are still out, but no hope is entertained that any of the crew or passengers were saved. The Manistee was well supplied with small boats, General George P. Ihrie, elected to but the storm is said to have been the worst ever known on Lake Superior, and no boat could possibly have weathered it.

TUG ERIE BELLE, of Windsor, Ont., was blown up at Kincardine on the afternoon of November 21, and four of the crew of 12 lost their lives. What caused the accident will never be known. It is supposed the pumps which supplied the boiler had become choked in some manner, and that the trouble was not noticed by the chief engineer, who was in charge. The water got low, and when the pumps did force some into the boiler it had the same effect as sparks on gunpowder. THE H. J. JEWETT

A box of cartridges was found in his pocket. At the police station he readily replied to questions, but it seemed from his listless manner and the roving expression of his eyes, that the man was insane. When asked why he shot the man Blunkett, he said that he wanted to shoot some one, and he thought it might as well be Blunkett as any body.

The Murder Mania.

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY IN NEW HAMPSHIRE. Residents of the town of Laconia, N. H., were startled a few mornings ago by the story of a terrible tragedy that had occured in their

S. S. Andrews, a neighbor of James Ruddy, aged 40 years, employed in the Laconia Car Works, was alarmed by a woman's scream. He roused his son and hurried to Ruddy's house, whence the screams proceeded. They found Mrs. Ruddy, aged 36 years, lying on the ground beneath the front window, through which she had leaped. She was bleeding profusely, a d is said to have been cut all to pieces. She was properly cared for, assistance obtained. and the door of Ruddy's house forced open, when flames burst forth, and an alarm of fire was sounded. The flames were quickly extinguished, and the bodies of Ruddy and their only child, 41/2 years old, were found lying on the kitchen floor, both cut in a terrible manner and covered with the contents of a feather bed, which had been saturated with kerosene and set on fire. The bodies were so disfigured by the flames as to be nearly past recognition. In a bed room was found the trunk of the lifeless body of Mrs. Ford, which was identified by her husband. One of her limbs had been chopped off, and the detached member and remaining leg bound to the woman's body with a clothesline. The bed clothes had been saturated with oil, piled on the body and an attempt made to set them on fire, which falled. Mrs. Ruddy, being questioned, said the crime was committed by Thomas Samon, an Englishman and ac quaintance of the family, a cook by trade, about 36 years of age, with a hatchet.

Mrs. Ruddy's statement before the coroner's jury was: We went to bed about 9 o'clock. At 11 Samon came into the front room and looked out the window, saving he was neryous and could not sleep. I got up and made him a cup of tea and went back to bed. At four o'clock Samon came into the front room again and acted queerly. He went back into the kitchen. My husband and I got up, and he also went into the kitchen. I soon heard a fall, and going out found my husband hanging over a chair, with his arms down. Samon started for me, and struck me with the hatchet on the head. I grabbed his arm, but he then struck me and threw me to the floor. He went into the front room and killed baby, who was erying. While he was there I tried to unlock the kitchen door, but he returned again and struck me on the head, striking me down. I laid perfectly quiet. He went back into the front room and got baby, and then came back and poured feathers and straw over us and went out. I got up and tried to open the front window, but could not. I then broke a pane of glass and jumped through. He was very nervous in the kitchen nearly all night. It is stated that Samon took Mrs. Ford's oody to Ruddy's house Saturday morning in a trunk, where it remained until the tragedy occurred. The coronor's inquest rendered a verdict that the persons came to their death at the hands of Thomas Samon. Samon was subse quently arrested near Plymouth, about 20 miles from the scene of the murder. Suspicion is very strong that Ford, the husband of the murdered woman, is implicated in the crime, and he has been arrested. A BLOODY DEED AT ORANGE, N. J Phoebe Paulin, of West Orange, N. J., was found murdered on a lonely road, mutilated in a terrible manner. She had been to visit a sister, and it is supposed that she was waylaid by a tramp, as it is not known that the girl had ever kept company with any man. Her person showed that she had been brutally assaulted.

INDIANA'S TRIPLE TRAGEDY. Ral Scott, after two years' separation rom his wife, returned to her home near Eaton, Ind., twelve miles north of Muneie, the other day, and insisted that she should live with him again. She refused, when he stabbed her to death with a knife, then killed his own child and took a dose of morphine, from which Congress meets on Wednesday next.

Congressman Eldridge of this district has gone to Washington and taken up a residence on 3 street Capitol Hill, within two blocks of the capitol.

Work on the Washington monument at the Capitol has been stopped for the winter, leaving the staff 410 feet in height. It is already the highest structure on the continent, and in fact has not many rivals in the world which overtop it. The spire of the Antwerp cathedral is about its present height while the great tower of the Campanile of St. Mark's at Venicethe highest bell-tower in the world has its top one hundred feet below the Washington monument.

