Soldiers. In the spring of 1863, the army of the Tennessee was camped from Lake Providence to Milikin's Bend, Louisiana, waiting to make the attack on Vicksburg. Our battery (Bolton's) was camped at Barry's Landing. Late one evening, at roll-eall, the Captain stepped to the front of the company and said that a friend of his, a Mr. Alfred Spink, of Chicago, represented a wealthy firm, Price, Maher & Spink, cotton buyers-that he (Spink) would give drafts to any of the men desiring to send their money home, on F. Granger Adams, a Chicago banker; that the parties were reliable, and that in case the drafts were captured by the enemy they would be renewed. As many of the boats going up the river were captured by the Confederates at Eagle Bend, or Island 83, and the boys were paid off that day, we all concluded to send our money by drafts, as the Captain told us, and we mailed them by the first boat going north to our fami-Soon afterward we moved to Grand Gulf, crossed the river at Hard Times Landing, participated in the attles of Raymond and Champion Hill, Great laughter. and engaged in the seige of Vicksburg about the 19th of May, 1863. A few lays afterward we got a big mail, which had accumulated for two months, and heartened as we had not before been pa d for six months, and our families were suffering.

The Captain told us that everything would be all right after a little. We were busy with the siege from daylight until dark for forty-seven or forty-eight days, and did not think much about it. A Mr. C. C. Cadwallader, correspondent of the Chicago Times, made his headquarters for months with Captain Bradley. Chief of Police (the battery was recruited at Captain Bradley's office, and the boys always called him Godfather Bradley). Soon afterward word came that every draft was paid. As it may be interesting to the reader to know what kind of an order General Grant made that had such a salutory effect upon the parties, I will give it as near as I can. The General had a list of all the drafts and the amounts, and then by preamble recited the facts, and then ordered the commander of the United States forces at Chicago to demand payment from Messrs. Price, Maher & Spink, and in case they declined or refused to do so, to place them n irons, and to send them under guard o him in the field. Lieutenant S. P. Tracy was detached to carry out the order, and the Quartermaster's department was ordered to furnish the necessary transportation. After the capture of Vicksburg I was riding with the Captain to our battery headquarters out the Cherry street road, when General Grant came trotting along. Coming abreast, he said: "By the way, Captain, what became of that order about the drafts?" The Captain replied that everything had been settled satisfactorily, to which the old hero replied: "Although I gave free transportation I did not think they liked me well enough to make me a visit."-Cor. BABY DESTROYING.

The Many Deaths of Children Caused by Ignorance and Neglect of Parents or Attendants.

It has come to be a gospel with young married folk that the second summer is the destroyer of the baby. It is fatekismet. That the second summer costs more lives than it ought is not the fault of the summer; it is the fault of the heat and the parents. The summer heat is dangerous to all young children; it is in connection with the bad diet of the second summer that it is fatal. It is a well-established fact that nearly all the mortality of second-summer babies is from diseases of the digestive organs. and these come from irrational artificial feeding. Children come to the table, eat pickles, unmashed or fried lumps of potatoes, beets, radishes, and the like, and the trouble begins. The stereotyped answer to the question; "What does the child eat?" is: "O, it eats at the table with the rest of the family. The result is enteric diseases and death, and the cause of death is ascribed to the "second summer." The first summer the baby stays at home, has its natural food, and pulls through fairly well. But the second sammer it must show off. It is trundled down town through the heat of a July or August day, is overheated, excited, and its nervous system put to the strain. Keep the yearlings at home; give them a grass plat and a sand-pile. Do not let them come to the table, give wholesome food-milk, oat meal ground very fine and stirred and cooked for twenty minutes. Put them to bed at dark; with a garment they can not kick off when the nights are cool. Bathe them in tepid water night and morning. Stay at home with them and take care of them yourself, for it is not "the second summer" which kills the children, but the ignorance or negligence of those who attend, or rather do not attend, them. Colds and calves get through their second summers quite as well as their first, and there is no reason that the human ani- are all whistle, who make lots of noise, and who stop right there." They will say: "Lord, give me something. I don't know exactly what I want, but give me something, I don't care what it is." [Laughter.] It looks to me as if their whole Christianity had gone into a whistle which was doing nothing but blowing. It's just like throwing the dinner on the floor and wrapping the table cloth around a fellow, telling him that he had a nice dinner. [Laughter.] I would not give the snap of my finger for the kind of faith that is doing nothing but waiting for God to do something," said Mr. Jones with a contemptuous gesture

He protested against any orthodoxy in his religion.

