At Lansing the average temperature during February was 22,44° F., or nearly 12 degrees higher than the average for February, 1885. During the last 14 days of the month the average day temperature was 31° F., and the average night temperature 11° F. On seven days the thermometer registered above the freezing point, and on seven nights it registered from 3 to 5 degrees above zero. During the first seven days of March the average day temperature was 32° F., and the average night temperature ranged from 19 to 42 degrees. and the night temperature from 5 to 23 degrees, above zero. A plume, a snake and a skull are arranged as "Secession Emblems," labeled 'Vanity, Treachery and Death." A gallows with Jeff. Davis hanging thereon is labeled "The Wrong Man in the Right Place," while upon another the picture of Gen. Scott surrounded by his country's banner is termed "The Right Man in the Right Place." It will be remembered that piracy was threatened at one time, and the President of the Confederacy thought of offering rewards for northerners, alive or dead, so a picture represents Jeff. Davis upon his throne with two pirates in front guarding a heavily shackeled boy in blue, and another pirate dragging in a dead soldier.

John Bull is represented in a "Perilous Feat of Horsemanship," endeavoring to ride, standing upright upon two horses, the North and the South, and carrying a bale of cotton upon his back. As a double bare-back equestrian John was not a success. "Jeff. Davis Going In," is represented

Just after the famous battle of ironclads in Hampton Roads, that revolutionized naval warfare, Uncle Sam is represented as standing upon the "cheese box," as the first monitor was called, and with his thumb to his nose in the manner of the darkie above, calls out: "No you don't." Literary Notes.

Cassell's Family Magazine for April is bright and charming as usual, put by Cassell & Co., New York, at $1.50 per

Mrs. Craik, the author of "John Haliax, Gentleman," claims that it is possible for a great novel to be written and yet not be a love story. Her readers will have an opportunity to judge of her own success in that line in the novel, "King Arthur; not a Love Story," which appears in the April Harper's. She bases the interest of her novel on maternal love.

Two suggestive articles to appear in the April Century are "Strikes, Lockouts and Arbitrations," by Geo. M. Powell, and an editorial on The Grant Memorial, "Who shall make the Monument?" "What kind of a Structure?" "The Question of style," The issue of the new life of Long fellow adds timeliness to a paper by Mrs. James T. Field, on Glimpses of Longfellow in Social Life," which is to appear in the same number, accompanying a new portrait of the poet, engraved from an ambrotype taken in 1848.

Charles Dudley Warner's, "Their Pilgrimage," which begins in Harper's April Magazine, may be called a "Summer Resort story." It will be a lively narrative of incident and observation on a journey men's live most applies of American place. good old song, whose strains are yet soul among the most poular of American pleasure resorts, with humorous delineations of character and a thread of romance run ning through it. Fortress Monroe, Cape May, and Atlantic City are visited in the first two chapters. C. S. Reinhart is to illustrate the serial, and ten of his draw. ngs accompany the first part.

"The Popular Science Monthly ' for April will contain the first of a series of articles by Hon. David A. Wells on "Ar Economic Study of Mexico." being the best prepared man, perhaps, in the country to deal with this subject by his thorough familiarity with the les of financial science, Mr. Wells has ecially qualified himself for treating y investigating the character and reof its people, and the state of its institutions, through careful and comprehensive observations made during a residence there under very favorable circumstance es. He throws a great deal of new light upon the subject, and shows that Americans generally are about as familiar with the social life of their neighbors, the Mex icans, as they are with the inhabitants of Madagascar.

for April is an admirable reproduction brown, of a head by Franz won Defregger. Miss Helen Zimmern writes a bio graphical and critical sketch of this intersting painter, which is illustrated with reproductions from his best work. The opening paper of the number describes an old English mansion, and makes one en vious of its architecture by the views that are given of its exterior and interior. A chapter on fire-places gives some excellent hints to builders of fine houses. An has recently returned from school at illustrated article, by William Davies, takes us along the Tiber from Bagnorea the Source and shows us the many attractions of this attractive river. A paper on the "Annunciation in Art," gives us much attentien. not only the history of the subject, but several reproductions from the more fanous masters who have treated this subject. The most interesting paper in the number is on "American Embroideries," by S. R. Koehler. Mr. Koehler gives very careful account of the rise and rowth of this art industry in the United States, where it has attained an importance not reached elsewhere. A paper on "Art in Phoenecia" follows this and then we are given a readable account of Boydell's Shakespeare. Cassell & Co., New York, $3.50 a year in advance.

