A QUESTION OF HEALTH.

Bread, biscuit and cake, now generally made by the aid of baking powder, enter so largely into our daily food that their debasement by the introduction of any injurious or deteriorating substance is a matter of serious concern to the public health. What baking powder shall we use to avoid the lime and alum now found in so many leavening agents, and to insure pure, sweet and wholesome bread, is a question,

It is an indisputable fact that all baking powders with the single exception of the "Royal" contain one or the other of these adulterants-lime or alum-in quantities from five to twenty per cent. Alum is poisonous. Lime reduces their strength not only but (aside from its injurious effects upon the system) by debasing our food with a useless substance robs it of a portion of its nutritious qualities, thereby depriving our bodies of the full sustenance necessary to maintain that life and health of the public is much more fully realized in England, where severe punishments, under stringent laws prohibiting the manufacture and sale of adulterated articles of chemists and the most prominent food analysts to be the only baking powder made that is entirely free from lime, alum and other impurities, and absolutely pure. It is made from cream of tartar refined for its exclusive use by patent processes by which the tartrate of lime is totally eliminated. No other baking powder manufacturer uses chemically pure cream of tartar, and hence the adulteration of other brands. The "Royal" is, accordingly, the only baking powder that will produce perfectly pure bread, biscuit, cake, pastry, etc.; and these articles are now pronounced more wholesome when raised by the Royal Baking Powder than when leavened by any other baking powder we shall use; and those who appreciate the miseries of dyspepsia and other ailments that follow the use of impure food will not hesitate to select the "Royal."

THE LAND OF LITTLE PEOPLE.

Far away, and yet so near us, lies a land where all have been, where all have been,
Played beside its sparkling waters, danced along its meadows green, Where the busy world we dwell in and its noises only seem
Like the echo of a tempest or the shadow of Like the echo of a temperate a dream,
And it grows not old forever, sweet and young it is to-day,
'Tis the land of little people, where the happy children play.

And the things they know and see there, are so wonderful and grand.
Things that wiser folks and older cannot know or understand;
In the woods they meet the fairies; find the giants in their caves,
See the palaces of cloudland, and the murmur in the waves.
Know what all the birdies sing of, hear the secrets of the flow'rs. secrets of the flow'rs, For the land of little people is another world

They were idyls not born of the senses, And their beauty of form was sublime, And I verily do them oftenses As I tempt them to enter my rhyme. They were beautiful songs of fancies, And they floated away in a dream to the music whose sweetness entrances. As the murmur and flow of the stream.

ABOLISHING CRIME.

Having been a sufferer for two years and a half from a disease caused by a bruise on the leg, and having been cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES when all other methods and remedies failed, I deem it my duty to recommend them. I visited Hot Springs to no avail, and tried several doctors without success, and at last our principal druggist, Mr. John P. Finley (to whom I shall ever feel grateful), spoke to me about CUTICURA, and I consented to give them a trial with the result that I am perfectly cured. There is now no sore about me. I think I can show the largest surface where my suffirings sprang from of any one in the State. The CUTICURA REMEDIES are the best blood and skin cures manufactured. I refer to druggist John P. SAVED MY MOTHER'S LIFE.

Ever since I can remember, my mother has suffered from a milk leg. Nothing would do her any good. She had the best medical talent, but they all did her no good. She suffered with her leg for thirty years and never knew a well day. She would have to sit up half the night, holding up her leg and moaning. She had no peace. She used all the best known remedies in the country without effect. I asked her to try your Cutticura Remedies. Got her a bottle of Cutticura Resolvent, and she took it, and has taken in all about six or seven bottles, and now she is a well woman to-day. Her leg is entirely healed, and her health was never better. She can go out every day, something she has not done in ten years, so you see I cannot help stating to you about your wonderful Cutticura Remedies. You have saved my mother's life. I cannot find words to express my mother's life. I cannot find words to express my mother's life. I cannot find words to express my gratitude. I have advertised your Cuttoura Remedies far and near.

STRANGEINFLUENCE OF A FORTUNE TELLER IN A MICHIGYN UNI-VERSITY TOWN.

