ily Cured by Cuticura.

Our little son will be four years of age on the 25th inst. In May, 1885, he was attacked with a very painful breaking out of the skin. We called in a physician who treated him for about four weeks. The child received little or no good from the treatment, as the breaking out, supposed by the physician to be hives in an aggravated form, became larger in blotches, and more and more distressing. We were frequently obliged to get up in the night and rub him with soda in water strong liniments, etc. Finally, we called other physicians, until no less than six had attempted to cure him, all alike failing, and the child steadily growing worse and worse, until about the 20th of last July, when we began to give him CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally, and by the last of August he was so nearly well that we gave him only one dose of the RESOLVENT about every second day for about ten days longer, and he has never been troubled since with the horrible malady. In all we used less than one half of a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, a little less than one box of Cuticura and only one cake of Cuticura Soap.

A Word About Catarrh.

"It is the mucous membrane, that wonderful semi-fluid envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that Catarrh makes its stronghold, Once established it eats into the very vitals, and renders life but a long drawn breath of misery and disease, dulling the sense of hearing, trammelling the power of speech, destroying the faculty of smell, tainting the breath and killing the refined pleasures of taste. LITTLE AH SID.

Little Ah Sid Was a Christian kid— A cute little cuss, you'd declare— With eyes full of fun, And a nose that begun Right up in the roots of his hair.

Jolly and fat
Was this frolicsome brat,
As he played through the long s
And braided his queue
As his father used to,

Once o'er a lawn
That Ah Sid played upon,
A bumble-bee flew in the spring;
"Melican butterfly!"
Said he, with winking eye;
"Me catchee and pull off um wing."

Then with his cap
He struck it a rap—
This innocent humble-bee—
And put its remains
In the seat of his jeans,

Written by Mrs. A. C. Faxon on the dea

This is the end of summer.
And the end of all things fair;
For my beautiful red-lipped baby,
My boy, with the yellow hair,
My boy with eyes like a pansy,
And the little dimpled hand,
Has gone away with the flowers
To the somewhere distant land.

Dead! I cannot believe it.
I close my eyes and feel
My baby's touch on my bosom,
And see him humbly kneel
In his little white robe before me And clasp his little hands; But no; he has gone with the flowers To the somewhere distant land.

Dead! My beautiful darling, Dead! My beautiful darling,
Only one year from Heaven;
Is it wrong to sorrow?
Pray God I be forgiven;
But there will come to me moments
When I clasp my empty hands,
And long, oh, so much, to follow
My boy to that distant land.

It is wrong, I know, but a mother Will miss her baby so;
She cannot forget his cunnings
That no other child can know.
There is always the empty cradle
And the empty heart and hand
For the mother whose baby has left her
For the far off somewhere land.

It is said that nature shudders Then all nature gives a groan.

But there's nothing that gives nature More keen anguish and distress Than to see a struggling father With a babe he tries to dress.

-[The Jud A RAILROAD HORROR.

The Worst Railroad Accident that has Ever been Known-The Details are Heartrending and Sickening-A Suspicion that it was Deliberately Planned for Robbery and Plunder.

Of all the horrible railroad catastrophies that ever happened in the United States, the one of last Wednesday night, at Chatsworth, Ill., on the line of the Toledo, Peoria and Western Road," in people in 16 cars, is undoubtedly the worst. The train was bound for Niagara falls, and had been made up along the line of the road. The accident was caused by the burning of a bridge over a dry run. Six of sixteen cars were telescoped, over 120 passengers instantly killed, and many more seriously injured. The following account of one of the excursionists gives an idea of the horrible affair :

"I was in the second sleeper and we were going along about midnight when there came a peculiar jostling. I thought he sent a bullet through his brain. that we had been derailed. Our porter said: 'We are all right,' when some one said: 'There is a fire ahead.' I got up and went to the front. The head engine had rushed on. The second engine had tumbled into the chasm. It had telescoped, and the engineer was a shapeless mass. The first car was turned to right angles with the track and the remaining cars with the track and the remaining cars also of Farmington, and to whom she elescoped and piled up in one heap. Several of us climbed upon the cars with axes and lanterns and went to work. The attended by a couple of surgeons. While axes and lanterns and went to work. The first man who was found was Billy Stevens, the confectioner. He was dead.

We pulled him out after some effort, and then pulled his two daughters. Forms and then pulled his two daughters. Forms and the most of her lovers injuries has rendered her lovers injuries her lovers then pulled his two daughters, Emma and insane. Ida, out. They, too, were dead. Every one was groaning and crying. Their feet seemed to be jammed. Most of them unoccupied store used as a morgue the disease which it is dangerous to neglect.