[Applause and laughter.] I tell you, my brethren, if all the church members in this city were put into a bag and shaken up it would be mighty hard to guess which would come out first. [Loud laughter.] I was talking with a minister this afternoon and he asked me: "Jones, how do you expect to be saved?" I told him that I was a peritent sinner and that I had been fighting on the penitent line for the past 14 years. If you ask me why God lid not save Chicago 10 years ago I will ell you that it is because the churches of this city do not take care of the members hey have already secured. The usual number of papers of a strictly religious and Mrs. Hill with $100 for their efforts in serving of the burglers who attempted tone go to make up the number, and these are alternated with stories both long and short. The Quiver stories are a boon to careful parents, for they give the young people of the family all the amusement they want, while at the same time their moral teaching is unexceptionable. The Quiver has made itself a necessity in every christian household.—Cassell & nessed to the elephant, and moved about the city, to break it in. No one will dare a year in advance.

The naval duel between the "Kearsarge" and the "Alabama" will be the war feature of the April Century. There will be three papers, profusely illustrated,—the first, "Life on the 'Alabama," written by one of the crew of that famous cruiser, containing the author's opinion of his officers and shipmates, an account of the two years' cruise, etc.; another paper is by the first officer of the "Alabama," Lieut. Kell; and a third is contributed by the surgeon of the "Kearsarge," Dr. by the surgeon of the "Kearsarge," Dr. Brown. The story of the "Monitor" and "Merrimae" fight, written by participants, was one of the most popular war features of the Century, and it is thought that these narratives will be found fully as interesting.

Stories of adventures on the rail, of the heroism of engineers and firemen, the gallantry and bravery of conductors, the thrilling escapes from death of brakemen, and of the many superstitions of railroad men regarding their dangerous calling, constitute a form of literature as entirely peculiar to the last fifty years of the nine-teenth century as the development of steam itself. The engineer's position as a popular hero and romancer seems assured. The newspaper reporter apparently never tires of stories of the grimy drivers' affection for the ponderous machine which he controls, of his half belief that there is something almost human in a favorite locomotive, and of his yarns about being chased by a phantom engine, and miraculous escapes from an immediate and horrible death. Perhaps next in popularity is the fireman's always exciting popularity is the fireman salways excluding accounts of how he crawled out on the cowcatcher of his engine and snatched from the rails a golden-haired lovely baby just in the very nick of time to save it from being crushed beneath the great wheels. How we all admire him for it, and feel as thankful for his heroism as the horror-stricken mother who is invariably a helpless witness of her darling's danger and who faints away when she

Knights of the cab we honor you and feel sure that beneath many an oil-stained blouse beats a more chivalric and courageous heart than did beneath the bulletproof armor of many a knight who in days of old boldly led his unprotected soldiers where the leaden hail fell thickest. But we ask a hearing for the train-despatcher. If his position is not hedged around with danger it is at least one of great responsibility and importance, and he merits attention. Mr. William Blair, the traindespatcher on the Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee Railroad at Detroit, tells this good story of a not altogether pleasant experience of his: "For about fifteen years I have been an almost constant sufferer from neuralgia, which often unfitted me for my duties and which often unfitted me for my duties and made life a burden. The strain on my nerves was so great that I nearly lost the use of one of my eyes. I never succeeded in getting anything that would give me more than temporary relief until I began using Athlophoros. A few doses relieved me and the first bottle made a very decided change. In all I have probably used half a dozen bottles, and it is six months since I have had an attack.

I have had an attack. time. I have some here at my office and some at home, so that I am well prepared in case I may need it. If the neuralgia came on during business a dose or two would soon drive it away. For neuralgia Athlophoros is undoubtedly the best medicine I know of, and I think I ought to know as during the many years that I have suffered I have had occasion to try about everything in the line of medicine for this complaint. My confidence in Athlophoros is such that I have recommended it to many persons troubled with neuralgia, and in all cases it has been used very satisfactorily. In one case that I call to mind the gentleman found relief in two doses and in a short time was entirely well. I have recommended it. If you cannot get ATHLOPHOROS of your druggist, we will send it express paid, on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE. The Trip to the Bermudas-Wheelmen e the Ceral Turf.

