The committee on fruit preserving facory reported that Allmendinger Schneider had erected the largest size of the Acme dryer and are ready for any surplus of black raspberries. The chairpointed a committee to investigate what price raspberries could be dried profitably. Mr. Baldwin stated that dried black raspberries were worth 251/2 cents per lb. at Chicago. It takes three quarts of berries to make one pound dried. He would send his berries to the factory if they would not net him 6 cents per quart. S. Mills: Raspberries do not pay if sold below 8 cents. The report on transportation will be published next week, Prof. B. E. Nichols, the secretary of the committee being absent. The oral report by the chairman was very favorable to shippers of fruit. The rates of the Express Co. on the different routes of the Mich. Central, Toledo, Ann Arbor & Northern Michigan, and Pere Marquette roads with other valuable statistics to the fruit growers who were mostly absent were given by the chairman. The work that the home committees have accom-plished is much greater than the fruit growers generally are aware of. If to nothing else these gentlemen who have given their time, talent and money, are entitled to the sincerest thanks of the society and every fruit grower. Why the majority of fruit growers never pay a cent nor give an hour's time to organized work of this kind which has become a necessity is a profound mystery to the Evart H. Scott read a letter from secre tary Garfield asking this society to contribute at least 150 plates of fruit to the comological exhibit at the coming State fair. EMERSON'S DAUGHTER.

Her Sturdy Independence and Disregard Ellen Emerson, daughter of Ralph Waldo Emerson, is as independent in her movements as her father was in thought. She was out walking the other day when it began to rain heavily. Along came a rustic horse dragging a swill cart, with a conventional country boy on the rough plank that served for the driver's seat. Miss Emerson calmly stopped the cart and climbed up to a place on the plank beside the driver, and rode home as fast and that is the greater cord. windows in horror. But the proper customed to a more peculiar sight than the daughter of the philosopher on a swill cart. Miss Emerson has a donkey, the gift of a friend, upon which she lavishes considerable affection. She has horses and carriages, but whenever it suits her fancy she has the donkey saddled and brought to the door. There she mounts him and rides unreservedly about town. She is so tall and the donkey so short that she has to hold up her feet to prevent them from dragging on the ground. Visitors to Concord who have not been familiar with donkey riding in Europe, where the habit is comparatively common, find the sight entertaining. -N. Y. Sun.

Knew When He Had Enough.

A few days since a well-known negro man, who was the fortunate possessor of a fine lot on one of the leading residence streets of the city, sold his property for $10,000 cash. He was given a check for that amount, which was carried in due time to one of the banks. The paying teller asked the negro how much of the money he wanted in cash. "I wants all that 'ar paper calls fur," replied the negro.

"What! You don't want $10,000 in cash?" "Jesso, sah." "All right," answered the man who shuffles the bank bills, and in five minutes he began piling the money on the counter. As he laid the $500 packages on the counter the negro's eyes began to grow larger, and finally, when twenty of the packages were placed before him, his eyes looked as large as new moons. The negro looked intently at the stack of money for a moment, and then, with a broad grin on his face, Horace Greeley, finding himself in Washington on Thursday evening, soon after the election of Colfax as Speaker, determined to attend the Speaker's reception. He accordingly arrayed himself in his usual neat and fashionable costume, boots like young gunboats, pantaloons rather the worse of the wear, of Chatham street stock, and a couple and inclined at an angle of forty-five deas the boy could make the animal go. grees. On such occasions there is always a good deal of trouble with the hackmen. They will insist upon disregarding the rules in these cases made and provided, that they shall move to the other side of the street as soon as they are relieved of setting sun, ready at a moment's notice to their gay and precious burdens, so as to prevent a general blockade, and to make way for those who are yet to come. Sometimes there is a row between the masters of the outside ceremonies and an obstinate Jehu who attempts to ignore or disregard the rules of vehicular discipline. Mr. Greeley was quietly waiting his turn on the occasion referred to, or, rather, was leisurely waiting on the doorsteps for the "rush" to cease, not taking much notice of we belched our typographical compliwhat was going on around him, com-

The Tribune philosopher rominded his assailant that this was a clear case of mistaken identity. "I'm not a hack driver, sir, you are mistaken altogether." "Ain't you quired the officiating Hibernian. "No, sir; my name is Greeley; I've come to attend the reception." The truth flashed upon the Irish mind that he had grossly insulted the editor of the Tribune, and he commenced apologizing. "You see, sir," said he, "we have a great deal of trouble with these hack drivers, and upon my honor, sir, when I saw you standin' there I thought you were the man that dhruv up that pair o' horses." Greeley laughed, said no apology was necessary, and walked in to see Colfax and the reception .- Ben: Perley Poore, in Boston Budget.