THE COMING FASHIONABLE TOUR.

The tour of the great lakes has not yet ecome so fashionable as the tour of the Continent, but when Americans learn to appreciate their country better the time may, perhaps, come when it will be as quite the thing" to make a trip to Duluth, Mackinaw or Sault Sainte Marie, as it is now to take a run over to Paris, where all good Americans are supposed to go when they die. Duluth, to be sure, has not realized those splendid dreams of commercial supremacy so eloquently prophesied by Proctor Knott in his famous speech in Congress years ago, but still it is young and has plenty of time to grow. Just as W. D. Howell's "Wedding Journey" has marked out a beaten track for young couples in their honeymoon, down the St. Lawrence, up the Saguenay, through Montreal and Quebec and home again, a novelist is wanted to paint the glories of the lakes, their connecting rivers and the many beautiful cities that look out upon the waters; Buffalo, Cleveland and Detroit, and of these Detroit is the prettiest. Its splendid streets and many handsome homes make it one of the most attractive cities in the West, and the tourist will want to stop off here for a little while. If he does, perhaps he may chance to stroll into Franklin street, where, at No. 217, Mr. E. G. Richards has the office of his planing mill and box factory, and perhaps the gentle tourist may happ meet Mr. Richards and the converse s the gentle tourist may happen to as it often does, may turn upon the evils and weaknesses that flesh is heir to. If all this comes to pass, Mr. Richards may tell him this story of his recovery from neuralgia as he told it to a recent "I had had it for several years, and the attacks were most violent. At last they became so frequent that they were almost daily occurrences. All my efforts to obtain anything like a permanent cure were fruitless. I would sometimes get temporary relief by resorting to hot applications, but the neuralgia would come right back again. I had used almost every remedy I could hear of, and had also had physicians to prescribe for me, but none of these did me any good. I have probably spent two hundred dollars in various ways without any benefit whatever.

"Athlophoros took hold of the disease quickly and I got relief in the first two Three bottles effected a perfect cure. I have some in the house now and shall certainly always keep some, as it is worth its price, if it did no more than give me relief. Whether it has cured me perently I cannot say, but I do know that at the time I began using it I was suffer-ing intensely, and that within three months (from the day I stopped taking it to this) I have not felt a particle of neuralgia. It was Mr. Blair, the train dispatcher at the Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee Railroad, who recommended me to use Athlophoros after he had tried it and cured himself of a very severe case of long standing." of long standing."

If the gentle tourist still doubts the efficiency of Athlophoros to do what is claimed for it, let him call upon Mr. Blair, who will most willing add his testimony to that of Mr. Richards in support of the sovereign remedy's curative powers.

One of the most sensible documents that ever emanted from the brain of a leader of men, is the "secret circular" of Grand Master Workman Powderly, of the Knights of Labor. If that organization keeps cool and follows his advice there is no particle of doubt of their ultimate success. Bro. Woodruff to the contrary notwithstanding.

While Pinrgee &Smith were under the boy cott of the Knights of Labor, we were determined to have our next yair of shoes of their manufacture. They surrendered most ingloriously. * * * * * * Now we would run forty rods over pieces of broken junk bottles, barefoot, before we would allow Pingree & Smith's leather to touch our feet. This is not much worse than some of the other conditions imposed, for the Knightsseemed literally to have mopped the ground with this pusilanimous firm.—Ypsilanti Sentinel.

If our Ypsilanti brother had only conveyed a slight intimation of his purposes to Messrs. Pingree & Smith they probably never would have surrendered. Such a contract as proposed above would have thrown the old fashioned army contracts away in the shade, and the millions there would have been in it would certainly have induced Pingree & Smith to have held out to the bitter end. Rev. Dr. Rexford, of Detroit, is up with the times. Hear what he says about "us fellers," in comparing the influence and responsibility between ministers and editors: "What a power! Is there any other influence that is equal to it? The editors. They hold the most sacred positions of any class of men on this globe. In comparison the ministers can be excused and forgotten as far as power to influence the public mind is concerned. Does the public press create or echo public sentiment? It certainly creates public sentiment. The editor's chair is the most influential place on this globe to-day. It can make or unmake men, stimulate noble tendencies or the reverse. The clergy has not one-tenth the power of the press. And the power of the press would be greater if men were more particular here and there. There are editors who are careful what appears in the columns of their papers. I fear many are indifferent."