Mrs. Deal was one of these. I then met their death. In the empty store in a Mrs. James Deal's party, five people, herself, Mrs. Wm. Allen, Miss Ada Webster, Mrs. Wm. Ball, Jennie O'Shaughnessy. Every one of them was killed but the last, and were horribly disfigured. It was late in the afternoon before they pulpy mass in which dabbled her long were recognized. One of the horrible red hair. She was not identified. A incidents was a man well dressed, who man with a heavy dark moustache, appa was so badly injured that his bowels were protruding. He called incessantly for water, and as he could not be attended to he finally pulled out his revolver and shot himself through the head. One little boy, the son of the Methodist minister at Abington, Frank Sundecker, about 12 looked contented and smiling. His legs Abington, Frank Sundecker, about 12 looked contented and smiling. His legs years of age, was found on the bosom of his dead mother. His left leg hung by the skin. His right arm was broken, and one eye was put out. He never uttered a groan. They pulled him out and tried to give him a drink of brandy. He refused to take it, and said: 'Give me water.' I were as black as though they died of sufferently hard brands from the water.' I ound a head hanging from the truck. It focation, while others were deathly was apparently that of a man, and had been caught by the hair. I found several The headless bodies. Those who recognized the dead immediately ticketed them."

The Chicago Times correspondent gives this account of the terrible affair:

About five o'clock one of the Chlcago l'imes' staff was driven out to the wreck. The drive way led along to the left of the railroad and to the south of the road was an old-fashioned osage orange hedge. The road was very muddy and full of chuckholes. A stream of humanity was pouring in from the wreck. Some had checks in their hats and carried valises. They were evidently passengers on the ill-fated train. Country boys and girls came along swinging hands and talking in low tones about the terrible disaster. A photographer dragged his weary limbs along the track. He was carrying a camera and a lot of negatives. The road bed was almost level, just a little grade running up to the wreck at a raise of ten or fifteen feet to the mile. About two and one-half or three miles from the town on a little raise, was the debris of the wreck, The sleeping car Tunis was at the end of the train. It was jacked in the air, supported by the trestles. The front end of the car was directly over the place where the bridge stood. To the right lay a coach all broken into kindling wood, and directly on the road was piled up what was left of six or seven coaches, turned bottom side up and broken beyond recognition. Across the track, in front of the pile of debris, was a coach, lying crosswise, away up at least ten feet in the air; beyond were the two tenders and one engine; one tender was to the left of the track and the other to the right. They were turned bottom-side up and rent asunder. The engine was scarcely recognizable. On the side of the cab was the ill-starred number—13. Only a big pane of glass marked thirteen. Along the hedge there were valises, shoes, boots, hats, all manner of articles of wearing apparel, broken lanterns and seats from the cars. It was an awful sight, bats of men and women broken and smeared with blood, coats reeking with gore, and ladies' underwear smeared with life-blood. It was plain to be seen from the looks of the baggage that the travelers were wellto-do people.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT. Three miles east of Chatsworth the track crosses a run ten feet deep, which is dry at this time of the year. Th bridge was simple trestle work, only fifteen feet long. As the train rushed along at the rate of a mile a minute, the engineer of the front engine saw that this and thieves in this vicinity who do nothbridge was on fire. The train was almost on the bridge when he saw the fire. There was no time to stop. The only chance was to pull the train across. In among the flames he darted and came through sifely. In an instant he felt a slight jerk. The tender had been caught. and three baggage cars piled themselves on the first tender, filling up the run. In that first crash more than 100 people met nstant death. Of the sixty persons in the first coach not one came out alive. From the second coach but four escaped. In the other four coaches deaths alternated with broken imbs and crushed bodies. In the sleepers no one was injured. Among the burning cars were men, women and children who had been injured to helplessness, but whose lives could be saved if they could be got out from the wreck before the flame reached hem. How those fifty rescuers worked! There was not so much as a drop of water to put out the fire. There were not even shovels to dig the dirt to smother the flames. So they put their hands to the work and in desperation clutched the dry ground and cast it upon the embers. Hour after hour they toiled on until at last the fires had been conquered.

