How to Finish Rooms

Bayard Taylor's opinion on this subject is thus expressed in the Independent:

"For the finishing of the rooms, there is nothing equal to the native wood, simply oiled to develop the beauty of the grain.

Even the commonest pine, treated in this way, has a warmth and luster, beside which the dreary white paint, so common even in the best of houses, looks dull and dead.

Nothing gives a house such a cold, uncomfortable air as white paint and plaster. This color is fit only for the tropics.

Our cheap, common woods—pine, ash, chestnut, oak, maple, beech, walnut, etc.—offer a variety of exquisite tints and fibrous patterns, which, until recently, have been wholly disregarded in building.

Even in furniture we just beginning to discover how much more chaste and elegant are oak and walnut than mahogany. The beauty of a room is as dependent on the harmony of its coloring as that of a picture.

Some of the ugliest and most disagreeable apartments I have ever seen were just those which contained a variety of exquisite tints and fibrous patterns, which, until recently, have been wholly disregarded in building.
