

From the Providence Journal. COMING. They are coming... A hundred thousand souls!

From the granite hills—the sea side, To the ranks like the waves... Abundant men to take the place...

From the Albany Journal, May 31st. History of the Stars and Stripes. BY ALFRED B. STREET.

The most interesting incident connected with the battle of Saratoga, was the unfolding for the first time the Stars and Stripes at the surrender of Burgoyne.

Bunker Hill was fought under a red flag bearing the motto, "Come, if you dare," but on the 14th of June, 1777, the Continental Congress resolved...

The stars of the new flag represented the new constellation of States, the idea taken from the constellation Lyra, which signifies harmony.