At Peoria an unknown man with his wife and child got on the train. verturning the three got pinned down by the broken woodwork. "Take my wife out first," he said to

As the woman was raised from her place of torture a stream of a dark blood came from her mouth. She was taken to cornfield near by and laid tenderly on which an excursion train bearing 960 the ground, and her blue-eyed and fairhaired child of two years was laid beside her-dead. The man was taken out. Both his legs were broken, but they showed him where his wife was and he dragged himself to her side. Lovingly he passed his hands over the faces of his loved ones, and taking his flask from his pocket he forced some brandy between his wife's lips. She groaned with pain and fell back dead. The man, when he ealized that his wife had followed his child, cried out:

"My God, my God, what is there now to live for!' Then pulling a pistol from his pocket

The news of the disaster arrived here about forty minutes after its occurrence The residents of the town were awakened by an alarm rung simultaneously from all the boxes in the town. In a few mo ments the people were running through the streets from all directions, all inquiring where the fire was. When the facts were learned another alarm followed, which was soon vigorously re-echoed by the bells of all the churches in town The people made a rush for the road to Piper City. helped to drag him to a sleeper. A HORRIBLE SUSPICION. CHATSWORTH, Aug. 12 .- Sensational eatures were developed this morning as to the cause of the wreck. Rumors were afloat last night that it was due to robbers who fired the bridge, but little cre-dence was given them. This morning new facts, apparently showing the catastrophe to be the work of an organized band, came to light and the company find them worthy of serious investigation. Supt. Armstrong said to the associated press reporter that the more he investi-gated the more it appeared to him that the bridge had been set on fire. The burned grass in its immediate locality was not of a nature that seemed likely to admit of the bridge catching from it. He had observed many thieves at work, and had stopped them while despoiling the wreck of property and money. Instances of the robbing of the dead were being brought to his attention. The ex-cursion had been extensively advertised, and the time it would pass over the bridge was well known. Citizens say that a gang of suspicious fellows have been loitering around Chats-worth for some days. Many of these were found early at the wreck, paying more attention to relieving the bodies of their valuables than to caring for them otherwise. Train men and passengers had frequent contentions with the vandals. In one instance Supt. Armstrong found a well known thief in the depo room where the property taken from the wreck was stored. While people of the Ennis, roadmaster of the division said this morning in his testimony before the coroner's jury: "My opinion is that the bridge was set on fire by somebody. My train was the last train over before Then came a crash. The second engine the special and if there was fire there, the men would have discovered it. bridge could have been burned in two or three hours. About three years ago two attempts were made to ditch the 10 o'clock passenger train at that bridge and we kept a watchman there for six weeks: obstructions were piled on the track. It is a very lonesome place, far from any

STRANGE CONDUCT OF R. R. OFFICIALS. CHATSWORTH, Aug. 12.—President E. F. Leonard, of the Toledo, Peoria & Western company, said that he had made a careful but necessarily brief investigation of the accident, and could in no way account for it, unless on the presumption that the bridge was set on fire deliberately by fiends for the purpose of wreckin the train and robbing passengers. When the dead body of Edwin F. Adams was searched, neither his pocketbook nor gold watch could be found, although he was known to have started on the trip with a large sum of money. The only cash found on his person was $30, which he had hid in the watchpocket of his trousers.

There were very little stimulants or, in "Take my wife out first," he said to the rescuers, "I'm afraid my child is dead."

fact, medical appliances or assistance of any kind on the ground. A man from Piper City brought a demijohn of whisky but the railroad people seem to have do practically nothing. Men from Chats-worth who worked all night at the wreck were refused passage on the train going back to the village and had to tramp home in a half-fainting condition. It seemed to take the railroad four hours to get an engine ready to drag a car to or from the village, and the only persons allowed to ride were railroad officials. The people say that the officials acted most inhumanly in many cases and treated the wounded most shamefully all

> It is probable that an investigation will result in holding some of the officials criminally responsible for the disaster. The fact that fires were raging all around there was known to everybody; that the dry prairie grass grew right up to the line was, or should have been known to the officials; and the fact that the wooden trestle work across the culvert was burned by the sun until it was an inflammable as tinder wood was also known or should have been. If ordinary precautions had been observed the acciden would not have occurred. The bridge may have been burning at least two hours before the train arrived.

Speaking of antiquities, there are few collections in the state of Michigan of more interest or value than the ancient coins owned by Mr. D. Richards gathered by his brother in distant lands. It comprises hundreds of different pieces money in use before and soon after the beginning of the Christian era, a few of them dating back to about 1,000 years ders. before Christ. Some contain the "bust of Pallas" of which Poe dreamed, and plenty of them bear the images of the Cæsars and other designs of ancient and peculiar interest. Of failing health, whether in the form of Night Sweats and Nervousness, or in a sense of General Weariness and Loss of Appetite, should suggest the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This preparation is most effective for giving tone and strength to the enfeebled system, promoting the digestion and assimilation of food, restoring the nervous forces to their normal condition, and for purifying, enriching, and vitalizing the blood.

Failing Health. Ten years ago my health began to fall. I was troubled with a distressing Cough, Night Sweats, Weakness, and Nervousness. I tried various remedies prescribed by different physicians, but became so weak that I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest. My friends recommended me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which I did, and I am now as healthy and strong as ever.—Mrs. E. L. Williams, Alexandria, Minn.