HAMILTON, BERMUDA, ¿

March 8, 1886. About thirty live American wheelmen are just turning themselves loose over the coral roads of these snug little Bermuda Isles. Tuesday, March 2, a portion of the Ellwell Bermuda party pulled itself together for a dinner (no difficult matter) at the Metropolitan hotel, in New York. We expected to sail in the afternoon, but as the good ship Trinidad was still in midocean buffeting a sixty mile gale, it was wisely concluded to wait until she got in before boarding her. She came in Wednesday from a six days' voyage up, and covered with ice. The next day after we had taken possession of her she sailed. The storm had considerably abated but we looked for a rough sea and a wet sheet.

The steamer was filled with a jolly party which was represented in full at the supper table, but alas, there was soon to be beneath many a smiling face a heaving stomach. Next morning the swelling waves began to demand their tribute, and the sea gulls followed behind waiting for a meal, not disdaining even a second hand one. While perhaps half of us (the upper half) felt well, the rest had a strange yearning behind their vests, and they demonstrated it by refraining from attendance at the dining table, thereby giving the more fortunate ones a better chance at the good things. The events of the day were games of whist aud looking for the Gulf Stream, which the storm had blown farther out to sea, and sitting in the cabin cracking "jestnuts." Ditto Saturday, except in the eveni gwe began looking for the light which was sighted about 11, making the quickest trip yet made, of 57 hours. When we awoke we were slowly steaming around and among the Islands to the harbor, where the doctor came on board to see if any were sick with contagious diseases. We kept the white faced malde-mer ones in the background and he having a heavy cargo on board we drew too much water to get close to the dock, so the natives were called upon to build a dock out to us, after a primitive fashion It was a slow but interesting and amusing process which I would like to de-make a break for the hotel. On shore the birds were singing, the flowers were looming (not only in the spring, but the year around) and the heavens were veeping, they do this latter act about ten times a day, rainbows to the contrary notwithstanding. Somehow rainbows don't ount in this neck o' woods; I guess it is the Bermuda onions that make them weep so much. But it is a paradise here if only it would rain lemonade instead of wet water. However, a man on a pleasure trip should not "kick" over a little water like that. J. E. B.

The following words of caution from the Detroit Evening News, may well be pondered over by the class to whom it refers. Too much haste often defeats just causes:

Isn't it possible that the workingmen of the country are being hurried on a little too fast this spring? They have plenty of reason to complain, no doubt; but are they using just the right means to redress their wrongs? There was much sound sense in what Master Workman Powderly said the other day to the effect that strikes and boycotts are desperate weapons to be used only in the last resort, and to be used even then when all the circumstances give an assurance of success. Isn't this sound advice being disregarded in many instances at the present time? Aren't strikes being used as the first resort and under circumstances which in most cases render defeat certain?

Hood's Sarsaparilla is made of roots, herbs, barks, etc., long and favorably known for their power in purifying the blood; and in combination, proportion, and process, Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiar to itself. For a long time the Ypsilanti Sentinel has kept hammering away on a pet idea of its editor, a horse car route between Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti, whereby the two should be in effect wielded together into a city of 15,000 inhabitants. The idea is an excellent one, but we fear will never be carried out. Time is too precious to allow many people to spend an hour or two going from one town to the other. The project would probably not pay.

Including the March meeting for the past year, it has taken 206 pages of the record book to record the proceedings of the common council of this city, averaging 17 1-6 pages to each month. As these pages are 101/2x151/2 inches in size, it can easily be seen that the year's proceedings cover over some little space. Besides this, is the making out of the Recorder's Annual report, which this year required 87 pages of legal cap. Then there is the making out of the warrants each month. There have been 1,556 separate warrants drawn the past year, averaging 128 per month, taking 389 sheets of the warrant books, and calling for $33,339 33. The fewest warrants for any one month was 76 in number: the largest 188; the least amount any warrant was drawn for was 12 cents; the greatest amount $734.00. There have been 28 meetings of the council during the year, the greatest record for any one meeting being 40 pages. Another important thing for the Recorder is the fact that everything must be accurate. Mistakes are fatal. But don't imagine that the work above enumerated is all the Recorder has to do, for it is not by a considerable.