[The following very neatly written story first appeared in the St. Louis Globe-Demorat, but is cut from the columns of the Emmitsburg (Md.) Chronicle. There is just enough truth about it to give it spice. Mrs. Johnson, who is a quiet, sensible, hard-working colored woman, will probably be sur-prised to find herself the heroine of so thrilling a tale, and the people of Ann Arbor, undreds of whom never saw even the ontside of her house in their lives, will be also surprised to find that they are so under her influence. Mrs. Johnson is quite famous as a fortune teller, that's true, but her custom comes almost entirely from people who come here from abroad, as did the writer of the following story.]-ED. COURIER.

A correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat writes from Ann Arbor: 'Cup-and Saucer Hollow' lies between Cup-and-Saucer Hills. It is a deep hollow,

In it is the shrine at which half Ann Arbor residents worship, and the oracle which the other half consult. Fortunes are told here, and students, residents, visitors, all look up Cup-and-Saucer Hollow semi-centennial celebration of the founding of the university many gray-haired men went down the beaten path, away from the halls of learning, into Cup-and-Saucer Hollow and to Mrs. Johnson, quite as a place to visit-some out of curiosity, nore from superstitious belief.

There is but one house in the hollow.

There is but one house in the hollow. It is a long, low building of frame, standing almost against the bluff of Cup Hill and whitewashed glistening white. So marked a spot is it in the otherwise unbroken depression that casual visitors do where Mrs. Johnson has her real grip.

There is but one house in the hollow. And if met by acquaintances there was a confused explanation of something about "curiosity," "younger days," "absurd, you know," and the like. But it is upon residents of Ann Arbor where Mrs. Johnson has her real grip. Such scenes affection could not bear For even one so sweet and fair.

(Since then I've been on the lookout for a widow, one with plenty of capital, a comfortable home, and without mercenary tendency.)—San Francisco Call. the little house dry shod.

The house is that of Mrs. William Johnson, "fortune teller," though no sign embellishes it, nor is one needed. Everybody who ever visited Ann Arbor knows of her. There is a Mr. William John-son, a worthless sort of fellow and a hackdriver, who is not often found at home, nor is he wanted there much. Mrs. Johnson has two daughters and several grandchildren, who make their home with her. She is a colored woman, but not black. Her skin is a muddy chocolate as to color, yet not so muddy but that a good sized collection of freekles is visible. She is of medium height and of great avoirdupois. Her hair grows long, but it is decidedly crinkly and there is so much gray in it that it looks substantially mist-like. A loose calico wrapper is her favorite dress. Her face is not striking enough to scarce deserve description. It is round and full, the eyes brown and small. She speaks with scarcely a trace of the negro dialect but more with a Yankee twang. She uses good language -and why shouldn't she, having had for years as her callers university students, if not the professors and the culture of Ann Arbor, as well as the contrary?

It is a fact that this old colored woman, living almost within the shadow of the University of Michigan, has so firmly founded and rooted superstition in the hearts of the people here that she is a power against all the teachings of the nstitution. Her utterances receive the gravest attention, and her predictions find almost universal belief. She is sought by old and young, cultured and uncultured, student and visitor. She presents the unheard of precedent of an ignorant woman setting herself up against all the light of science, and holding a following as great almost as the university itself Ann Arbor people, when they admit at all that they visit the fortune teller, say that they do so out of mere curiosity, a pleasant adventure, a whiling away of the time. Believe in her they say they do not. Yet it is a fact that they do, and instead of going once to satisfy curiosity, they go many times as they believe that the future is to be revealed. Mrs. Johnson has practiced her art— her success certainly entitles her profession to that title in many eyes-for long years, and it would be strange if the widest guesser should not strike correctly some future happenings when telling from five to fifty fortunes every day Mrs. Johnson has been very sbrewd, or tricky, or both. She has, it must be admitted, picked out events in past lives of many, whether by mere accident, or shrewd inquiry, or quick reading of counshrewd inquiry, or quick reading of countenance, is known only to herself, but it is a light thing. But it may run into she has done it correctly on more than catarrh. Or into pneumonia. Or conone occasion or a score of them. She has done this for almost total strangers to the place, whose names she did not know, and of whose lives she must have been in absolute ignorance. This phenomenal good luck on Mrs. Johnson's part would naturally make the same strangers look on her predictions for the future with a lurking curiosity as to the

