It was neutral ground a weight for the fragile finger to bear. Durham is historic. It was neutral ground during the armistice between Sherman and Johnson. Soldiers of both armies filled their pouches with the tobacco storedthere, and, after the surrender, marched homeward. Soon orders came from East, West, Northand South, for "more of that elegant tobacco." Then, ten men ran an unknown factory. Now it employs 800 men, uses the pink and pick of the Golden Belt, and the Durham Bull is the trade-mark of this, the best tobacco in the world. Blackwell's Bull Durham Smoking Tobacco has the largest sale of any smoking tobacco in the world. Why? Simply because it is the best. All dealers have it. Trade-mark of the Bull. Coming to the conclusion that, whoever she might be, she was certainly a subject for hospitality on such a night, I approached her slowly and quietly, not to startle

"I always come at twelve, because then every one is asleep, and the house is still. I suppose the storm kept you awake?" As she spoke, she raised her eyes and looked directly into my face, which she had not done before. Large, dark eyes they were, but perfectly lustreless,-even the firelight was reflected in them dimly. There seemed to be a chill in the atmosphere about her, as about one who comes in from wintry weather with the frost in

"He was very lonely when I died; he traveled everywhere, was lonely too,-I wanted to see him and used to come back sometimes. He lever saw me but when I was near him ie could not help thinking of me. I wandered through the ms at night and looked out of the windows where we had stood so often and watched the sea; but I never disturbed anything. I did not want the servants to know that I came. I thought I had suffered all there was to suffer. When we think that, there is always some new trouble on the way to us. One night 1 found an open letter on the table. It was in his hand, and I kissed it Then -1 read it. It was to the house-keeper directing her to rent the house. He was to be married and to travel again."

There was a long silence. My heart ose in pitty for the poor young thing who had believed in vows of eternal love and remembrance, and it grew harder toward the original of the portrait. I could nothing of my own, but the words of Scripture fell involuntarily from my lips: Like the remembrance of a guest that tarrieth but a day." She paid no heed to this Job's-comforting, but rested her chin upon her hand and, with her eyes still fixed upon the fire which was now indeed nothing but embers, went on:

"I can not blame him,-he was lonely and that was the only way to help it. But looked down at her. She continued to they will come back and I can not bear it, and so I shall be driven from here. I wonder if she looks as I used to. If she did, ever so little, and I could know that that was what drew him how it would comfort me!" "I have met many wives since I died,

Society in Washington. The writer of an illustrated article on 'The New Washington," in the March Century, characterizes Washington society thus: "Leaving aside the question of political morality, few people who have passed a winter in Washington will deny the charm of its society. Acknowledging all its faults, its crudeness-narrowness perhaps-and its lack of form, it must yet be acknowledged that it differs from all other American society in the fact that it is not found on wealth. It is the only society which is really republican though it has little resemblance to the 'republican court' of the first administraion,-the only one in America which has well-defined basis. And that basis is was ther directly or maneculy, by ne expressed wishes of fellow-men. The olding of such public station necessarily implies intelligence, and it is such intellience, as distinguished from lineage or wealth, which is the fundamental basis m Washington society. Such a society loes not feel obliged to adopt certain cusoms because it is reported at second hand hat they are good form in London, Its pinions are robustly independant, its in ormation is extensive, and its subjects f conversation are many and varied. It is not to be imagined that such a ociety is well defined, or that its rules are learly established—though it is true that he Etiquette of Social Life in Washington nas been most elaborately formulated in little pamphlet, of which a fresh edi ion is perennially produced, and which s said to sell in great numbers. It is, ng raw, to the same extent-but no more -that society in London is subservient and snobbish, and in New York illiterate nd commercial. Nothing can be more ridiculous than the public levees of the President, where the doors are thrown pen that every person in the street may nter them in a crush, and stand in a dowly moving procession for two hours, n order that during half a minute of hat time the President may be seen and is arm may be wrenched. But this is not peculiar to Washington alone. Such public receptions' are inflicted upon residents in all cities which they visit. Hardly less incongruous are the Wedneslay afternoon receptions of the wives of Cabinet officers, when their doors are also hrown open and hundreds of strangers ramp through their parlors 'to pay their respects.' The wives of Judges and Senstors and Representatives have to endure the same thing on other afternoons of the week. It has come to be considered as part of the price of public station. But, no matter what office a man may hold, no one may come to his dinner talle without an invitation. And it is in dn ners that Washington society excels. Diplomats and travelers from every part of the world; men distinguished in political life, on the bench, and in war; men of science and men of letters; women of intelligence and culture, with the native grace and beauty for which American women are justly celebrated-there is no such wealth of choice in any other American city, and there are no other dinnerparties so entertaining as those of Washington."