High Sengel Junior Ex.

On Friday evening last, the 26th inst. vas held the Junior exhibition of the Ann Arbor high school, in the high school hall A very large audience greeted the juniors even standing room being at a premium. The stage was handsomely trimmed, the class colors yellow and blue being draped around pictures of Whittier and Longfelow, with a large crest in the centre containing the class motto: "Non Quam Mulum Sed Quam Bene." Ropes of evergreen were gracefully draped from the centre of the hall in every direction, producing this organization continues to exist. The exercises were opened with prayer by Rev. S. Earp, followed by music.

by Rev. S. Earp, followed by music.

Thomas B. Cooley of Ann Arbor was the first to address the audience. He said that to the observed who travels over the earth for the purpose of storing his mind with knowledge, one fact is conspicuous, the world is not what it was. The ruins of Memphis, Troy, Balbec, tell of a civilization which in some particulars was perhaps in advance of the civilization of to-day. By comparing the world of to-day we can judge of the changes constantly occurring. He then pictured the scene in Michigan less than a century past, how rapid the growth and prosperity of our beautiful state had been. Such changes had never before been known, woods disappeared as if by magic, villages sprang up, the railway came, then the telegraph, and still later the telephone. It is a grand thing to live in such an epoch. But in time all these things will change and a people may some day gaze upon our ruins and wonder at them even as we wonder at the pyramids.

Sarah G. Come, of Ann Arbor, told of the "Influence of the Civil War," and commenced with the assertion that at the close of the American civil war ano empire, kingdom or principality stood upon a firm basis, the success of the principles of freedom here had shaken all the powers of the old world. All governments tend toward greater liberty. In Ireand and Russia the people have yet to learn that libense is not liberty. England is only a monarchy in name. Germany owes her existence as a power of Bismark alone. But so strong are the fetters he has forged that even after he has gone liberty will indicate it in 1856 was a defeat to monarchial governments. The war of France with Germany, the deat of Napoleon and the formation of a republic or that nation was for her referred to as being largely rought about by our civil war. What a great repossibility often does for a young man just enterag life that war has done for America. This naon now withstands the criticsm of the world. The ture has much yet to reveal.

Benj. E. Page of Ann Arbor, told of "The Fall of Quebec." He thought that the battles recorded in history did not depend so much upon numbers ngaged as upon principles involved and established. Less than 2,000 on both sides were engaged at exington, but they fired the first guns of the revolution. Somewhat similar was the struggle which inded in the fall of Quebec. That battle ended rench supremacy in America and this had greanfluence upon the fate of America, for with the lower of the French overthrown the colonists became self-reliant. It established the supremacy of the English speaking race on the continent and thus endered the revolution possible and the republic a fact. The colonies being left alone by England became capable of self-government. The town meeting was one of the important educators. After recarsing briefly the growth of the government down of the present day, he closed by quoting Bishop serkley's prophetic utterance of over a century go: "Westward the course of empire takes its ray" etc.

After a piece of music, Arthur H. Covert, of Su-ago: "Westward the course of empire takes its way" etc.

After a piece of music, Arthur H. Covert, of Superior, spoke of "England and Ireland." He did not consider it necessary to dwell on what England had been, and did not consider her exactly a model "mother country" to America. But nevertheless he did not consider Ireland the oppressed nation it claimed to be. If England was unjust he wanted the things named in which she was unjust. Each let of generosity toward Ireland is followed by a clamoring for more. He considered the Irish pointing in the properties of the properties of the properties of the properties and self-restraint, etc. As for Home Rule he stated that there were over 1,000,000 Irish who did not want it, and in its event civil war would surely follow, which was why England looked before she leaped. All that England wants is time, and she will bring up in the harbor of success with peace and contentment as an anchor.

ment as an anchor.

