A day never passes that I do not think and speak ll of a dozen lumps formed on my neck ranging eat skin cure, and Cuticura Soap, an exquisite scars in my neck to-day to tell the story of my suffering. My weight then was one hundred and fifteen sickly pounds; it is now one hundred and sixty-one solid, healthy pounds, and my height is only five feet five inches. In my travels I praised the Unicura Remedies, North, South, Esst and West. To Unicura Remedies I owe My Health, My Happiness and My Life. A prominent New York Druggist asked me the other day, "De you still use the Unicura Remedies? you look to be in perfect health." My reply was, "I do, and shall always. I have never know what sickness is since I commenced using the Cuticura Remedies." Sometimes I am laughed at by praising them to people not acquainted with their merits, but sooner or later they will come to their senses and believe the same as those that use them, as dozens have whom I have told. May the time come when there shall be a large Cuticura Supply House in every city in the world, for the benefit of humanity, where the Cuticura Remedies shall be sold only, so that there will be rarely a need of ever entering a drug store.

Exactly the of their own race; they are the men who lift their voices for the Chinese army and urge them on and beat down the five bundred American girls to poverty and pros-titution and starvation. How long will his kind of business last? It will last until our own American girls are driven to death or a life of shame and their starved and ruined bodies are hustled under ground and their lost souls summoned to take their flight to the unseen world. Iron ore is protected from foreign competition; shovels and spades are protected; foreign sewing machines and scissors have to pay duty before they are put upon the market. But the American men who dig out the ore, and the American girls who use the other have no custom house barrier between themselves and the vermin eating wretches who, having devoured Asia like a plague of locusts, have set their faces toward the prosperity and plenty of the white man's coutinent. SPRING DANGERS.

The dangers of this season are simply appalling. The system has been braced up to meet the severity of Winter and the warm weather coming on opens the pores and renders diseases both possible and probable. The great source of all Spring disorders is to be found in the blood which is almost always out of order in the Spring. Men, women and children must take something; do something. Blood-poisoning is so common and is becoming so dangerous it is necessary to exercise much more caution than ever before. The breaking out which is so frequent is in every case the result of impure blood, and usually a result of rheumatism. But suppose this impurity does not break out? What becomes of it? Often it attacks some vital organ, usually the heart, and sudden death or lingering suffering are the results. These are absolute facts and serious ones too.

For the treatment and cure of rheumatism in all its forms, as well as all blood disorders, and the functional derangements that cause them, Hibbard's Rheu matic Syrup is strongly recommended alike by the medical faculty and by prominent citizens, where it has once been introduced. Acting immediately on the blood and the organs through which it is purified, it dissolves and removes the uric, lithic and lactic acids which are its which will be read with interest by many of our readers:

During Governor Felch's administration the state sold the Michigan Central and the Michigan Southern railroad to eastern companies. Before that the roads were constructed and owned and operated by the State of Michigan. The Central road was completed as far as Kalamazoo, and the Southern as far as Hillsdale. They were poorly equipped, and considerably run down under state management. The Governor went over the Southern with representatives of the Eastern buyers at a rate of 30 miles an hour, in order to impress the visitors that the road was safe. He remembers that trip as ageing him more than any other experience of his life. The rails were the old strapiron sort, the road rough, and every instant he expected a "snake-head" to come up through the floor of the rocking and shaking car, and a general smash up to occur. The engineer was a reckless fellow, chosen for the trip on that very account, and he "let things rip." But the party got through safely, and the bargain was concluded. Then the Governor took a slow train home.

finally settled there in 1720. He began with a large number of operas, cantatas, pastoral and church music, but, whether on account of a rivalry between himself and a favorite Italian composer, or rather, we think, because like Gounod after him, he did not find in the limited and narrow scope of the drama the expansion which his genius wanted, he gave up operatic music to devote his energies to the sacred oratorio music, his first production being the oratorio of "Esther." This style afforded in all the essentials the musica equivalent of the epic; and we find in all of Handel's works the breadth and depth of the epic poetry. In this line, the master work of Handel, his summum opus, is THE MESSIAH which is said to be equivalent to Milton's "Paradise Lost." The work is divided into three parts, as follows:

Now the tax is $1 per year for male and $3 for female dogs. There are at least 1,000 male and 100 female dogs in the city of Ann Arbor, at a very low estimate. Where is the balance of the dog tax? Do the dogs evade the tax? Have they boycotted the assessors, or have the supervisors weakened, and failed to report the dogs because they feared the owners thereof might cast their vote at the next election for some other fellow? Or, perish the thought, Mr, Editor, has the greater amount of the tax been collected and "knocked down?" The ghosts of a thousand sheep, on as many hillsides are stareing at these untaxed canines in ghastly array, and their piteous bleating is crying out for the tax. The enforcement of this law means the reduction of the number of dogs, and that is what is wanted in every community. Cooley, Dr. W. F. Breakey, Edward Then why is not the law enforced, Mr. Editor? With those who know Mr. Clarkens is statement is as binding as an oath. Visiting Mr. Edward Pate, the Main street machinist, the reporter was informed by this gentleman that he was recovering from the condition of partial paralysis and acute liver complaint by the use of this popular medicinal agent. Mr. Pate's condition at one time was considered hopeless-he now enthusiasticly pronounces Hoptonic a blessing to the human family. Mr. Thomas F. Leonard, ex-sheriff of Washtenaw county, and for a long time proprietor of the popular Leonard House hostelry—the present Franklin House—stated that both he and Mrs. Leonard took pleasure in recommending Hoptonic, as they both used it and would not be with out it. They consider it the best tonic and spring remedy to be obtained.