THE TAPPAN SCHOOL.

The new school building in the sixth ward of this city will soon be ready for use. A visit to it this week showed us one of the most neatly constructed buildings for a school of this grade it has been our privilege to see. One is possibly surprised in finding but four school rooms in what seems to be from the outside a building large enough to contain more rooms. It is evident, however, that the bailding is constructed with a view to convenience, and not for the purpose of seeing how many rooms can be got out of a given amount of space. In every one of the four rooms the double desks are so placed that the light comes from the left through five large windows.

There are fine blackboards in each room, and well-arranged apparatus for heating and ventilating. To aid in carrying out an exceptionally complete system of ventilation and heating there is a fireplace with neat mantel in every room. The building is principally heated by steam conducted through coils of pipe attached to the wainscoting just below the outside windows of each room.

The main entrances to the bu the north side are two in number, leading to a roomy hall, from which, at each end there are wide stairways to the hall above Convenient cloak rooms are provided above and below. The basement, we take it, is arranged for the use of a family having charge of the building. The northwest corner of the building has a tower, and the general outside appearance is of a modern and quite unique style of architecture, yet withal pleasing. The wainscoting and finish in general throughout the building is of pine, the stair-work, however, being in oak.

It may be of interest to know that Prof. Payne, of the University, requested his classes in teaching to visit the building last Saturday. General pleasure was expressed with the structure as a whole. One objection was, however, offered to the desks-that they are double. It was thought they might better be single, even at an increased expense, the advantages gained thereby being considered not a few. It only remains for us to add that in Tappan School, costing about $11,000, our cit zens may congratulate themselves on having one of the finest lower-grade school buildings in the State.

From the Observer. Already this fall up to date of Nov. 17th, E. A. Hauser, our grocer and poultry man, had shipped 25,084 pounds of poultry. Last week he shipped 10,084 pounds, and has large quantities on hand now which he will ship in a few days.

Quite an excitement occurred in our quiet village Saturday night. One James Dett, of Ann Arbor, and his wife do not seem to be living happily together, and have spasmodic spells of trouble, tears, and sighs. The wife has been in the cmploy of the family of Geo. W. Lindsey of this place, for a few weeks past, and Saturday the husband came to see the wife. In the evening he came to the house, only the wife and Mrs. Lindsey being present.
After the bandying of a few hasty words
he pulled a revolver and shot at his wife, the ball passing just over her shoulder.
Mrs. Lindsey fainted and the wife fled.
Deputy Sheriff Gillen took care of the shootist until Monday morning when he was discharged. The wife then got out a warrant at Ypsilanti for the husband's arrest, and the examination was to have been yesterday, but was adjourned until next Monday.

YPSILANTI.

From the Ypsilantian. Everybody is delighted at the union of he Ypsilanti and Ann Arbor societies for the presentation of St. Paul. A laughable runaway occurred at the depot Sunday in which a decrepit horse threw three men and demolished a buggy while going at about five miles an hour. The central telephone office [Ann Aroor] claims to be able to smell the mineral water whenever the two towns are con-nected. Another case to be added to the ists of recommendations.

Frank Towler and Willie O'Brien, two lads of this city, attempted, to steal a ride from Ann Arbor to this city on the Day Express Wednesday afternoon, but were caught and locked in a coach closet by the train men. When the train arrived here the window was found broken and the closet empty. Search was then made by a gang of men until midnight without result, and Thursday morning it transpired that the boys had successfully jumped the train near the gas house.

From the Commercial. One good way to cure newspaper borowers is to carefully cut out some item on receiving your paper. The borrower's boy will come after the paper, and as soon as it is seen at home he will be sent to the office to buy a new one so that his folks can read the clipped article.

Like thunder roll resounds the cry; Like sword-clash; like waves clashing high The Rhine, the Rhine, our German Rhine, Who will defend in battle line? Dear Father-land, of doubt no sign,

For firm and true we guard the Rhine. Our hundred thousands feel the thrill, Eyes flash with fire, no heart is still. The German, honest, reverent, strong, Defends the stream its course along.

He lifts his eyes to heaven in prayer, Sees hero-fathers gathering there, And swears, eager for battle strife, German I'll keep thee as my life.

Till the last blood drop leaves each heart, Till sword and hand forever part; Till the last hero lies in gore,

Along the Rhine, our Holy Rhine, Stand we all in protecting line.

Market Reports. Its various editions are now read weekly by more

Its various editions are now read weekly by more than 150,000 people.

In our Literary department we shall furnish the choicest of reading matter, both in prose and verse, original and selected. The paper will be kept pure in character, elevated in tone, and in sympathy with the best moral sentiment.

The Letter Box furnishes in the course of a year a vast amount of valuable information on a great variety of topics.