in their verification. Then, again, Mrs. Johnson has been lucky in her prophesying. Of all the deaths she has predicted some have come true, of all the marriages doubtless many more. She has hit accidents correctly on occasions, has told of separations and reoccasions, has told of separations and re-united affections, and gabling constantly of affairs of this everyday world has hit this and that with more or less exactness. One thing about Mrs. Johnson, which carries weight with many is her unquali-fied belief in the correctness of her own pain-killing plaster, especially adapted to relieve Female Pains and Weakname is Miss Luther Lutz." day to one who visited her for the purpose of this chapter, she struck squarely and correctly upon a block from the mosaic of the past. She could not have told from his looks, even had he changed countenance the slightest, that she was right, for he was turned away at the time. He looked around and asked: "Now, aren't you mistaken in that point? Did not the person have light hair?" "Well," she said, with much earnestness, "it seems to me just as I told you. I may be mistaken. I ain't always right. But sure, the person had dark hair. That's all I can tell you."

"Well, you're mistaken," was the excusable lie, considering the lies expected. "Now, as to the third person. You're mistaken about that."

"Well, sir, I may be, but that's just what the cards tell. I can't change them. And I ain't always right."

This hitting the truth occasionally has brought to Mrs. Johnson a clientage that brought to Mrs. Johnson a clientage that extends across the continent, and there are few university students scattered are few university students scattered broadcast who do not remember her shrill, sharp-spoken voice as she leaned over her cards and told their fortunes for good or ill. And how many of them believed her. How many have consulted her on matters of college life, of business, of love affairs. How many have paid their last visit in Ann Arbor to Mrs. Johnson, the fortune teller. Throwing

Cup-and-Saucer Hills. It is a deep hollow, though not large in dimensions otherwise, On the north side Cup Hill forms an abrupt bluff. Opposite, its companion mound is steep enough, as all will say who try to climb it, and it breaks away in little depressions and gullies, feeble imitations of the hollow itself. This peaceful, quiet spot is hemmed in on three sides by institutions of learning, by homes of men advanced in all the sciences, in culture and in enlightenment. They guard Cup-and-Saucer Hollow all about, and it would seem their influence must be felt on Cup-and-Saucer Hollow residents and visitors if anywhere outside of university walls.

Yet in this place superstition is nursed and fostered to the exclusion of all else. In it is the shrine at which half Ann Arbor residents worship, and the oracle satisfied in their own minds of her ability to read the future, yet not daring to lisp a word. And if met by acquaintances preposterous that such a state of affairs are some exceptions, it is true, but the

Her method of fortune-telling is a very stroll along it and be seen by its any direction. Where there are damp places in wet weather boards have been places in wet weather boards have been thing, nor to go into a state of trance. Fortune-telling came to her as a gift, and one's fortune is long or short, accou to the length of the purse. Mrs. Johnson doesn't hesitate, in the dull summer season, to tell a short fortune for five cents. But put half a dollar into her big hand and she will tell just as long a fo tune as you want. Her "properties" consist of a pack of cards. These she shuffles and the searcher into futurity cuts and cuts again. This is gone over many times with a wish for each cut and a reading of the wish. As she talks of the past or future no | Chas. M. Fellows to A. A. Waite, Manmatter if a thousand times removed from the truth, the old fortune teller is interesting. She believes what she has a pretty good command of language. and gets off pat expressions in describ ing individuals which are quite taking. With all the students gone Ann Arbor gives her support, and she claims to never tell less than half a dozen fortunes in a Of her powers she is not at all va'n, rather deprecating any praise, yet no doubt secretly delighted to hear it. If you have serious business hanging fire in Ann Arbor; if you have a sweetheart there; if you contemplate making any move known to and having any bearing on any Ann Arbor resident, ten chances to one Mrs. Johnson has been consulted on the matter. Thus far has superstition gained its hold from Mrs. Johnson's fortune-telling.

And all the time, remember, this is a university town, the seat of the pride of Michigan, the home of the greatest advancement and highest science, yet a place where enlightenment and superstition seem to go hand in hand down the Fred Kloss to Lewis H. We want to say one word to the Prohibitionists throughout the State. You can claim to have given victory to the democratic party in the last four elections. If your vote in 1883 of from 18,816 to ticket, the whole of it would have been elected instead of only the head. If your 24,999 votes for the President in '84 had not been cast as they were, James G. Blaine would have been President to-day.