Sarah J. Keedle. of Superior, had an essay upon 'The Mysteries of Nature.' When people attempt o investigate they see how little is known, We know he mystery of the loadstone but no one can explain t we view the electric light, but no one can tell what electricity is; we know that objects make impressions on the eye and sounds upon the ear, but so one can solve the mystery of the human soul; we see the sun rise and give light but cannot explain hy the light gives life, and so on through many il-

"The Toledo War," was the theme of Lawrence Cole, of Ann Arbor. He said people had almost forgotten the Toledo war, or Washtenaw war, as it was sometimes called. The war was caused by an erroneous survey in which Ohio claimed 650 square miles which belonged to Michigan. Ohio called out her troops to help establish the survey and Michigan resolved to resist it. Attorney General B. F. Butler returned an opinion favorable to Michigan. John Quincy Adams says he never knew an instance where right was more clearly on one side and power on the other. It seems singular that there is no mention in our histories of this war for Michigan was in dead earnest. After reciting how a compromise was effected by receiving the upper peninsula instead, he closed by a eulogy upon the boy governor of Michigan, Stevens T. Mason.

The essay of Nellie G. Phillips, of Ann Arbor,

The essay of Nellie G. Phillips, of Ann Arbor, upon "Superstition," took us back to the Persians and Assyrians for illustration of how superstition prevailed even in those ancient days. It was not the child of ignorance but had clung to the enlightened as well. It had been handed down through all ages from generation to generation. But she hoped that the "beautiful sunlight from above will at some future time, as has been prophesied, make all things clear."

"What Faces Say," was the theme of Miss Belle Sperry, of Ann Arbor town. Human speech was slow and tedious in its growth, but we have the language of the face to tell what people are. The little child is often thus able to judge where kindness dwells beneath. It is a lamentable fact that a child often clings to its nurse rather than to its mother.
Our judgment of a person by his face was often correct, sometimes incorrect, but it is soon made, and we like or dislike before acquaintance is formed.
Physiognomy may be ranked as an exact science,
On the face may be pictured the four ages of man, childhood, youth, middle age, old age. It is not so much what we are as what we do that moulds itself upon our faces, and it lies wholly with ourselves to determine what our faces shall say.

Viola M, Williams' essay was upon "Tact and Talent." These qualities were often considered the same but were not quite synonymous. Talent tells us what to do, tact how to do it. It is not so often talent the unsuccessful man wants as tact. Brilliant mental acquirements prove a detriment to success unless assisted by an cducation practical as well as theoretical. Simply a diploma from an agricultural college would not make a good farmer, neither would one from a commercial college make a good busines man. Some of the frailties of Lord Bacon, and the lacking essentials in the characters of Cowper, Beethoven, Addison and Swift were then given as illustrations. The man of tact is the fortunate one, but he who has tact and talent combined will accomplish most, and at Judgement Day he will return his talent with two-fold value.

"Our Treatment of the Indians," was not highly praised by Harry E, Palmer, of Imlay City. He asked if the people felt much pride in it, and thought many volune es might be written of their wrongs.
The Indians had often been allotted certain tracts of land and they had no sooner settled there than the government had ordered them to leave, and if t

the past cannot be undone, the future hay produce a history which coming generations may review with profit.

"Picking up Chips," was the last essay, and it was a pleasing one delivered by Gertrude S. Wade, of Ann Arbor. The initiatory led off with a mother's request to her young hopeful to "close the door my son, and go and pick up a basket of chips." But chips are scarce these times. The chips of time must be carefully picked up, garnered and saved; the chips of good thought can be easily carried about with us.. Then there are the chips of opportunity, and blessed are we if our eyes and ears are keen in their gathering. Iudustry and perseverance are essential, for the world is no man's debtor until he has done something. Difficulty, necessity and adversity are hard wood chips, but the shadow of the mountain only falls upon one side at the same time. We must look well to our basket and see that it is not unevenly filled, for it is not so much how many as how well.

skill that makes such cures possible. The latest scheme credited to the co-eds is that at one of the boarding houses where scarlet fever invaded the sacred precincts, and a quarantine was proclaimed, a young lady hung a rope out of the window by which her adorers might climb up to her exalted position in the second story. A sophomore admirer one night seeing a junior rival ascend the rope in truly gymnastic style, greased said rope and when the fellow descended he came down so quick that all the Romeo and Juliet romance smashed to atoms, and words very like profanity escaped the lips that had but a few moments before reveled in honeyed sweetness.