The Hearth and Hall provides an admirable medium for exchanging views upon home subjects, and is especially devoted to topics in which the ladies are interested.

The Agricultural department is under the charge of an experienced and pract cal agriculturist, and is invaluable to all tillers of the soil in Michigan, all its articles being expressly prepared for them, and especially adapted to their wants. In short, no effort or expense will be spared in making The Post and Tribune the most attractive, best arranged and most complete Family Newspaper ever published in Michigan.

No Paper published in Chicago or elsewhere can compare with The Post and Tribune in the fullness and variety of news of all kinds especially needed and desired by the people of Michigan.

The Presidental year of 1884 is at hand. Republicans must bestir themselves if their political supremacy is to be maintained in the State & Nation. There is no such certain means of inculcating sound Republican doctrine and convincing men that duty and interest combine in urging them to support the Republican party and its candidates as the wide circulation of a good Republican Newspaper.

For this reason we urge our friends everywhere support the Republican party and the sepublican as the wide circulation of a good Republican Newspaper.

For this reason we urge our friends everywhere to see that the Weekly Post and Tribune has the largest possible number of New Subscribers. Its circulation ought to roll up to 100,000, and can reach that figure if the proper effort is put forth. That such an increase would help powerfully to give the Republicans of Michigan an assured and glorious victory in this state next year there can be no manuer of doubt.

We confidently appeal to every good citizen, to every earnest Republican, to aid us in this good work. It will pay. Nothing shall be lacking on our part to make The Post and Tribune worthy of the confidence of every citizen of Michigan, whose present intere-ts are ours and whose future we expect to share. Remember, the Weekly edition is only One Dollar a Year.

The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city

missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachu setts Supreme Court, writes as follows: "78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882. MESSRS. J. C. AVER & Co., Gentlemen: Last winter I was troubled with a most uncom my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AVER'S ARSAPA-RILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were alwayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the Sarsaparilla, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.

Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."

REUBEN'S BEGGAR.

"You were more kind than wise. Charity ought to begin at home," Eve Walworth said, with a very decided and unamiable pout.

"I hate maxims," Reuben Wright retorted, balf in annoyance, half indignantly. "And I really could not epulse the old fellow, Eve; he seemed so sick and miserable; his distress seemed so genuine."

"And because an ordinary beggar happened to seem all that, you gave him your last dollar and walked five miles through the dreadful storm," the girl said contemptously. I do not wonder Will Chadock was amused; Vill would do nothing so absurd, I am cer-

The young man's dark eyes flashed and his cheeks flushed a sullen red. "I am equally certain that Willis would never do anything of the kind," he returned in nettled tones. "I admit that he is quite incapable of any indiscretion in the score of generosity.

"I hate sarcasm," the girl said loftily and with roguish intent. "It is even more objectionable than quoting proverbs. But I daresay Will would nct mind; conscious of superiority, he can afford to ignore or despise any spiteful animadversion." Reuben turned toward her with a look of unaffected surprised. "You seem fairly confident about the man's perfections," he commented slowly in a displeased and questioning "Of course I should never presume that you could be jealous of an inferior, she answered rashly and rudely. "And I should have never presumed that you could be so ungracious and he declared crossly. 'Am I ungracious because I choose to return saure for satire?" she queried defensively. "Am I silly because I approve the good of a gentleman who-who-" she suddenly hesitated whih a brilliant blush that was rather enligten-ing to her aroused lover. With extreme irony and some exaggeration he finished the incomplete sentense for her. "Who desires perhaps to succeed in your affections my most unluckey self," The irony, the accusation implied, stung the spirited and perverse girl to a swift unreasoning resentment petence; or of what is none the less deplorable-ignorance of thrift; injudicious liberality, indiscriminate charity, she said harshly and slyly, too.

"You begrudge my poor beggar his alms, obviously," Reuben remarked, laughing despite his vexation. He loved her with a man's best love - this slender girl with her bright face, her dazzling eyes of bonny blue, her shining hair of richest gold; and she was to be his wife, sometime, when he would have made a house fitting He loved her unutterably—this handsome, ungrateful girl, for whose sake he had battled manfully against an ineredible series of monetary disasters. He had indeed been unlucky; his prospect of a goodly legacy had been spoiled by some singular legal technicality; a prodigal and unscrupulous partner had bankrupted a tolerably prosperous business, and an insolvent bank had completed the ruinous category.