If your 30,867 votes in 1885 had been Republican, Ira Davenport would now be Governor. If your 36,437 votes last year had been given to Judge Daniels, he would now be on the Court of Appeals bench. These facts are indisputable, and Republicans are the first the second of the court of Appeals bench. Republicans are the first to press them home upon the attention of voters.

But wh t have Prohibitionists gained by this? To destroy is not to build up. They have four times elected Democratic candidates. Is the cause of prohibition or of temperance any further advanced because of this, than it was four years ago? Isn't it true, on the contrary, that the success of any Democratic candidate, either for a State office or the Legislature, is a hind-rance to every effort made at Albany to restrict the liquor traffic? Can any Pro-hibitionist point to a single law or other beneficent action that has resulted from the course of his party during these years? If not, why continue a policy of senseless obstruction, and a course entirely fruitless at that, except for evil? Fortunately for the good of society, the prospects are that history will not repeat itself this year. The Republicans are taking an unusual interest in this elec-tion, and the Democrats are greatly weakened by the secessions to the George movement. The same Democrats who movement. The same Democrats who have complacently accepted victory at the hands of the Prohibitionists for four years back think it highly immoral for the Republicans to be enjoying such a hearty laugh over the Labor movement. And why not? The Republican party honestly believes the success of the Democrats would be prejudicial to the prosperity and progress of the State. Why shouldn't it rejoice to see them divided? But the question of principle for the Prohibitionists is the same as if their vote was likely to be all-powerful. And the progress of events has placed them in a An M. Mr. McDougall has been one negative; now it must be affirmative in one direction or another. Every vote cast for the Prohibition State ticket will encourage the men who want to open the saloon on Sunday. Every vote cast for a Prohibition candidate for the Legislature is a vote to elect a Democrat who will favor a law opening the saloon on Sunday. PLANS DISMISSED.

The school board has been threatened with a suit by Donaldson & Meier, the architects of Detroit who made plans for the High School addition, then refused to complete them and to give a bond. They demand $600 for what would cost them not over 10 per cent. of that amount. The whole thing is a bluff, and would have been dropped long ago but for the curious ac tions of some citizens whom it would be supposed would be inclined from their official positions to favor our schools rather than a blustering Detroit firm. The resolution below was carried at the upon his mind. Ling last night, but some of the board thinking that it was not being salted enough voted against it; in fact one of the board has all along advised Donaldson & Meier to bring suit, and he now openly says he hopes they will. THE FIGURES.

The following table, compiled from the proceedings of the board of supervisors, ells the story of this county in figures. It gives enough food for a common statisti-ian to feed upon for some weeks. There is one thing very peculiar about the action f a certain supervisor relative to the report of the committee on fractional school istricts, giving the per cent. of increase and decrease in the various districts. This supervisor borrowed the report of a certain reporter who was copying it, and de-clined to return it to Mr. O'Hearn so that it could be reported to the board, and had not the latter gentleman had a duplicate copy in his pocket he would have had con-siderable trouble. Now the copy he did report has been taken from the clerk's records. Perhaps the enormous decrease in his thriving township accounts for the not very honorable action of this supervisor. But here are the figures, study them

A racy scene occurred on our streets this morning. A crazy man who had been wandering about the streets found his way into the upper corridors of the P. O. building. He finally entered the room of a gentleman who was peacefully slumbering therein, and gazing at the scene a moment the crazy man sprang full force upon the sleeping young man as if to rend him in pieces. As may be imagined this action suddenly awoke the slumberer, and he looked so dazed and wild over it that his crazy assailant began to get scared himself. So he gradually relaxed his hold upon the sleeping young man who every justant grew more and more awake, and as he awakened a feeling of madness supplanted that of astonishment and he commenced defensive operations, getting madder and madder each breath; shook off his assailant, fired him out in the hall, grabbed a Congress water botle (so supposed), and entirely regardless of his scant costume, started in pursuit. The crazy man didn't want to die so he Up stairs and down stairs and finally out into the street with his white clad pursuer hot upon him, and yelling like a comanchee Indian all the time. After making the circuit of the court house square a crowd intercepted the runners, the crazy man was taken to jall for safe keeping, and the young man returned to his room for a change of raiment.