Keats.

Of all the famous English poets, he had most of the spirit of April in him. His senses were keen; his temperament was feverish, now jealous and irritable, and straightway humble and indulgent: his imaginary joys and sorrows were spiritual possessions, subjecting him; his numor was scampering, his fancy teeming, his taste erratic, his critical faculty exposed to balking enthusiasms; his opinions of men and affairs were hasty, circumscribed, frequently adopted unreflectingly at second-hand; and, with all these boyish traits, he was extremely self-absorbed. At the centre of his in dividuality, nevertheless, was the elemental spark, the saving power of genius, the temperance, sanity, and self-reverence of a fine nature gradually coming to the knowledge of its faculties and unriding the secret of its own moral beauty. Hence Lord Houghton, with more essential justice to Keats than any of his louder eulogists have done, describes his works as rather the exercises of his poetical education than the character of his original and free power; and Matthew Arnold, even when placing him with Shakespeare, excuses him as a 'prentice hand in the wisest art. Too many of his admirers, seizing upon the external, accidental, and temporal in his biography and the fragmentary and parasitical in his poetry, have really wronged Keats more than did the now infamous reviews; they have rescued him from among the wives that lived with their husbands cockneys only to confound him with the neo-pagans. It will, consequently, be well to inquire more carefully than has he gave orders to have his conveyance heretofore been done wherein the charm and worth and promise of Keats lay. The first step toward the solution is the band, and, seizing the pulpit Bible which recognition of his immaturity,-the acknowledgment that his memorials must I bent my head to hide the tears that gathered as the monotonous voice ended be searched for the seeds of time rather

Washington Letter.

From our Regular Correspondent. WASHINGTON, D. C., March 8, 1884. In this popular city for holding conventions, a notable one is now in session. It is the National Association of Woman

Suffragists, and this is their sixteenth annual meeting. The seekers for suffrage are from a large number of States, and illustrated in their oratorical fights against man's inhumanity to women that they know how to talk, and how to talk well. They are a perennially hopeful sisterhood, and fully expect to vote sometime in the future. Their veteran leader Miss Anthony, while speaking to the convention, alluded to her recent foreign travels, and said a high premium was offered to widowhood, and spinsterhood in England, as the right of suffrage was there granted in municipal and school matters only to widows and spinsters. Over there public men were not afraid to go to woman suffrage meetings and sit upon the platform, and she knew it would be so here if women had the influence of a vote. At the twice daily sessions several addresses are made by the delegates on pertinent subjects. Mrs. Dunniway of Oregon told how women surrage had been obtained. territory. Mrs. Brown of Cincinnati spoke on political "Disabilities." Mrs. Hubert of Chicago on "The Statesmenship of Women." Mrs. Gougar, of Indiana, who would make a more effectwe stump speaker than any other woman of the convention, spoke upon "Woman Before the Law" Belva Lockwood's subject was the proposed Disenfranchisement of Utah Women, and Miss Couzins' theme was the unmeaning question; "What his value twenty-five per cent." Ever since he had been in the Senate he had used his voice and influence against the enfranchisement of women and even the women of Utah, whether Mormon or Guiteau's Skeleton.

Gentile, he wanted to disenfranchise, The "Historian of the Kennebec" had a better record, but he had never heartily espoused their cause, and women wanted no luke-warm lover. Conkling had not been good to women when in the Senate, and the giant from little Delaware might be a chivalrous Bayard, but when he set his lance at rest against the demands of women he might as well place himself among the fossils of the National Museum. Mr. Flower, was an out spoken advocate of woman suffrage, and if he were nominated the woman would smile upon him but Joseph McDonald, she said, was their most unequivocal champion, and the first man who had ever done anything in the United States Senate for the freedom of women. By invitation officers and delegates of the convention called on the President. On Friday the Senate committee on woman suffrage gave the con-ous at the Irving performance the other night, Gen. Logan, and Senator Sherman occupied opposite boxes, and President Arthur, and Mr. Blaine were in the orchestra chairs. On the next evening Mr. Blaine saw the play of Hamlet from a box. He evidently enjoyed the performance, and kept his Opera glasses on the English tragedian during the greater part of the time.

Thus far, the Senate's work may be summed up in the discussion and passage of the appropriation bill for the Military school at West Point; a bill for the protection of children in the District of Columbia who may be cruelly treated; a bill for extending the limits of the Yellowstone National Park, and the consideration of judical jurisdiction outside of the territory of the United States. The House of Representatives has debated and passed the bill for pensioning the Mexican veterans at eight dollars a month, voted for thirteen more House employes, pages, messengers, and clerks, and is now discussing the Naval appropriation bill. The Senate spent some time offering tributes to the memory of the recently deceased member from Kansas, Mr. Haskell.