I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla, in my family, for Scrofula, and know, if it is taken faithfully, that it will thoroughly eradicate this terrible disease. I have also prescribed it as a tonic, as well as an alterative, and must say that I honestly believe it to be the best blood medicine ever compounded.—W. F. Fowler, D. D. S., M. D., Greenville, Tenn.

I was under the care of various physicians and tried a great many kinds of medicines, but never obtained more than temporary relief. After taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for a short time, my headache disappeared, and my stomach performed its duties more perfectly. To-day my health is completely restored.—Mary Harley, Springfield, Mass.

I have been greatly benefited by the prompt use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It tones and invigorates the system, regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, and vitalizes the blood. It is, without doubt, the most reliable blood purifier yet discovered.—H. D. Johnson, 383 Atlantic ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE SUPPRESSED YOTE IN THE SOUTH.

No amount of democratic lying and senseless clammor can hide the enormity and present importance of the crime of suppressing the southern republican vote The stern facts tell the story of outrageous injustice too well. Let our readers study the figures which put matters in the most favorable light possible for the southern democracy. The vote for president in 1884 was much greater in all of the former confederate states than the vote for congressmen last year and even smaller in most cases, than the congressional vote of 1884. Taking the vote for President and dividing the total, including small parties and the scattering vote, by the number of congressional districts in each state, we shall see just how far the solid south, at its best showing, falls below the voting standard of the republican states of the north. Here are the official

The average vote of these fifteen democratic states in which slavery existed until the war, is 24,571 to every congressional district. In many of the border states, where the republican voters are most the ballot. Let us take Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, and South Carolina, states which contribute to the democratic phalanx in congress twice the whole democratic majority, and we find observe the contrast in the republican states of the north:

California Colorado Illinois Iowa Kansas Maine Massachusetts Michigan Nebraska Nevada New Hampshire Ohio.

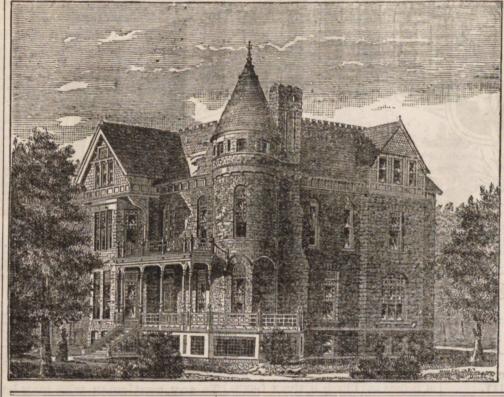

The average vote to each congressman elected, or rather the average of the state averages, in these 18 republican states is 35,619, or 11,048 more than the average in average of Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, and South Carolina, taken together. Last year the contrast was still more striking, and the conclusion is plain that southern democratic states have at least 33 per cent. more congressmen than they are justly entitled to. The representation of the south should be cut down by not less than forty members until such time as it may make the ballot free to all its citizens. This is not "waving the bloody shirt," or harping on dead issues. It is merely a demand for plain business

THE SMART BOY VS. THE DULL ONE.

We older people can well remember a boy in our classes at school who was very smart naturally; one who had but to read his lessons over to recite them perfectly, and always had a ready and intelligent answer to questions asked; in fact who was endowed by nature with superior gifts. And we can all remember how everybody predicted for such boy a brilliant future and great success in life. And we have watched the progress of that boy with much interest, and have been astonished to see him fail entirely or greatly outstripped by other boys who were considered "dogan-heads," or very ordinary boys in school. The trouble has been that the smart boy relied enthrough, and did not apply himself.

Our advantages will build us up anyway. People can not ignore us." But as the years pass by, other places forge ahead and the place with its "great advantages" stands still. Why? Because the people of the other places pushed their towns ahead. They more than made up in energy, in enterprise, in industry, what their location lacked otherwise, and got to the front. Now, what will Ann Arbor do? Will she pattern after the smart | that the Detroits had beaten the Chicagos boy or the energetic one? Shall we let in the last of the series was painful to other places outstrip us or shall we put our shoulders to the wheel and forge in and about Detroit. Let it be recorded ahead?

Laura once had an affluent beau,
Who called twice a fortnight, or so,
Now she sits, Sunday eve,
All lonely to grieve,
Oh, where is her recreant beau,

Cured by Administering Dr. Haines' Golden Specific. It positively can be given in a cup of coffee or tea without the knowledge of the person taking it; is absolutely harmless and will effect a permanent and speedy cure whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. Thousands of drunkards have been made temperate men who have taken Golden Specific in their coffee without their knowledge, and to-day believe they quit drinking of their own free will.
