INDIAN SUMMER.

BY W. H. C. HOSMER.

Ere winter wears his polar shroud,
Bright days adorn our Northern clime,
The gale forgets its challenge loud,
And airs are soft as summer time,
The rounded orb of day behind
The western hill in glory glows,
The garland by October twined,
On Earth a rainbow glory throws.

The visitation of the frost
Had hushed the notes of bee and bird,
The beauty of our Earth was lost,
No music in her valley's heard.
But Indian Summer with a spell
To dread Enchantment's art unknown,
Has glory showered in date and dew,
And on the mountain's lofty cone.

This blissful season of the year
The roving red man loved of old;
His camp fires burn no longer here,
His bones are mingling with the mould—
But while our Indian Summers give
Strange beauty to the hills and glen,
The olden forest Kings will live,
Shrined in the memory of men.

Fadeless is a Loving Heart.

Sunny eyes may lose their brightness,
Nimble feet forget their lightness;
Pearly teeth may know decay;
Raven tresses turn to gray;
Cheeks be pale and eyes be dim,
Faint the voice and weak the limb;
But though youth and strength depart,
Fadeless is the loving heart.

Like the little mountain flower;
Peeping forth in weary hour,
When the summer's breath is fled,
And the gaudier flower's dead;
So when outward charms are gone,
Brighter still doth blossom on,
Despite of death's destroying dart,
The gently, kindly, loving heart.

Wealth and talents will avail
When on life's rough sea we sail;
Yet wealth may melt like snow,
And the wit no longer glow,
But more smooth we'll find the sea,
And our course the fairer be,
If our pilot, when we start,
Be a kind and loving heart.

Ye in worldly wisdom old—
Ye that bow the knee to gold—
Doth this earth as loveliness seem,
As it did in life's young dream,
Ere the world had crusted o'er
Feelings good and pure before—
Ere ye sold in mammon's mart
The best yearnings of the heart!

Grant me, Heaven, my earnest prayer—
Whether life of ease or care
Be the one to me assigned,
That each coming year may find
Loving thoughts and gentle words
Twined within my bosom's chords,
And that age may but impart
Riper freshness to my heart.

Irving to Paulding.

Here is a genial passage from a letter to Jas. K. Paulding, written by Washington Irving when he was seventy-two years old:

"I am glad to receive such good accounts as you give of yourself and your brother, 'jogging on together in good humor with each other and with the world.' Happy is he who can grow smooth as an old shilling as he wears out; he has endured the rubs of life to some purpose.

"You hope I am 'sliding smoothly down the hill.' I thank you for the hope. I am better off than most old bachelors are, or deserve to be. I have a happy home; the happier for being always well stocked with womankind, without whom an old bachelor is a forlorn, dreary animal. My brother, the 'General' is wearing out the serene evening of life with me; almost entirely deaf, but in good health and good spirits, more and more immersed in the study of newspapers, with which I keep him copiously supplied, and, through them, better acquainted with what is going on in the world than I am, who mingle with it occasionally, and have ears as well as eyes open.

"I have had many vivid enjoyments in the course of my life, yet no portion of it has been more equably and serenely happy than that which I have passed in my little nest in the country. I am just near enough to town to dip into it occasionally for a day or two, give my mind an airing, keep my notions a little up to the fashion of the times, and then return to my quiet little home with redoubled relish."

Pictures.

A room with pictures in it and a room without pictures, differ about as much as a room with windows and a room without windows. Nothing is more melancholy, particularly to a person who has to pass much time in his room, than blank walls with nothing on them, for pictures are leap holes of escape to the soul, leading to other scenes and other spheres. It is such an inexpressible relief to a person engaged in writing or even reading, on looking up, not to have his line of vision chopped off by an odious white wall, but to find his soul escaping, as it were, through the frame of an exquisite picture, to other beautiful and perhaps heavenly scenes, when the fancy for a moment may reveal, refreshed and delighted. Thus pictures are consolers of loneliness; they are a relief to a jaded mind; they are windows to the imprisoned thought; they are books, they are histories and sermons, which we can read without turning over the leaves.—Dovering.

