GREEDY FLAMES

Consume Much Valuable Property in Chicago, Cleveland and St. Louis.

Saturday, January 5, was a severe lay for the firemen in several large cities. With he thermome er ranging from 6° to 24° beow zero, it may be imagined under what tryg circumstances the brave men worked.

Several disastrous fires occurred in Chicago on the night of the 4th inst., and early on the oruing of the 5 h fire was discovered in Beauviage flat, on Michigan avenue, one of the nest imposing residence structures in the south ivision of the city, and the flames spread with rapidity which caused a number of families to seek the street in their night clothes. Frouble was experienced in working the engines on account of the cold. The building vas badly burned and flooded inside. No lives ost. The escaping occupants took refuge in the Leland flotel, adjoining the burned building. The building was six stories high, con-ained fifteen flats and housed 110 people. Toe beautiful new Park theater in Cleveland, Dhio, built to be fire-proof, was burned. The fire is said to have originated on the stage from a lamp explosion. Loss, perhaps $200,000; partly insured. No lives lost, though there were many very narrow escapes.

In St Louis fire broke out in the block bounded by Third, Fourth, Locust and St. Charles Streets. The fire department was badat the burning of the old St. Nicholas hotel the night before. They were almost helpless with the thermometer at 20 degrees be ow zero Nothing but good, thick substantial walls could keep the fire from destroying the entire block. Burrell & Comstock furniture dealers, were entirely burned out, and the fire went through both partition walls at the sides. The Goodyear rubber company was on one side, and Merrick, Walsh & Phelps, jewelry dealers, on the other. The fire swept through the latter and then spread to the next store north, occupied by Whittman, Emery & Kaminski. Comstock & Burrell lose all, $75,000. The jewelry house is a total loss, probably $40,000. Whiteman, Emery & Kaminski, chinaware Burch and Stephen Fairchild were elected directors for the coming year. At the board, meeting, following adjournment of general meeting at 5 p. m., H. D. Platt was elected president, and Mr. Fairchild, secretary.

From Secretary Fairchild's annual report for the year ending Dec. 31, 1883, we take the following items:

Number of members Dec. 31, one year ago, 2,050. Number added during present year, 136. Number now in the company, 2,009, the number who have withdrawn during the year, etc., being 177. Net amount of property at risk by company now $4,022,770, as against $4,105,-580, on Dec. 31, '82. Total available resources, $4,022, 996.06. Total liabilities, $1,125. Total receipts and income, $18,-547.83. Of the last amount $10,668.76 were collected on assessments levied during the year. Losses paid during the year, (of which $489.77 occurred in former years) $6,297.42. Salaries and fees paid to officers and directors, $1,153.45, as follows: To directors-H. D. Platt, $139.-J. W. Wing, $101.99; E. M. Cole, $60.35; Horatio Burch, $89; to Stephen Fairchild, secretary, $599; to T. B. Goodspeed, ex-director for 1882, $83; to various assistants, $80.35. All other expenses, (including office rent, printing, postage, stationery, $10,160 borrowed money, etc.) $11,062.40. Total expenses, $18,547.83. Cash on hand, $34.56, as against $384.27 on Dec. 31, '82. . One assessment was made during the year, the amount of all the assessments for the year being $10,-860.26. The rate per cent. of each assessment on the property insured was .00275. No surplus fund was raised on the last assess ment, and the company will probably not provide for such fund hereafter. The company pay two-thirds of damage on actual loss sustained on real or personal property.

AYER'S Hair Vigor restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured. It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every FOR ALL SKIN UNFAILING REMEDY SUCH AS DISEASES disease peculiar to the scalp. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of Aver's Hair Vigor, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. Bowen, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AVER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The VIGOR is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction." MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time procureth, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a mat-ter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

It was found that affidavits must be asked from parties competing, in order properly to distribute the prizes. The com- Campus. mittee met on Saturday last and made the awards, Dr. Jones being number seven on the list.

Entertainments.