The Ypsilantian has this to say of our future fellow-citizen: "Charley Whitman is removing his household goods to Ann Arbor this week. There are no church deaconships made vacant by Charley's departure, we believe, but the removal of himself and family will cause vacancies in social and literary circles here that may not soon be filled, as they filled them. One of Charley's young friends recently remarked, that if the cry of 'Red Blood' should ere long be borne on the night winds from the northwest, it must not be taken as the forerunner or follower of some dreadful deed. It would result from the fact that Charley Whitman was playing progressive euchre at Ann Arbor was ahead in the game, and was making his pathetic plea for the ringing of the

These marriage licenses do not always prevent hasty weddings as the law intended, as an instance in this county proves. A young man from the western part of the county came to town a short time since, procured a license to marry a certain young lady, and politely requested the clerk who made out the papers to keep the information to himself, which he did. Armed with the necessary papers he by some secret means informed his sweetheart of the fact. Then she told her folks that she wished to visit an uncle in a neighboring city and started off ostensibly for her uncle's. But bless your heart she never went there. She went far enough to meet her lover, however, who was waiting with his best horse and carriage, and all rigged up in his soft clothes, and they proceeded to this city where a minister was found to make them man and wife. The young man was very happy; the old man swore and raved, but all to no purpose; the mother-in-law forgave; and the sweet young bride cried just enough to look handsomer and sweeter than ever. Word is received from Prof. Steere's party under date of Sept. 4, at which time they were on the Island of Palawan, one of the Philippine group, hard at work. They were in fine spirits and excellent health. They had a prosperous ourney to the islands, and, with the exception of a severe storm in the China Sea, a very enjoyable one. At the date named they had just closed their first week's work in securing specimens, and were well pleased with the result.

How convenient it is. If there is any deviltry done about town, we hear something of this kind, quoted from the last Argonaut in its report of Hollowe'en festivities: "Several fences were tipped, rotten, (especially the stone) sidewalks uprotted, signs misplaced, and gates hung to lamp-posts. But it is highly probable that most of this should be laid to townies." The "townies," when interviewed are as innocent as lambs, and nighiy indignant over being accused of students pranks." So betwixt them oth you see, it is something the authorities can not find out.

Miss Franc Arnold, vice-president of the Sophomore class, gave a very pleasant reception to the class at Mrs. Miner's on East Liberty street, the occasion being her retirement from her duties as vicepresident of the class. About 20 couple were in attendance and passed the evening very enjoyably. Refreshments were served in an exceedingly tasteful manner, and on each plate was found a neat card with a verse appropriate to the victory of '90 over her various competitors, Miss Arnold deserved the gratitude of her classmates for her patriotic spirit manifested by this generous act. All members present had a light shed upon their future history through the medium of a fortune-teller, very ably impersonated by Miss Nellie Garrigues.

The first of the seven Chamber concerts to be given this winter in Hobart Hall. occured on Friday evening last, and drew one of the best audiences Ann Arbor has seen at a concert of this kind. The numbers presented by the Philharmonic String Quartette were rendered in a remarkably finished style. The quartette of Mendelssohn reminded us again of the fact that he, the descendant of a long race of noble Jaws, and the refined, in defatigable follower of Bach, seems the last of those few masters whose minds were attuned to the expression of universal joy and sorrow. Even Schubert, who of all his contemporaries and successor comes nearest to grasping the same just and inevetably right conception of nature and life, lapses by spells into wayward-nes when he should be happy and into complaint when he should be pitiful. The others seldom or never lose their own personality, and so give us incom pleteness or deformity.

The Prize-song from the Mister-Singers of Wagner, and the Serenata, by Haydn were well contrasted specimens of the old, pure style and the modern un rest. Trailmerei was too tame for a day dream, and too stiff-jointed for the lovely night vision it might be.

The Concertance of 33, for two vice ins, by Allard, was as refreshing as a vivacious Frenchman knows how to be The broad and mobile tone of Mr Yunck received most excellent suppor from Mr. Schultz, who has gained very decidely in depth and manliness of tone since last heard in solo here.