But after thorough investigation and observation it was found that not enough of the fellows were at the gym between the hours of 8 and 10 a. m. and : and 3 p. m. to justify the manager, Mr. Dorn, in keeping a janitor, and hence the ladies were given the privilege of occupying the gym during those hours. FUTURE TENSE. Rafael Joseffy, April 29th. Fanny Davenport with her full troupe will present Fedora at the Grand Opera House on Thursday night. She has just closed her engagement at St. Louis, Mo., and the St. Louis Republican speaks of her as follows: her as follows:

Of Miss Fanny Davenport, however, it is cheerfully conceded that she is a master of stage art. Her long experience and her indefatigable study have imprinted upon her work a polish, a completeness and a refinement which even Sardon cannot obliterate nor obscure. Like Rachel, she always acts, and there is not a moment of her presence on the stage whey she is not, in very truth, the character depicted. She does not belong to the Italian school which rises to occasions only but partakes rather of the old English method which required the actor to act from the moment he donned his costume until a friendly curtain fell between himself and the footlights. The infinite amount of detail which goes to constitute a stage picture is seldom appreciated until it is framed as amount of detail which goes to constitute a stage picture is seldom appreciated until it is framed as Fanny Davenport frames it. The flexibility of voice and features, the grace of posture and genuficeture, the intensity of movement and expression the cloquence of hands and feet—these are overlooked in the hubbub of roystering comedies; but when one comes to comtemplates the stage work of a woman like Miss Davenport the reality of stage art becomes at once apparent. It is the completeness and the harmony with which a variety of detail is woven together, forming at last a picture rivaling that of the painter.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC RAILWAY By reason of its central position and close relation to all principal lines East and West, at initial and terminal points, constitutes the most important mid-continental link in that system of through trar portation which invites and facilitates travel and traffic between cities of the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. It is also the favorite and best route to and from points East, Northeast and Southeast, and corresponding points West, Northwest and Southwest.

The Rock Island system includes in its main line and branches, Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa. THE CREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE Guarantees its patrons that sense of personal security afforded by a solid, thoroughly ballasted road-bed; smooth tracks of continuous steel rail; substantially built culverts and bridges; rolling stock as near perfection as human skill can make it; the safety appliances of patent buffers, platforms and air-brakes; and that exacting discipline which governs the practical operation of all its trains. Other specialities of this route are Transfers at all connecting points in Union Depots, and the unsurpassed comforts and luxuries of its Passenger Equipment.

The Fast Express Trains between Chicago and the Missouri River are composed of well ventilated, finely upholstered Day Coaches, Magnificent Pullman Palace Sleepers of the latest design, and sumptuous Dining Cars, in which elaborately cooked meals are leisurely eaten, "good Digestion waiting on Appetite, and Health on both." Before making the plunge into city life, ountry girls should ask themselves what s really to be gained by it. Perhaps in their quiet tural homes some stray advertisement has reached them, promising to young women high salaries for light work. Hundreds of advertisements are famed for the very purpose of deceiving the un-wary. They accomplish their purpose, however and large numbers of young girls rush up to the city, dazzled by the generous profusion of promises. A girl from the farm answers one of these advertisments. Life may have been slow a home, but there was always good foo ! and in plenty, and there was some one to care for in the old tarm house. When she goes to the big city she finds that the 'light work' consists in working all day a badly lighted and ill-smelling shop, where scores of other girls and women are employed at wages hardly high enough to keep body and soul to-gether. We know what often comes next The girl has left home, she is ashamed or uswilling to return, and she must take the consequences, one of two things—shame or suffering. Many a girl find first in the frivolities and next in the iniquity of the streets that excitement by which regrets and remorse may be deadened. If she is too strong in principle, too pure and elevated in tone thus to sink down to one of the pitiful women of the streets, she may find herself in some cold garret, lonely, overworket. despondent and miserable. I suffered two or three years from stomach troubles and dyspepsia, as well as from liver and kidney complaint. I was not able to attend to my business. My wife was afflicted in much the same way. We read of your Bitters in the papers and made up our minds that we would try them. The result is my wife and I began to improve at once, and I am now able to do more hard work than before in ten years. It relieved my kidney troubles as well. We both wish you, the makers of it. Godspeed.