The play at the opera house to-morrow night is one very generally admired. A New York paper has this: Charles L. Davis produced his comedy, "Alvin Joslin," at the Windsor Theatre last evening, and gave a large audience an opportunity to enjoy three hours of hearty laughter. Mr. Davis's impersonation is mirth-provoking and last evening he was greeted with roars of laughter and applause. Another paper says that Mr. Davis is certainly the best old man actor on the stage. We never heard such shouts of laughter or saw an audience so full of mirth as that of last night. "Alvin Joslin" is the most mirthprovoking and enjoyable comedy ever seen upon the St. Paul boards.

Dr. R. G. De Puy, lit. '79, homcop. '80, has recently been the victim of an attempted blackmailing scheme of a lady patient in Jamestown, Dakota, where he has been in practice since his graduation. The trial, which was in progress for a number of days, was brought to a close on Monday, the 31st ult., the case being presented to the court in the afternoon. At the close of the argument the court announced at once that there was no evidence which warranted his holding De Puy for trial in the district court, and he was therefore dismissed. The decision was received with cheers by the crowded courtroom. The docfor has our congratulations on the above result. AYER'S Sarsaparilla

Gout, General Debility, Catarrh, and all disorders caused by a thin and impoverished, or corrupted, condition of the blood; expelling the Macd-possons from the system, enriching and renewing the blood, and restoring its vital zing power. During a long period of unparalleled usefulness, AVER'S SARSAPARILLA has proven its perfect adaptation to the cure of all diseases originating in poor blood and a weakened vitality. It is a highly concentrated extract of Sarsaparilla and other blood-purifying roots, combined with Iodide of Potassium and Iron, and is the safest, most reliable, and most economical blood-purifier and blood-food that Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

"AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has cured me of the Inflammatory Rheumatism, with which I have suffered for many years. W. H. Moore." Durkam, Is., March 2, 1882. "Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took Ayers's Sarsaparilla, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with the Rheumatism since. Have soid large quantities of your Sarsaparilla, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public.

E. F. Harris."

River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

"Last March I was so weak from general debility that I could not walk without help. Following the advice of a friend, I commenced taking AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and before I had used three bottles I felt as well as I ever did in my life. I have been at work now for two months, and think your SARSAPARILLA the greatest blood medicine in the world. JAMES MAYNARD." 520 West 42d St., New York, July 19, 1882. KATY'S CONQUEROR.

From the Boston Budget. She was the merriest, prettiest girl in the whole shop. She sang from merning until night She was never idle, and when the other girls stopped their sewing machines to talk about their "fellers," hers kept whirring away like a noisy bee that had no time to extract honey from the roses of life. Not that she was unsociable. Bless you, no! When her work was done for the day, she was as chatty and companionable as need be, and her odd remarks about men and their ways, were full of genial satire, that was perpetually entertaining, She had no leanings towards the stronger sex, she said, Sl.e did not need the supporting arm of any of them. She was able to get along without a masculine hewer of wood and drawer of water, and she supposed he might be able to fight his way through the forest of life without her assistance. Anyhow, she was determined that he should. If he failed, so much the worse for him, and so much the better for her. She would preserve her independence, and he would not have the excuse of an incumbrance in his downfall, She was able to support herself, When the possibility of being taken sick was presented to her, she replied, that she had some money in the savings bank, and when she had passed her days of active labor there was the old woman's home to go to, where she might on quite as inde-pendent as if she was filling the place of a needy mother-in-law, or living on

This may appear cynical in print, but it was said with such a joyous freedom from all forebodings regarding the future that it was greeted with the merry retorts that usually attend the utterance of a favorite but somewhat wayward child. No one was offended and she meant no offense. It was simply the philosophy of the or one whom cupid had passed by in his somewhat promiscuous showering of darts among her girlish associates. Her waiting lover was unknown in corners far or near, and when she went home at night, if she did not chance to have a feminine companion, she was content to go alone as merrily, aye more so, oftentimes, than the girl who had an impatient attendant who found fault if she were five minutes late in keeping her appoint-

To theaters, to concerts and other entertainments she always paid her own Indeed her independence was carried to such an extent that she once mortally offended a rich old uncle from the country, who had not a living relative in the world, by refusing to allow him to pay her fair in the horse