Clipped Roadsters.

"Horses clipped here," is a sign displayed at numerous livery stables. "We hape clipped one hundred and fifty horses this year," said a horseman yesterday. A long-coated horse can't get fat. When clipped the horses eat less but gain flesh rapidly. Drive a horse with a long coat and he is soon covered with perspiration. Then, if the weather is cold, the perspiration freezes about the hair, forming tiny icicles. Livery horses brought into the barn after a long drive and covered with blankets are still wet the next morning. Hence they take cold and are often seriously ill. Here is a horse you could stand a block away from and count the ribs of two weeks ago. He was clipped, and now you may see how sleek and sat he is. Before the clipping he ate fifteen quarts of oats and a quantity of hay daily. Now we feed him the same quantity of oats, but he doesn't eat all, and hay he scarcely touches. Then he was a light chestnut. Now he is of a pretty mouse color. The bay horse was clipped in October. His hair is growing long and thick, and in January or February he will need the shears again. Nearly all horsemen are in favor of clipping. The best veterinary surgeons in the country say it is greatly beneficial. When a horse has long hair it is difficult to keep him clean. He is like a man, who, with long hair, must frequently shampoo his head to All the clipping in this city is done with shears by hand. In some other places roller clippers, such as the barbers remove short hairs from the back of the neck with, are used. Work can be done much faster with shears. We charge four dollars for clipping a horse. At some other places the work is done for three dollars and three dollars and a half. Take a long-coated horse, valued at one hundred dollars, and by clipping him you will in many instances enhance

"Twenty-four hours after a longcoated horse is driven," said the pro-prietor of another stable, "especially in the winter, he is still wet. A cold sweat comes on and the long hairs prevent drying. Horses ought to be clipped once a year at least. October is the best time, as the hair of a horse then clipped can grow before the very cold weather comes. We clip as close to the skin as possible. The charge is from three to six dollars, according to the labor required. As a rule two men clip a horse Some horses, especially of the fretful kind, have to be worked on all day. Most horses clipped are buggy horses and roadsters, though the shears are sometimes run over a few carriage horses .- Toledo

Gniteau's skeleton has at last been articulated and hidden in a private room of the Army Medical Museum at Washington, the scene of the assassina-tion of the late President Lincoln, but it has been deemed best to deny the public admission to the room for the present. An improved French method was adopted for placing the bones in position, the vertebræ being held in position by three large brass screws attached to a perpendicular brass rod about an inch in diameter. One of the most skillful anatomists in this country superintended the operation, and great care was taken to see that none of the bones were carried off by relic-seekers. When Guiteau's body was first brought to the museum, a daring employe succeeded in eluding the watchman and cut off a small piece of flesh, which he has since exhibited in alcohol. Repeated polishing and bleaching has given the articulated skeleton the appearance of an ivory figure, and the few who have been allowed access to the room in which it is stored pronounce it a most creditable piece of anatomical work. Upon the occasion of Sergeant Mason's ent visit to Washington, he was invited to call at the museum and inspect the bones of the assassin who had caused him so much trouble. The visitor eyed the skeleton curiously and could not refrain from shaking his fist and muttering: "Your bones caused a heap of trouble in this land." Other relics of the assassin which were preserved in the museum were shown Sergeant, and he expressed himself as much gratified at finding his intended victim had been so safely secured. It will be useless, however, for visitors to attempt to see the skeleton, as the museum authorities have been compelled to adopt stringent rules against allowing strangers in the private room where it is kept. One of the first inquiries of the tourist, after climbing the three tiers of iron steps leading into the museum proper, is for Guiteau's skeleton, or anything that belonged to the assassin, and hundreds are daily disappointed by the watchman's stereotyped answer: "There is nothing of the sort on exhibition, sir." It is probable, however, that in the course of a few years the skeleton will be exposed to the public, after a properly secured case has been prepared for its exhibition. — Wash-

A Lawyer Discomfited by a Lady Wit-

Browbeating lawyers sometimes find their match in female witnesses. We recall an instance in which a member of the Charleston (S. C.) Bar, Colonel H-, was quietly but effectually "squelched" by a lady whose evidence was very damaging to his client. He realized this, and being also nettled by the imperturbability of her manner, he resolved to embarrass her if he possibly could. So he said: "Madam, I observe that in giving your testimony you make frequent use of the word iron. May I ask if you understand its true meaning?" "I think I do, sir," she replied. "Let me illustrate. If I were to call you a gentleman, I should unquestionably be indulging in irony.