What a lovely world this would be if all its inhabitants could say, with Shakespeare's shepherd—"Sir, I am a true laborer; I earn that I wear; I owe no man hate; envy no man's happiness; glad of other men's good; content with my farm."

ANN ARBOR MICHIGAN.

FRIDAY MORNING, NOV. 20, 1863.

The Fifth Michigan Cavalry.

The following letter from a member of Co. K, Fifth Michigan Cavalry, to one of our citizens, will be read with interest by our readers:

IN CAMP, NEAR GAINES' STATION, Va. }
Tuesday, Oct. 27th, 1863. }
FRIEND MOSE:—

We have cleaned and watered our horses—all of which has to be done by the bugle—and Brooke and myself have cooked and eaten our breakfast; it consisted of fried fresh beef, coffee, and hard tack. I had filled my pipe and seated myself by a fence-rail fire, and had forgotten the uncomfutable realities of my present position, in pleasant thoughts of old Ann Arbor, and friends left behind, when it occurred to me that no doubt Mose would like to hear from the boys of the "fighting fifth;" or, at least, quite confident that the undersigned would be happy to hear through him, of the Ann Arbor boys, and how they are prospering; consequently I hastened to finish my pipe, and proceed to address you.

We are now encamped in a pretty piece of woods, near the above named station, on the Orange and Alexandria railroad, and have been here since our fight at Bucklands' Mills, which transpired the 19th of this month. We have been taking it quite easy for us, since that time, with the exception of two days picket duty, in a cold, soaking rain.—How long we may stay here it is hard to tell; perhaps days, and perhaps only moments. The enemy are in our front and we have to be ever on the alert.—

Yesterday there was heavy firing and this morning it has commenced again. Boom, boom, boom, I would not wonder if it resulted in a general engagement, and that very soon. I will relate a few particulars of the fight at Bucklands, as our Regiment lost more men in this engagement than in any previous one.

The day of the 18th, and for two days prior, we had been picketing in front of the enemy, on the once bloody, and now dismal and ghastly old Bull Run battle field. I say ghastly, because turn in any direction and you see only evidences of the wicked and bloody strife that once raged here between unnatural foes of the same happy land. Unexploded shell and round shot are to be seen most anywhere, and the fragments of shell are as if sown far and wide over the vast field. The tops of the trees in some places are all cut off by the shell, and in one place in particular at the edge of a piece of woods, the trees are almost girdled by bullets; in many of the trees not a foot through, I have counted fourteen bullet holes, none of them reaching much higher than a man's head; not a tree has escaped unscathed; what then must have been the fate of the poor soldiers who sought shelter here. A glance farther in the woods and all is evident. The graves, if such they can be called, are as plentiful as in a church yard, and the unburied bones of many upon many lie bleaching here and there for miles around. The graves of about all are so shallow and hastily made that they expose some portion of their poor victims; here an arm and hand is stretched out, and again a foot is exposed with shoe and stocking on, and still again you see the blue or gray uniforms half uncovered.

It was the night of the 18th, and amid these scenes, that I stood alone on picket post, for ten consecutive hours, in a cold drenching rain; the monotony of the thing being occasionally relieved by the report of a rifle or revolver, as some picket saw, or some frightened one imagined he saw, the enemy; two shots whistled past me that night in rather close proximity, but they only have the effect now of making one a little more watchful. Well, as morning dawned we were called in, and without any breakfast commenced our march, a wet, half frozen and hungry set of mortals, or iron clads on horse back, as Col. Kellogg named us the other day. We had not gone far, however, before we came to the enemy camp, fires, still burning, and soon after skirmishing commenced. We drive them as far as Buckland, when they stand and open a battery, upon us; our battery is soon brought into position, and replies sharply four to their one. Our Regiment and a number of others are dismounted to fight on foot and deploy as skirmishers; soon the sharp crack of our rifles are to be heard, and after about an hour's hard fighting our men drive the rebels out of Buckland; the firing ceases, and the column moves on over Broad Run (Creek) by a narrow bridge and takes possession of the place. We stopped here and cooked our breakfast as it afterwards proved, right in sight of the enemy for no sooner did we begin our advance, than so soon opened the fight again, with renewed vigor, and much to our astonishment.