of climate was what I needed. [Laughter.] Mr. Williamson, in his own pleasant way, has told you of "the girl he left behind him." I know what that experience is. When I started to go, and everybody was anxious to get rid of me, there was one golden-haired, blue-eyed woman at the gate who stood there with her tearful eyes looking pleadingly into mine. I never knew before what it was to part from such a woman, and I know by the sympathy on your upturned faces as I tell this that your minds wander back with me to the violet studded meadow of old New England where the air carries the scent of the falling apple blosoms and the sad sea waves beats upon your memories vaguely. We have all seen the tearful woman at the gate who would hold us back. This one held me back about an hour, but I paid half my board bill and agreed to send the balance from Chicago, and she let my trunk go down to the stage and me along with it too quick.
[Applause and laughter.] I left Omaha
with a fine team and Studebaker wagon. I won't say now how I got the horses, but I got 'em. A. C. [Laughter.] While the poor man was figuring out the point of the joke we passed out of the city limits, and with light hearts and brave resolves set our faces toward the Indian yell. We had bought an old brass howitzer at Salt Lake and a keg of powto fire salutes. Our idea in firing our own salutes was not to saddle the expense of welcoming us on other people who might perhaps not be in the circumstances to afford it. We loaded up the old howitzer with powder, and not know-ing what else to do crammed in a column of old type. A scheme is being agitated among the merchants and business men of this city that may have some effect on the proposed removal of the medical department of the University to Detroit. The plan is practically for them to combine and transfer their entire trade to Toledo and Chicago the Detroit wholesale trade of at the very least $500,000 per year, and probably nore. Toledo is as near as Detroit, prices are as cheap there, and our mer-chants can be as well supplied from that ble article: point as from Detroit. The movement is a retaliatory one to offset the proposed aking away of the medical department by Detroit, if it shall be agreed to. Judge Joslyn says that Judge Campbell left out one important incident in reference to Gov. Barry's administration that year 1844 the university funds had become entirely exhausted. What was to be done was a mystery. Finally Regents Whiting, Ten Brook, et al went down to Detroit to interview the Governor. After laying their case before him he asked: "Gentle men, how much do you consider necessary to run the university until the state aid is available?" The answer was $1,000. The governor sat down to a desk and wrote his personal check for that amount (which was a great deal in those days) and the regents took it and carried on the university until the legislature came to

THE SEMI-CENTENNIAL. President Angell's Address.

Interest in the semi-centennial celebration continued up to the very last moment, and every exercise was attended by an audience that was enthusiastic. The speeches were well received, that of Senator Palmer being especially so, likewise those of the representatives of the various colleges. President Goodwin, of the Northwestern University making an esnecial hit when he said that although having been here but a day or so, he thought perhaps he knew as much about the university as did the governor of the The crowning speech, however, was that of President Angell, and we regret mentary instruction. Would that these our inability to publish it entire. We have made copious extracts, however, framed our first constitution and shaped which will give our readers an excellent dea of the whole:

We celebrate to-day the Jubilee of this university. Her years are indeed few when compared with those of Heidelberg University which last year kept her five hundredth anniversary, or with those of the University of Edinburgh, which recently observed her tercentenary, or ever with those of Harvard University, which ast autumn gathered an illustrious as mbly to celebrate the two hundred and iftieth year of her prosperous life. But n this country, where we judge men by heir achievements rather than by their ineage, we properly judge of institutions by their deeds rather than by their age. When we consider what we must in all soberness of language call the extraordi-nary development of this University, es-pecially during the last thirty-five years, when we remember that men are living who have shot wild deer upon the grounds which now form our campus then we see that from the number of er students and from the extent, variety nd excellence of her work, she is deemed by the public not unworthy a place by the side of the oldest and best endowed universities of our country, and that she has sent out more than eight thousand graduates who are adorning all honorable vocations in all parts of the world, we early stage in her history to rejoice at the unparalleled rapidity of her growth, to acknowledge our grateful appreciation of the men, who laid her foundations with prescient wisdom, and of the equally wise men who builded thereon in the broad spirit of the founders, and to stimulate velopment which the strongest of the New England Universities took two centuries and more to reach. We might in a very just sense celebrate this year the centennial of the life of the University. For the germ of that life and of the life of all the State Universities in the west is found in that great in strument, the Ordinance of 1787, which was adopted just a hundred years ago the thirteenth of next month. You remember that memorable Article, whose first sentence we have placed here upon our walls, a sentence, which should be en-graved in letters of gold on fitting monout of the Northwest Territory; "Religion, morality and knowledge, being

The precedent then established has been uniformly followed in the admission of pays followed in the fact that the prevalence of an intelligent public opinion, upon the value of the large followed in the control of this week lay it soberly to heart, that the prevalence of an intelligent public opinion, upon the value of the large followed in the control of the la owed in the admission of new states. Well, therefore, might not only this University, but all the public schools and the State Universities in the northwest, join in grateful observance of the hundredth aniversary of the Great Charter of freedom and intelligence for this region. Well might they together commemmorate the centennial of the inauguration of that fruitful policy, which has endowed institutions of learning, from the lowest to the highest, by the gift of public lands.