The Colonel winced visibly under this sharp thrust, the audience applauded, the jurymen laughed, and even the Judge on the bench smiled, while the Colonel's professional associates, who had often been bulldozed by him, keenly enjoyed his discomfiture. To add to his chagrin, the Colonel lost his case. -Harper's Drawer.

"What is prussic acid worth?" was asked of the chemist at Strong, Cobb & Co.'s wholesale drug store.
"We never sell it," was the response.

"It is not an article of commerce Scheuer, the Swedish chemist, who discovered chlorine, Scheuer's green, etc., was found dead in his laboratory, about which there lingered a peculiar, pungent, smell. When one has eaten a fresh peach and cracked the pit he will get a faint odor that resembles prussic acid, although the smell of this acid is slightly sweeter. It can also be found in bitter peaches, add a few pits to the confection by way of improving the flavor. It may sound extravagant, but it is nevertheless a fact that the improvement of the condiment is due partly to prussic acid. It is in such minute quantities, however, that it is not injurious to health. Indeed, what is commonly called prussic acid is given as medicine. It is really hydro-cyanic, two parts of the acid to ninetyeight parts of water. S. M. Strong re-lates that when his section was very sick with pneumonia, the doctors re-sick with pneumonia the doctors re-sick with pneumonia of hydrocyanic acid. The sick man was himself an excellent doctor, and he advised that the dose be increased to six drops. The attending physician did not dare do it. The sick man died, and his friends entertain a lingering belief that he would have pulled through had the doctors followed his advice."

Prussic acid is the most deadly of all poisons, and the fumes would instantly kill the person who inhaled it. It is not known just what the symptoms attending the death are, for the victim dies too suddenly to manifest any. There appears to be a sort of suffocation and general paralysis. Hydrocyanic acid is sometimes taken internally with sui-cidal intent and death is almost instantaneous, the blood taking up the acid wonderfully quick. It is colorless as water. - Cleveland Press.

Olive Picking in California.

The olive usually ripens in November In some localities in Eastern countries during favorable years the fruit picking for oil begins as early as October, and for picking in September. In Santa Barbara the crop of 1850, as also that of 1878, was unusually late in ripening, not being ready to pick before the middle of January—a delay of nearly two months-the cause no doubt owing to the extraordinary rainfall of these two years. In 1878 we had, after the middle of February and up to the middle of April, a rainfall of over four inches, and in 1880 over eighteen inches, being more than our yearly average The fruit should be gathered as soon as it turns purple, and before fully ripe, as the oil will be lighter in color and more fragrant. but somewhat less in quantity. In Europe the common method of gathering the berries is to knock them from the trees with poles; they are then picked from the ground by old men, women, children, and cripples. This plan has serious objecions, the fruit being more or bruised, causing decomposition, and the contact with the earth is liable to give the oil an unpleasant taste and odor. The more economical plan of gathering is to pick from the trees by hand, and by the aid of intelligent contrivances an active man can pick four hundred pounds each day. arranged on a ranch wagon, platforms with ladders securely fastened, so that the fruit from different heights, of even large trees, can be gathered from the wagon which is driven along the rows. and one half of the trees picked from each side. This plan obviates the necessity of moving ladders, climbing, etc., and relieves the pickers from the labor of carrying the fruit, as the sacks containing the same are always at hand on the platform. The leaves and imperfect berries are separated by passing the whole through a winnowing mill. This process leaves the fruit in the best possible condition preparatory to manufacturing the oil. -Cor. Strange Monopoly. Considering the present deluge of almanacs, how strange it seems that this production should ever have been a monopoly! Such, however, was the case in England from the days of James I. to the opening of the American revo-lution—a period of one hundred and seventy-five years-and to effect its abolition required all the eloquence of Erskine. Benjamin Franklin began his Poor Richard Almanae in 1732, and continued it for twenty-six years. The sale was enormous, and yet, at the lapse of a century, it was found impossible to obtain a complete set. The late John Doggett, of this city who wished to republish the work, succeeded after five years of search in getting eighteen numpers, and after his death they were sold for twelve dollars apiece It said that Franklin deeply regretted the necessity of discontinuing a work in which he took such deep interest, but public duty required it. He is said to have been the first American to make use of a "nom de plume," and in issuing his almanae he preferred the ideal character of Richard Saunders to plain Ben Franklin. "Poor Richard" was certainly a happy thought, and it proved the most popular hit of that age. It may be added that the New England Almanac issued by Isaac Thomas, of Worcester, was a worthy successor of Poor Richard. was begun in 1775 and continued for forty-two years, being in its day one of the most popular issues of the press, but a still more remarkable instance is found in the "New England Almanac and Farmer's Friend," issued by D. M. Daboll, of Groton, Connecticut. This publication has been continued in the family for one hundred and twelve years, and is now in the hands of the third generation. It retains the old fashion of weather predictions and might have been good authority for Bottom and his dramatic associations.- N. Y. Cor. Utica Herald.