Our regiment was ordered to hold the main road, and our battalion under Major JOHN E. CLARK was dismounted to fight on foot. In this case every fourth man remains mounted and holds the other three horses. I was left with the horses. We had gone but a little way when we could see the rebels driving in our left, (our Regiment being on the right and still holding their own not knowing what a trap they were getting in), and upon sight of this they made extra exertions to cut us off from the bridge; then the race began, and you can bet I was not behind the rest. I think I was the first one with led horses to cross the bridge, which we crossed amid showers of bullets, many being killed and wounded; those in the rear with the horses saw this and changed their course up the stream where they fortunately found a fording place, and got across all safe.—Brooke was with the latter crowd.

It was plain to us now that the Major and his men were cut off, and on the other side of the stream, dismounted at that, and must be taken prisoners; which has proved to be the case with a few exceptions. Our battery, as soon as it got over the stream took position, and opened upon the Rebels at short range, holding them in check. The second Army corps had come up in the meantime, so we fell back and went into camp, it being almost dark. Our battalion lost 47 men, most of them prisoners, Major Clark, Capt. Lee, the Adj. of the Regiment, and some others are with them, and we have every reason to believe are uninjured.—

Our Company was minus eleven men but, four have reported, since having swam the stream and concealed themselves in the woods.

October 28th.
Our Regiment was out yesterday on general inspection and numbered just one hundred and sixty men for duty, a "big thing" out of eleven hundred and fifty when we left Washington a year ago.

Now about the Ann Arbor boys.—Brooke enjoys this kind of life first rate, at least is always gay as a cricket, and is growing fatter and fatter every day.—Tom Kearns is our blacksmith, and has proved himself a good soldier. Christ Breisch is with the company again, he is the Captain's orderly, and is looking well as ever. Sergt. Eggleston and Corp. Sam. Gregory are detailed and on duty at dismounted camp near Washington, and have not been with the regiment for months. Ed. Samner is as hearty as a buck; the boys have just bought a new pack of cards and Ed. is teaching them a new game of French seven up. Sergt. Chambers, if you know him, is a prisoner with the other boys. Young Markly has absented himself without leave, and they say he is now at dismounted camp.

Your Friend,
JOHN T. SINCLAIR.

P. S.—Our Company numbers 14 men fit for duty, all told.

Advice to Medical Students.

Next to a knowledge of the profession, or even before it, the way to succeed in medicine is to possess a knowledge of human nature. That is to be got by living in public; by incessantly mixing with your fellow-creatures, watching their peculiarities, imitating their excellences, avoiding their follies, and behaving yourself with truthfulness, frankness, generosity and plain dealing. Shy men do not get on well in the world, nor do absent men, nor do people with reserved and distracted air, nor slow, awkward men, nor people who hedge, and trim, and potter, and never give a plain answer to a plain question, and never seem able to form a positive opinion and stick to it. But the sovereign cure for all these infirmities is the course we recommend. Verify all facts by your own senses; never be a mere book-worm, and never prefer solitude to good society.—London Medical Times and Gazette.

REMEDY FOR DIPHTHERIA.—A correspondent of the Chicago Tribune gives the following as a cure for this fatal disease:

"In yours of yesterday I noticed an article on the 'Cause of Diphtheria,' attributing it to a want of salt. Such is undoubtedly the case. An eminent Physician in this city, (Morris, Ill.) Dr. Mathews, (who has held several high positions in the State of New York in his profession,) very rarely loses a case of diphtheria. In fact, out of hundreds he has had, I only know of one or two who have died, and those were far gone when he was called. His great remedy is saltpeter. A simple saturated solution of this, given in doses of one teaspoonful every hour or two to an adult, (and less to children in proportion to age,) has been effectual in saving many precious lives."