But the wisest of us make some mistakes. There are vulnerable points in the strongest mortal armor, and some we may try to hide them. There came n our heroine. Katv. was off her guard. It was after the death of a feminine friend, to whom she was much attached and over whose remains there had been a particularly pathetic prayer recited, which left our modern, everyday Beatrice in an unusually sentiment-

After the funeral of this girl Katy met a young man who appeared to be as deeply despondent over the loss of this "rosebud plucked in the springtime of life," as the parson phrased it, as Katy was herself. He was, moreoverer, the brother of the minister, who had recently been married, and he bore a striking resemblance to his clerical relative, though he was cast in a somewhat more mascaline and less d, speptic mould. It was Katy's luck, ill-fortune, or what you will, to be placed in the same carriage with him as the solemn cortege proceeded towards the grave; talking over the virtues of the r dear, departed friend they gradually came to see rare virtues in each other. This led to brotherly and sisterly intimacy, which grows upon the tree of conjugal love. On her part the attachment was wholly unselfish. On his-Well, we shall see.

Their intimacy, of course, soon got noised abroad. In a workroom full of young women of a marriageable age how could it be otherwise? It was in vain that she protested that he was only a friend-a brother. There were many knowing shakes of the head when thi was said, as if most of the girls had not been without a similar experiences, and when she came down to the shop one morning and told her nearest and dearest female chum that she was engaged, with many injunctions regarding absolute secrecy about the maiter, it was not surprising that there were many "I told you sos," floating about it considerably less time than it would have taken Puck to make his proposed journey around the world.

They were a rather good-looking couple on the whole. All the girls acknowledged that, though they did say that she was rather too slight of figure, and had a flush in her cheeks that would have been less alarming if the rouge pot and not nature had placed it there. He-well, he was tall, broad shouldered. well-formed and apparently in perfect health. There was an undefinable something about him, however, which suggested the lounger at the afternoon matinee, the young man who is always well dressed and apparently has nothing to do. There was a sleekness about his well-oiled hair, his dyed mustache and his clean-shaven face that did not inspire confidence among the worldly wise. His manner was not exactly flashy but it was what the girls call "off-handed." He could give a joke and take one with the good-natured tolerance of one who regarded woman as perhaps a necessary appendage to the comfort of lordly man. He had what is called a masterful way with him, and the girls liked it. In spite of female suffrage, there will always be women who will give their hearts to a conqueror, when they will refuse them to a slave, and Katy was bound to the chariot wheels of the victor.

There were plenty of tearful farewells when Katy's last night's toil was over in the work-room where she had labored so long. All the sharp things, all the jealousies, all the rivalries were forgotten as she kissed all of her companions, and said she would never come back to the little window again where she had been so very, very happy. they must all come to see her, for she would be always glad to see them for the sake of dear old times. Then she went out of the door, and they all looked after her with a reproachful feeling in their gentle breasts against that power which had brought so much happiness to some people and so little to others.

The prayers were said, the service done, as the poet has it, and Katy and hage Robert, or Bob as his friends called day.

him for short, were man and wife They had apparently a happy honey moon, though people did say after the three months were over, that it was about time that Robert was finding something to do. He was not in any employment when the marriage took place; but there was, he said; a man in is brother's church who was going to give him a place at a salary of $2,000 a year, as soon as he got a patent through for one of the greatest inventions that had been made in fifty years. In point of fact, he was to have a share in the business as soon as it was fully established. In the meanwhile, it would be foolish for him to accept another his brother had accepted a call else situation, though there were hundreds of places open to him. Time went on, vill be wet where, and the man, if he ever had any interest in Robert, had lost it. Noth eather. ing was heard of the patent, and still the young husband was idle, and apparently, to outsiders at least, making no effort to be otherwise. Katy was cheerful through it all, and when he came home looking very despondent-from the billiard room, some were malicious enough to report -she was always sympathetic and regretted, in a very wifely manner, his ill-luck in scratches a door, table or other object procuring employment. The following morning she would go down to the pank and draw once more upon her little hoard, which was melting away like the snow before the sun of a late spring day. At last it was gone, and want, which had been peeping in at the window, finally came boldly in through the front door. The old story was re peated. The trinkets went first, and then articles more useful and less ornamental followed. Where? You who have known the delusive hope that lies n a pawn ticket need not ask.