IMPRESSIONS OF NEW ORLEANS.

JACKSON, FLA., March 7, 1884. After one has been in a strange city for a week he has cruised around it enough those in other parts of the country.

I have greatly enjoyed the opportunity of studying the various phases of life in this, the most typical of Southern cities. and on the whole I can say I like the Crescent City. It is quite different from the other cities of this country in many not only the city in its glory, but the inhabitants of the neighborhood now have brought along their gaping crowds.

MULES AND CISTERNS.

Mules seem to be used for hauling in the city more than horses, and a good mule is worth nearly twice as much as a good horse. They will stand more hard work, rough usage and cussing than an equine, and they have the prestige of a tradition that no one has ever seen a dead mule. This last settles it in favor of the long-eared brute.

One of the curious sights of the city is the apparently large number of water tanks. In fact, nearly every house has alongside of it a tank about as high as the house itself. Upon inquiry I found they were in place of cisterns, for they cannot be underground on account of the water all underneath the city. They are filled from the roofs.

THE CEMETERIES.

From this curious condition of the ground arises another strange custom. That is in the cemeteries, where all the dead are buried above ground, in vaults. This feature gives their cemeteries a picturesque appearance, from the fact that many of the vaults look like little shrines or chapels with minarets, stained glass windows and marble tessellated floors. Orange, aloe, myrtle, magnolia and palm trees are planted in rows, while the century, cactus and oleander plants bloom with beds of tropical flowers.

The cemeteries are musical with the birds, among which are robins, thrushes, mocking-birds and wrens. They are not seen in the city, but come here finding | We understand this is the man who had Mr. G. Andrews arrested as the murderer safety from shooting.

SPANISH FORT. Of course New Orleans must have a watering-place corresponding to the New Yorker's Manhatten Beach or the Bostonian's Nantasket. So that want is supplied by the Spanish Fort, about six miles steam cars. Gardens, hotels, bath and boat houses have arisen from the ruins of their early conquests. During the evenings entertainments are given at a little opera house, and the visitors sit under the trees to enjoy the cool breezes from Lake Pontchartrain. On the small narrowguage railroad the monotony of the engineer's life is occasionally broken by a festive alligator which allows its curiosity to "see the wheels go around" to draw it up on the track. The cow-catcher was not made for alligators, so, as the brute will not get off the track, the engine has hart's.

THE FRENCH QUARTER.

is the old French quarter, east of Canal juries are not serious.

street. Narrow streets, narrow banquettes, or sidewalks, houses tightly closed on the entresol, the names of the streets, and most of all, the signs of the shops, tell of the former as well as the modern reign of the Gauls. This is the part of the city belonging to the last century, and its old creole inhabitants, French or Spanish by tradition, even yet are scarcely reconciled to the government of a Republic. With us at the North a mistaken idea exists that a creole must have negro blood. It is not so, for a creole is any one born in New Orleans and descendant from foreigners. I met several who had the fair hair and complexion of a Saxon, with the politeness of the Frenchman. They are kind and hospitable, and their old creole pride has undergone such a change that now the younger of them stand up and say: " I am an American." Several of the old houses that Cable tells about are still standing, and one can still see the former residence of "Madame John" and "Madame Delphine." Near where I stopped were Jackson square, the old Cathedral, and the French Market. The Cathedral is guarded on either side by the old court houses built by a Spanish noble when the last century was quite old. It was in the square which these buildings face where the pirates were hung in the "good old colony times when we lived under the king." But it is to the French Market where ne must go, and the time to see it is in the early morning hours when the good nousewives and housekeepers are abroad for the day's provisions. There being few, if any, cellars in the city, fruit and light groceries have to be purchased daily. And as the grocery stores only have dry groceries, nearly every one goes to the Market, where meat, vegetables, fish, restaurant stands, etc., abound. For nearly a half-mile along the river levee it extends, and affords a scene such as cannot be witnessed elsewhere on this continent. Billingsgate in London and the fish market in Rouen perhaps it may be likened to. A French patois is spoken everywhere, and the incessant clatter of wooden shoes over the cobblestones makes one think he is in France itself. All is so foreign.