It has been said, and doubtless with truth, that the Congresses which adopted the Ordinance and made the earlier gifts of lands for educational purposes did not at all appreciate how great were to be the beneficent results of their action. How was it possible that they should? For achievement has in this western country outrun the prophecy of the most sanguine seer. The wildest dreams of the future development of this region which were cherished by the most enthusiastic settlers and prosaic by the side of the romantic of the history itself as we read it to-day How could they have imagined that by this time there should be in the Northwest Territory, a large part of which was then an untrodden wilderness, a population four times as great as that of the whole United States in their day, and that over the whole of it schools, academies and colleges should be sown multitudinous as the stars of heaven? If they builded better than they knew, there was in the scope of their far-reaching work a happy augury of the broad and generous wisdom which by some good fortune has presided over the various and successive plans for the organization and developnent of a university in this state. The original plan which was drawn by Judge Woodward in 1817 was characterized by remarkable breadth, though sketched in language ridiculously pedan tic. In the development of our strictly university work we have yet hardly been able to realize the ideal of the eccentric The complimentary tickets issued by but gifted man, who framed the project of the "Catholepistemiad or University

New York. In 1821 the governor and judges translated Judge Woodward's charter into modern forms of speech and modified it in some particulars. They gave to the Institution the simple name of The University of Michigan. Repealing the Act of 1837, they yet retained in the Act or Charter of 1821 the grant to the Univer-This will make a difference to sity of the power to establish colleges and schools so far as the funds, which were no longer to be furnished by taxation, would permit. On the admission of Michigan to the Union as a State, broad plans for public education were taken up with a more vigprous spirit than ever before. The men who framed the first constitution and shaped the early legislation of the State have been wise to provide for it at least were men of large views, great enter-prise, and marked force. They had come mainly from Ohio, New York and New England, though a few conspicuous leaders were from Virginia. A considerable rate, local organizations, and not as ar proportion of them were college bred, and all appreciated the importance of a tary establishment of the "diploma conwell organized system of public educance of the university and the university until the legislature came to its rescue.

What a noble and statesmanlike conception those founders of Michigan had of the educational outfit needed by the young State, which they foresaw was destined to be a great and powerful State. What a rebuke is their action to some of the theorists of our day who would confine the action of the our early legislation on education, and would thus learn what was the original and genuine Michigan spirit and temper concerning the support of all our educational institutions. The infancy of the institution was not unattended with perils and with some disasters. A bill once passed the senate and was defeated in the house only by one vote to distribute the income of the fund among various colleges which were planned or which might soon be planned. Mr. Pierce tells us that by his personal effort he secured the defeat of that bill. He had obtained from leading administrators or colleges in various parts of the country, and had incorporated in his anendowment and the establishment of a brood of weak and impoverished colleges were barely prevented. Meantime from the date of their accession to office the Regents had been busy in preparing to launch the University. Their difficulties were very great. The management of the lands was not in their hands. They could not know, even apnay well pause for a day even at this proximately, in any one year how much money they could rely on having the next year. They had no power to appoint a President. They had many discouragements in unwise legislation. But we owe them a debt of gratitude for the courage with which they pushed on. Our scientific friends will observe with interest that among their very first acts was the purchase of the Baron Lederer collection of minerals, and a copy of Audubon's Birds of America. The very first profes-sor they appointed was Dr. Asa Gray, to ory of many now before me has reared immense cities on the prairies and has the chair of Zoölogy and Botany, the distinguished botanist, who, crowned with builded States that are empires all the way from the Great Lakes to the Pacific, aurels from both hemispheres, is still aboring with untiring activity in the veins of this school of learning, and has hurried it in a few brief years to the defreshness of a vigorous old age. received in March, 1838, a loan of $100,-000 from the State, and by September, 1841, had completed the erection of four dwelling houses, absurdly planned by a New York architect, and of the building a name which unfortunately did not remain in use. And so now, in September, 1841, four years after the Regents had begun their work, we find the doors of the University really open for the reception of students, and Professor Whiting and ments in every State, that was carved ut of the Northwest Territory; "Religclass rooms five freshmen and one sophonecessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged."