Then the selfishness which lies at the bottom of all self-ind algent natures began to show itself more decidedly. In little ways at first but finally boldly and uncempromisingly. It really gave the young wife a shock one day when at their scantily spread table, on which there was barely enough for two, the ousband said, after devouring more rises even during bad weather fair than his full share of viands: "Say, sis, you don't want that piece of pie, do you?" She passed it over to him without a ther comment or apology. And so it red the next day there will be a strong went on. There was always something grudging relatives, who counted every n their continually narrowing supply copper that it cost them to support her, of provisions that he indicated he needed more than she did, and she constant-ly yielded, and forgave him too.

One morning he got up as early as Bill sikes. Hugoed nature had departed entirely, and he said without circumlogution: "Say, Katy, when are you going Home Influences.

Does a boy love to be away from nome, out evenings, and the like? Make t more pleasant to remain at home than to be away, which may be done by pleasant reading in the family circle, or by the amusement and instruction afforded by many of the games now in the market. These attractions will be of far more service than mere restraint and unreasonable control, brute force. And here it may be remarked that, while parents have the right to inflict physical pain by the use of the rod, etc., it is of but little importance as a means of restraint when it is wholly depended upon, though its true use i a "means to an end." The mother's greatest power and influence is in her nental and moral superiority over her child. Her superiority physical, if used judiciously, may illustrate and enforce her higher superiority. It is as true that the wrong use of the rod, when in anger, may as certainly "spoil the child" as its disuse. But, in short, remember that any power either of the body or of the mind, a strengthened by proper use, by judicious exercise, and that indolence and disuse will as certainly diminish power. The arm of the blacksmith. for example, by steady use in swinging the heavy hammer, as contrasted with that of the jeweler. becomes strong, its muscles wonderfully developed and firm, while the same arm would waste away, the muscles diminish in size and firmness, if that man should become a jeweler, or should fail to use those muscles. On the same principle, any power of the mind or soul may be increased or diminished by the adoption of the requisite means. And since selfishness is the opposite of benevolence, to remove the one or modify it is to develop the opposite by the exercise of that faculty. Indulgence naturally increases power, while restraint, self-restraint, diminishes such power. It is possible, it is believed, to modify and improve any unamiable, disposition simply by developing what may be desired by the pleasant exercise of the opposite faculty, and by proper restraints. If the horse for example, can be improved in body, color, and in disposition, it would seem as reasonable to attempt the same improvement in the nighest orders of intelligence, remembering that both are "under law," the latter having the most flexible nature. The above depicts a very pleasant feature of bicycling as a sport. The club have ridden from their headquarters in the city, to a suburban viltheir headquarters in the city, to a suburban village some 'wenty miles away, where they await the arrival of the racing members who were to start just thirty minutes later.

Five minutes more and the two foremost of the racing men—Fri, on his "Harvard," and Yonson on his "Yale," appear in sight. The pace is tremendous: the men are neck and neck, and Dodges, the captain of the club, whom you observe is leaning on his "Shadow "light roadster, in the foreground, declares the race a tie.

"Where are the other men?" he asks.

"Oh, behind, somewhere," is the reply.

"Are there any 'Harvard's' or 'Yale's' or 'Shadow's' among them?"

"Not one."

"Al' that accounts for it," says the captain.

"Not one."

"Ah! that accounts for it," says the captala. American bleyelers as a body will realize the force of the captain's last remark, but the thousands of new riders which the coming year will produce, should each one of them realize that the only true eronomy in choosing a bicycle is to be content with nothing less than the very best that money will procure. Each should find out all he can about bleyeles before making his choice, and in order to assist enquirers in their search for information, we will, on receipt of a a three-cent stamp, send to any address, a copy of our large illustrated catalogue by return mail.