THE EADS JETTIES.

Joining an excursion party one morning, I accompanied them by steamer down the river a little over a hundred miles, to the jetties. The level of the river being quite a little above the land, it has to be protected by a strong levee. Along on eth vide, after passing the battle ground of 1815-where is a national cemetery-The river is no wider than the Detroit river, and the current is about the same, I should judge, although the "Father of Waters" can not give up to the sea such pure blue water as does the Detroit to the lake. It is a coffee color. At the mouth, where the jetties are, I was so fortunate as to meet Mr. C. Donovan, assistant engineer of the U.S., supervising for the government the contract of Mr. Eads. Mr. Donovan is well known in Ann Arbor, where he has lived and graduated. Every month he takes measurements of the depth of water through the South Pass and for a considerable distance out into the Gulf, to watch the effects of the current. The length of the jettles is 21 miles, and now a vessel drawing 27 feet of water can safely go through. So the work, after several years of trial, is now very assuredly a success. CITY FEATURES.

Of the open sale and advertising of the lotteries-tickets being in every cigar and liquor store and hotel stand-and of the gambling publicly carried on, too much can not be said to the shame of a city tolerating it. Immense crowds throng the gaming rooms, and their demoralizing to have gained some general impressions influences are exerted unchecked. The of its peculiarities as contrasted with people of New Orleans feel the disgrace, and change the subject when it is introduced, but it goes on. To return to the city, before closing I must make note of the system of drainage, which is entirely on the surface and flowing from the river rather than toward it as one would expect. It has to be carrespects, and in Mardi Gras week we see | ried back into the country. Until this surface drainage is in some way obviated I am afraid the city will always have to tremble at the approach of "Yellow Jack." If this can be done, there ought to be a good future before New Orleans when the Mexican trade is opened, as then it would be the natural port of trade.

There are a few fine residences, but not the number there ought to be in a city as large as Detroit.

that Hood's Sarsaparilla will cure everything, but the fact that on the purity and vitality of the blood depend the vigor and health of the whole system, and that disease of various kinds is often only the sign that nature is trying to remove the disturbing cause, we are naturally led to the conclusion that a remedy that gives life and vigor to the blood, eradicates scrofula and other impurities from it, as Hood's SARSAPARILLA undoubtedly does, must be the means of preventing many diseases that would occur without its use; hence the field of its usefulmess is quite an extended one, and we are warranted in recommending it for all derangements of the system which are caused by an unnatural state of the blood.

Gentlemen—I was a great sufferer from Salt-Rheum on my limbs, for a dozen years previous to the summer of 1876, at which time I was cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. The skin would become dry, chap, crack open, bleed and itch intensely, so that I could not help scratching, which of course made them worse. At the time I commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla (In the summer of 1876) they were so bad that they discharged, and I was obliged to keep them bandaged with linen cloths. The skin was drawn so tight by the heat of the disease that if I stooped over they would crack open and actually bring tears into my eyes. The first bottle benefited me so much that I continued taking it till I was cured I used one box of Hood's Olive Ointment, to relieve the itching. Hoping many others may learn the value of Hood's Sarsaparilla and receive as much benefit as I have, I am,

On the reverse side, in the center of the maltese cross, is the Keystone containing the monogram "B. F. W.," and the letters K. S. H. T. W. S. S. T. in a circle. The four arms of the cross are occupied by chapter and blue lodge emblems. Above the Keystone are the arch and incense, below it the pick, spade, etc. in red enamel, to the right, in blue enamel, the trowel, plumb and rule, and on the left of the Keystone, in similar enamel, the square and compass, letter "G," and mallet. Conveniently arranged upon the face side is the following: "Presented by Golden Rule Lodge No. 159 to B. F. Watts, P. M., March 6, 1834." The present was voted to Mr. Watts in Decem ber and the presentation was made by Mr. J. R. Miner last Thursday night in behalf of the lodge. THE SECRETARY'S REPORT. Sixteen years have elapsed since the organization of the Ladies' Charitable Union of Ann Arbor, bringing many changes among its members, until but six of the original number are remaining in the city, and only two of the above numher are permitted to be present at the monthly meeting of the society. But new friends are joining the Union from time to time, thus perpetuating the spirit of the organization.

During the year eight regular meetings have been held, with an average attendance of seventeen; and we close the record of the year which has passed with a membership of thirty-five.

Thirty-one families have been assisted in various ways. Twenty-one families received a Thanksgiving dinner.