> liberal learning. While in a certain very just and emphatic sense the University rests on foun-lations laid seventy years ago, and in the form in which we know it has been builded on the lines traced during the adninistration of the first President, under the wise and tactful direction of his successor, President Haven, it moved on rapidly in its career of prosperity. Additions were made to the Observatory building interest in the University of their abiding interest in the University of the Uni ng, to the Medical building and to the sity. Chemical Laboratory. A course in Pharmacy and the so called Latin and Scientific course were established. The number of students rapidly increased, until in 1866-7 it had reached twelve hundred and fifty-five. Dr. Haven's genial and concili-atory temperament, his felicity of address, his versatile adaptability, and his broad and generous theories of education won favor for himself and the University.

To the great regret of students, Faculties, Regents and the public he resigned after a brief administration of six years. During the two years which Dr. Frieze occupied the executive chair two most inportant measures were adopted, which broadened very much the influence of the University. These were the admission of women to all departments, and the establishment of the system by which students are on certain conditions received from high schools without special examination. In respect to both of these measures we may say that seventeen years experience has justified most, if not all, the expectations of those who advocated them, and has removed the doubts and fears of those who opposed them or who supported them with hesitancy. Hundreds of women have availed themselves of the privileges offered them here, and have gone forth, several of them to foreign lands as missionary teachers or missionary physicians, many to various parts of our country as teachers in high schools, academies and colleges, and the rest to those various duties, whether in professional careers, official positions, or in domestic life, which women of culture are fitted to discharge. The success of the experiment of admitting women to this institution was very influential in opening to them the doors of many coleges in this country and was not without effect abroad. The establishment of the "diploma relation with the high schools" was one of the most important steps ever taken to bring unity into the public school system of this State. Superintendent Pierce had in his first report wisely urged that all grades of schools should be equally under the care of the state and supported by it. He was strenuous for the organization of the branches of the University. so that the high school education migh be furnished in them and teachers might be prepared for the primary schools His only mistake was in throwing upon the University fund the expense of this secondary school work, when it would in part from the common school funds. The branches having finally been severed from the University, the union schools or high schools grew up as sepaorganic part of one system. The volunnection" between the University and the high schools set up a quasi-organic relaall respects a perfectly formal, un though somotimes with modifications that have diminished its efficiency. During recent years, with an ever enlarging conception, both on the part of the State and of the University, of the functions, opportunities, and duties of this Institution, its development has been rapid and striking. The work of the long-established departments has been elevated, broadened and curiched, new departments have been added, commodius buildings have been multiplied, and the power of the University has been largely strengthened. While studying the history and develop ment of this Institution, it is pleasant to remember that it has not been without a creditable influence upon other college and universities. Every good institution of learning by its life helps every other one to be a good one. And while in the pres-ence of so many honored delegates from other schools of learning, who rejoice us by their presence at this hour, we gratefully acknowledge the inspiration we have re ceived from our sister institutions, we may be permitted to recall the testimony which some of them have borne to us of the assistance they have found in our experiences. Particularly have the State Universities which have been established in all the western and some of the southwestern States builded to a considerable degree on the model of this University The same causes which contributed to ou prosperity are now crowning them with success. Whatever perils may have beset nual report opinions strongly urging the concentration of strength in one vigorous institution. Yet so powerful were the private and local interests appealed to by the bill that the frittering away of the endowment and the establishment of a proved wise. As we see these State Universities attaining to higher usefulness and eminence and rejoice in their progress, we think it not presumptous to believe that one of the useful services which this Institution has rendered i found in the guidance and help which she has providentially been able to furnish to these sister institutions of the west. In the bright history of this Institution we joyfully read a happy augury for he tuture. With such rapid strides has she come forward into the front rank of American Universities that we instinct tively look for continued and brilliant progress in the second half century of upon which she is now entering We often delight ourselves with imagin ing what the next generation will find here when the celebration of the centen nial of the University shall be held.

of receiving students from the gymnasium

While we do not suffer ourselves t doubt that the development of the Uni versity is to continue, we do well to keep in mind even in these days of exuberant joy the essential condition to her prosperity. That condition is the hearty pathy and support of the State of Michi The proceeds of the United States gan. Last Monday Milo Pulcipher was made one of the happiest men in town by having a fine silver watch, Elgin movement presented to him by the "boys" who were his associates in the office here, together with several who learned telegraphy under him. Milo will take this pleasing memento of good will and affection to his new western home, and it will be a joy forever to him.

The Fourth of July was a very quiet affair in Ann Arbor, except at the depots at train time. Hundreds of our citizens took advantage of the half-rates to "go somewhere." Many went to Detroit, many to Whitmore Lake, some to South Lyon, some to Dundee, and others scattered to various other places. Quite a number of boys remained in the city, however, and the explosion of fire crackers, big and little, greeted one from morning until night, while at many homes oman candles and sky-rockets were indulged in in the evening. The stores and places of business were quite generally closed, and everybody took a rest,