The home that was to be so dear and delightful seemed sadly far away; and latterly the manner of his betrothed wife had been neither comforting nor encouraging. Her moods perplexed and depressed him, her little sharp speeches, her saucy little affectations that once he deemed so witty and charming, he now fancied were altogether too meaning; and he could only feel grieved and affronted. And more galling than all was the notion that Willis Chadock had in some way made "the little rift within the lute" that was silencing all the music, embittering all the sweetness, of his pleasant love-einating man; not so young certainly, but he had an aristocratic countenance. a high bred mien, and great expressive black eyes, and he was a master of cunly the sort of gay, plausible pretentious individual whom an impulsive and sus-ceptible girl might exalt into a prince

But it Eve was faultily impulsive, she was discerning also; and her susceptibility was tempered by an innate ab-horence of all that is insincere and ig-She was vexed with her promised husband; she was momentarily dissatisfied with him, perhaps; she had meant possibly to tease and arouse him. But then her pretty little assumptions before manifested the slightest irritation at her most capricious and tanta-

some coquettish gratification; but she could scarcely be blamed if she preferred the wealthier and more fortunate man, whose devotion was so unmistakable and persistent. And then Reuben had never seemed to care; he had never interposed the smallest jealous remonstrance; to accuse him of jealousy was insolent, cruel and ridiculous.

She was too wilful and too provoked effects of the poison in his system can just then to vouchsafe any amends for her offense; that grieved him more than she could know. But after he had left her, coldly, with averted face and angry eyes, she began to feel somewhat penitent and wholly uncomfortable. For a long time she sat by the window meditating, absently watching the big snowflakes whirling down through

Presently a curious figure appeared through the thick white storm, hobbling through the deep, soft drifts, and halted at length on the lowest step before her door. The figure was that of an extremely aged man, whose long locks, pay." white as the snow around him, clung "I should like to know what necessadamply about his palid and withered cheeks. v resonant winter-air. "I bes here for Misther Wright, when he'll be comin',' Eve watching at the window, heard him say. "He bes a rale gintleman-God love him!-as lint me the dollar in the storm this day week. Yees may save yer fine cane, Misther Chadyck, for another fine thafe like yersilf; for thaving it is, and no less, owin' when he had the plenta, than be bating and honest man wid your unholy sthick. the cakes. It is yerself as would have the swate trouble if I tells Misther Wright how yees put up the mind of a dhirty lawyer to chate him of his own legacy. to be your thrue wife." The girl's cheeks burned scarlet as listened. In an instant she had sprung from her seat and flung open the door, and stood gazing with scathing contempt down upon Willis Chadock, who was perceptibly uneasy, although there was brazen assurance and an odious sneer still upon his countenance.

"Miss Eve, my dear girl." he began mellifluously; but she interrupted him by an imperious gesture. "I believe all this poor man has as erted," she said firmly and haughtily.

And as he bowed submissively and turned away he understood that thenceforth he must be a stranger to her and Atthe sound of her voice the old man tottered to his feet and extended toward the paper he had just unfolded.

"It means, my darling," he said in wonder, "that my beggar is not a beggar at all. He is one of the most eccentric men in the city, a miser by eputation, and very wealthy. This is his check—a loan until I shall have prospered sufficiently for convenient payment-for an amount quite enough for me to re-establish my business, and to claim my bride whenever she may be pleased to come to me.

Mr. Timothy Cole, the most widely known of American wood-engravers, abroad in the interest of the Century Co, to engrave for publication in the Century the masterpieces of Europe. He expects to work in the galleries of Holland, Belgium, France, Spain, Italy, Germany, and perhaps Russia (St. Petersburg), and will remain abroad about three years. This is an entirely new departure on the part of the magazine, for although it has become by no means uncommon in the search for new and interesting material to send Amercan artists and writers abroad, and even to fit out expeditions to distant places, Mr. Cole is the first engraver who has been sent across the Atlantic for the express purpose of engraving the masterpieces of art. I am not alone in the belief that the result will be a series of wood-engravings surpassing anything of the kind in existence. The Lounger, in "The Critic,"

The above depicts a very pleasant feature of bicycling as a sport. The club have ridden from their headquarters in the city, to a suburban village some twenty miles away, where they await the arrival of the racing members who were to startjust thirty minutes later.

Five minutes more and the two foremost of the racing men—Fri, on his "Harvard," and Yonson on his "Yale," appear in sight. The pace is tremendous: the men are neck and neck, and Dodges, the captain of the club, whom you observe is leaning on his "Shadow" light roadster, in the foreground, declares the race a tie.

"Where are the other men?" he asks.

"Oh, behind, somewhere," is the reply.

"Are there any 'Harvard's' or 'Yale's' or 'Shadow's' among them?"

"Not one."

"Ah! that accounts for it," says the captain. American bicyclers as a body will realize the force of the captain's last remark, but the thousands of new riders which the coming year will produce, should each one of them realize that the only true economy in choosing a bicycle is to be content with nothing less than the very best that money will procure. Each should find out all he can about bicycles before making his choice, and in order to assist enquirers in their search for information, we will, on receipt of a a three-cent stamp, send to any address, a copy of our large illustrated catalogue by return mail.