The amount of money expended by ward committees during the year was $175.81. Of this amount, $69.80 has been expended for new clothing, $42.26 for groceries and provisions, $27.37 for Thanksgiving dinners for the poor, $10.25 for nurses' services, $7.50 for rent, and the balance, $18.63, for special charities. Second-hand clothing to the value of $133 has been distributed, and baskets of

Modern-Science and Skeplicism =

What has Skepticism done for the world? Nothing but to suggest doubts. It has even suggested that Rheumatism cannot be cured. Skepticism is as bad as Rheumatism.

What has Science done for the world? A good many things; for instance, it has shown that Rheumatism can be cured. It has shown that Neuralgia can be got rid of. It has snown that Neuraigia can be got rid of.
Modern science has proved that Rheumatism is blood disease, and has provided ATHLOPHOROS
as the remedy which can completely cure it.
It has proved that although the old doctors failed to overcome Neuraigia, ATHLOPHOROS can reach it, and eradicate it from the system.

It has proved that though these tormenting diseases were so slow and obstinate, they can be overcome in a lutte while by means of Athlophoros!

Spring Medicine.

Why does everybody take a spring nedicine? For three good reasons, viz: Because one bottle of a blood purifier taken at this season will do more good than any two at any other. II-Because the blood is in a more impure condition than at any other season. III-Because the system is so weakened by this impure state of the blood that it has not sufficient vitality to withstand the debilitating effects of spring weather. Hence by common consent, people seek relief in medicine. The combination of Hood's Sarsaparilla commends it to our judgment as a good spring medicine and blood purifier. Such things as Sarsaparilla, Yellow Dock, Mandrake, &c., compounded by competent druggists like Messrs. Hood & Co.,

HARVARD WINET HURRAND RALE RAN TO

The above depicts a very pleasant feature of bloycling as a sport. The club have ridden from their headquarters in the city, to a suburban village some twenty miles away, where they await the arrival of the racing members who were to start just thirty minutes later.

Five minutes more and the two foremost of the racing mem—Fri, on his "Harvard," and Yonson on his "Yale," appear in sight. The pace is tremendous: the men are neck and neck, and Dodges, the captain of the club, whom you observe is leaning on his "Shadow" light roadster, in the foreground, declares the race a tie.

"Where are the other men?" he asks.

"Oh, behind, somewhere," is the reply.

"Are there any 'Harvard's' or 'Yale's' or 'Shadow's' among them?"

"Not one."

"Al 'that accounts for it," says the captain.

American bicyclers as a body will realize the force of the captain's last remark but the thou.

"Ah! that accounts for it," says the captain. American bicyclers as a body will realize the force of the captain's last remark, but the thousands of new riders which the coming year will produce, should each one of them realize that the only true economy in choosing a bicycle is to be content with nothing less than the very best that money will procure. Each should find out all he can about bicycles before making his choice, and in order to assist enquirers in their search for information, we will, on receipt of a three-cent stamp, send to any address, a copy of our large illustrated catalogue by return mail. DOMESTIC.

THE Coroner's Jury at Winnetka, Ill., on the 5th concluded the inquest in the case of the murder of Mr. and Mrs. Willson. The jury found that the old people were killed by some person or persons to the jury unknown, and that the evidence cast spicions against the butcher, Neil Mc-Keague, now under arrest. It was discovered on the oth that Martin

O. Van Fleet, of Norwalk, O., County Treasurer, was a defaulter for $60,000. His whereabouts were unknown.

WILLIAM MCMILLAN, a young farmer re siding near Huron, O., while intoxicated on the 5th shot and killed George Thompson, a neighbor. McMillan was placed in jail, where he found some rat poison, and mmitted suicide. THE winter packing at Cincinnati was dealers, failed on the 5th for $150,000. THE annual report of the Union Pacific Railroad, made on the 5th, showed gross earnings of $21,000,000 for the year, with an income of $2,660,000 from other sources. The operating expenses were $10,640,000. ONE man was killed and two others were fatally injured by a boiler explosion in the Lawrence, Mass., a few days ago. Three buildings were shattered to splinters.

AT Corning, O., a few weeks ago A. J. McDevitt, who keeps the village drug-store, caused the arrest of Father O'Boylan, pastor of the Catholic Church, for permitting the running of a wheel of fortune at a church fair. The matter caused a great deal of bad blood, each side having its quota of adherents. It culminated on the 2d in a number of friends of the priest calling at the store of McDevitt and forcing him to proceed with them to a point about a mile from the town, bareheaded and without a coat, notwithstanding the severity of the weather and the fact that a blinding snow-storm was prevailing. Arriving there, he was surrounded by the mob. who, with drawn revolvers, abused him, firing many shots at him, though only with the motive of further increasing his terror. He was afterward started on the road leading from the town, with the assurance that should he again show his face in the village he would forfeit his life. He returned to the village on the 5th, with a number of friends, and was escorted from the depot by about two thousand people. Several arrests of those engaged in the affair, including Father O'Boylan, were made, and a desperate state of affairs existed in the community on the 6th.