Mozart, Rubinstein and Lassen were given place in the solos of Miss Alice Andrus. Miss Andrus has one of those very few voices in which unite simplicity beauty of quality and power. Though of limited range, her tones are very even and are capable of many shades of color. The chaste and severely simple aria "Deh Vivien," from marriage of Figaro, was not what one could wish in light and shade of tone, upper tones seeming to require a reach of effort incompatible with purity of form, but the exuberant rush of joy expressed in the Spring Song of Lassen was caught and poured forth in the perfect abandon of unreflecting pleasure. Altogether the University Society are to be congratulated on thi opening of the series.

HOW SCARLET FEVER COMES TO MICHIGAN.

[The secretary of the State Board of Health issues the following information, which tells its own story.]—ED.

The Michigan State Board of Health has received information from Dr. Sifton, ealth officer of Sutton's Bay township, which illustrates in a striking way how this country gets contagious diseases from he old countries. October 2, 1887, a amily arrived in Sutton's Bay, Leelanau steamer during the passage, one child ling, and "several child of this family was taken sick with scarlet fever the day after reaching New York. The family, however, proceeded over the New York Central and the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern to Michigan; hen over the Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee, and the Grand Rapids & Indiana, to Traverse City; then to Sutton's Bay. Another child of the family has ince come down with the disease. since come down with the disease. The second wife, step-mother of the girls, fired family had a certificate, signed by the the building. surgeon of the steamer, that they had small pox; so they passed without detention the quarantine authorities at the exposed to a contagious disease which causes more deaths by far in this country chan small-pox cases.

Relative to the persons who brought scarlet fever to Sutton's Bay, Mich., and who came on the S. S. Ohio, reaching New York Sept. 30, 1887, Dr. Wm. M. with, health officer of the port of New York, savs.

"Developed cases of diphteria and scarlatina arriving on vessels at this port are removed to Ward's Island. It is impossible inder the law for the health officers or the authorities at Castle Garden to quarantine persons who have been exposed to the contagion of those diseases, consequently the sick on board vessels during the voyage, toubtless, often infect the relatives or those with whom they come in contact, * * * and who carry the latent contagion to intecitor communities. I would be glad if the law allowed those exposed to the contagion of these diseases to be held for observation as is the case when persons are exposed to the "Developed cases of diphteria and scarla e case when persons are exposed to the ntagion of small-pox,

The instance mentioned above is an ilstration of what Dr. Smith says,-the child having been exposed during the voyage and taken sick with searlet fever he day after arrival at New York; so the nfected child went on its way to spread carlet fever. In Michigan at least, ten imes as many deaths occur from scarlet ever or diphtheria as from small-pox. Is it not time that the whole subject of uarantine was investigated by the states and by the United States government, with a view to protecting the people of this country from the introduction of the really dangerous diseases?

Many newspapers, since the marriage license law took effect in Michigan, are publishing the names of persons licensed to marry, adding thereto the ages of the persons licensed. In the opinion of every woman in the state, including marriagable widows, and maidens in various degrees of preservation, the publication of ages is looked upon as simply barbarous. This is indeed the right light in which to view it. As well might the ages of the newly married, be stated in the marriage announcement. And how long would an editor live after he had published a mariage notice, running for instance like this: "It gives us pleasure to announce the marriage, last evening of John Doe, of this city, aged 63, with Miss Rose Roe, aged 47, also of this city!" Verily, the the last end of that editor would be worse than the first! Yet it is fully as appropriate to publish the ages of people, in their marriage notices as in the announcement of their taking out a license. A general description of the parties would fall with as much consistency within the reportorial province. Accompanying the age it might be added that "Mr. Doe is bald headed, weighs 200lbs., wears No. 10 boots and his nose is red; and that Miss Roe is a gliflickety old maid with a nervous twist, false teeth, and paints.—Adrian Press.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Washtenaw, holden at the Probate Office, in the city of Ann Arbor, on Wednesday, the 2d day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven. Present William D. Harriman, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Walter H. Kendall, deceased. Moses Seabolt, the administrator of said estate, comes into court and represents that he is now prepared to render his final account as such administrator.

Thereupon it is ordered, that Tuesday, the twenty ninth day of November instant, at ten o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for examining and allowing such account, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Ann Arbor, in said county, and show cause, if any there be, why the said account should not be allowed: And it is further ordered that said administrator give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said account and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Ann Arbor Courier, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing. (A true copy.)