WILLIAM SCOLLARD shot and killed Aleck Dietrischen at San Leandro, Cal., a few nights ago, and when Scollard's father heard of the tragedy he fell dead.

BEFORE the Springer Committee on the 7th ex-Senator Spencer, of Alabama, testified that in New York, in January, 1881, he met Mr. James, then postmaster, who asked his aid in getting the office of Postmaster-General. Spencer promised and aided as agreed. After James' appointment, he told him he could make a splendid reputation by breaking up the Star-route ring, which would leave his department self-sustaining and enable him to reduce postage to two cents. Spencer was promised by James and Garfield that his words should not be repeated. Spencer thought the Government masqueraded before the public by taking the most complicated of the Star-route cases. Five men employed in the construction of a railroad in Pyle Canyon, Union County. Ore., were caught under a mass of earth and rock on the 8th and instantly killed. THE United States Senate was not in session on the 8th. In the House a motion to go into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of the Bonded Whisky bill was defeated-127 to 115. Consideration of the Post-office Appropriation bill occupied the remainder of the session.

Mortality in Armies. A learned Professor of the University at Pavia has compiled and published a statistical account of the proportionate number of deaths in Euro He finds that in every 10,000 men the comparative mortality amounts to only 57 in Prussian armies, whereas in the English it is 84 and in the French 92. while in the Austrian and Italian it rises to as high as 112 and 116. This very moderate number recorded to the credit of Prussia is the more remarkable inasmuch as it is said to have been ascertained that in her armies a considerable number of deaths are the result of suicide. There are, however, some other very curious anomalies in the table thus made out. For instance, the tendency of soldiers to die appears to increase and decrease almost in inverse proportion to the rate of mortality among civilians. Thus, among the latter, the number of deaths in every 10,000 amounts to 217 in England, 244 in France, and 269 in Prussia. This would make it appear that in the last-mentioned country the warriors are about five times less likely to die than the civil population; whereas in France and England they are only twice as unlikely to pay the debt of nature. The Professor is obliged to infer from this that the sanitary conditions under which Prussian soldiers live are very far more satisfactory than those of military life in England or France. But it may be suggested that some other important considerations ought to be admitted in explaining the difference between the three armies. French and still more especially British soldiers, are exposed to all sorts of risks in the unhealthy districts to which they are liable to be sent, even in times of peace, whereas Germany, with its lack of colonies, has no occasion to send the children of the Fatherland to such outlandish and uncomfortable quarters. But this explanation still leaves it an open question why the Prussian hosts should be so much more healthy than the Austrain, which enjoy a similar immunity.

Profitable Ditch Making.

"The greatest opportunity for cor-porate monopoly and money-making in the country is in Montana to-day," said General James S. Brisbin, who stopped in this city on his way to Washin "What is that opportunity?" asked a

"It is in the power given by law to owners of irrigating ditches," continued the General. "The soil of Montana produces threefold when properly irrigated. Knowing this the Legislature, desiring to encourage agriculture, enacted a law with the preamble that whoever made the soil more productive was a public benefactor. They then proceeded to give the irrigators extraordinary powers, Any one desiring to build an irrigating ditch can run it through your house, if it suits him. He may exercise the right of eminent domain over any one but the owner of another ditch. He can't cross another line. Added to this is the fact that the charter runs forever and the charge for irrigation thus becomes a purpetual tax on the land. As to the money in it I will give you an instance: There is a ditch at Billings, Montana, owned by Herman Clark, which is thirty-five miles long and covers 100,000 acres. It cost $100,000 to dig. At a charge of of fifty cents a year for each of the 100,-000 acres which it covers it paid $50, 000 the first year. I'd rather own the ditch than the land it waters, and I believe that the owenership of such a ditch is the most lucrative occupation in Montana, although the wealth of that Territory is enormous."-Philadelpnia

-A disgusted serenader.

A youth went forth to serenade
The lady whom he loved the best,
And passed beneath the mansion's shade
Where erst his charmer used to rest. He warbled till the morning light Came dancing o'er the hilltops' rim, But no fair maiden blessed his sight, And all seemed dark and drear to him.

With heart aglow and eyes ablaze
He drew much nearer than before,
When to his horror and amaze,
He saw "To Let" upon the door.