A distinguished clergyman being requested to open the services with prayer, but not having been invited to preach, declined, saying, that as his friend was going to do the mowing, he might wet his own soyahe.

ROSECRANS' REMOVAL.

"Agate," the correspondent at Washington of the Cincinnati Gazette, who is Secretary of the Congressional Military Committee, and who possesses means of information not accessible to all, has written a letter to that journal, explaining the actual causes of Rosecrans' removal, which we believe to be just and true. He says that the stories of drunkenness, opium eating, epileptic fits, or religious depression, are alike utterly, wholly, maliciously false. The War Department has never entertained any such charge, or harbored any such expression. It is due to Gen. Rosecrans that this should be said in the fullest and most emphatic manner.—

Neither was Chickamauga the sole cause of his removal, but merely the occasion. The dissatisfaction with him at Headquarters has been of slow growth. The War Department was first surprised, then anxious, and at last openly indignant, at the delay after Stone River, which in spite of every representation of the urgent necessity of action, stretched on from New Year's until the last of June, while Grant was complaining that Bragg's army was allowed to reinforce Johnston. Out of this failure grew an irritating correspondence with the authorities, which very much increased the dissatisfaction. Sometimes it would happen that the War Department, irritated at the General's conduct, and not fully understanding the obstacles with which he was contending, would blame him severely for matters in which it was clear to every one who understood the case, that he was not blameworthy. No one who knows his sensitive and impulsive disposition need be told how this injustice always lashed him into a fury, and how indiscreet and haughty were his replies. Thus the delay at Stone River, and the irritating correspondence that grew out of it, developed the initial cause of the War Department's dissatisfaction.

THE MURFREESBORO DELAY.
Still Rosecrans had good reason for not moving. At the time the pressure for a forward movement to relieve Grant began to be heaviest, he addressed a circular to all his corps and cavalry Generals—15 in number—asking their opinion on three points: 1st, whether there had been any material weakening of Bragg's force; 2d, whether, if there had been, it was sufficient for us to fight a successful battle; and, 3d, whether he, the General, addressed, was in favor of an early or immediate advance. On the first point, the opinions were about equally divided; on the second, most inclined to the belief that we could not fight a successful battle; and every General answered the third by opposing an advance. When he did move, although against the wish of all his leading generals, he handled the army so superbly that it was supposed past complaints would be forgotten in the brilliancy of his operations. Unfortunately, however, he had delayed till the June freshets were upon him. Bragg, retreating by turnpikes and railroad, escaped, while Rosecrans was toiling over the dirt roads by which he had to make his flank movements. Bragg was driven from 9 miles of fortifications at Shelbyville, and from 5 at Tullahoma; and all Middle Tennessee was relieved without a battle, but the War Department would not forget that but for the delays of which it complained the movement would have escaped the June rains, and Bragg would have been crushed instead of driven. Thus the foundation was laid for future disagreements and grave dissatisfaction; while an enemy had also been made of the hero of Vicksburg.

THE TULLAHOMA DELAY.
Passing from the delay at Murfreesboro, the Department found another ground of complaint in the delay at Tullahoma. It insisted that he should have pushed right on to Chattanooga; and it regarded his procrastination from the first of July to the middle of August as criminal. If the Department had remembered that the retreating enemy had burned the bridges, destroyed the railroad and fortified himself in Chattanooga; that Middle Tennessee was cleared without advancing beyond Tullahoma, and that there could be no motive for going further except in attempting to go right into Chattanooga; and that this with a river half a mile wide, 80 miles of broken railroad, the entire range of the Cumberland Mountains to cross, and freshets that would have made even good roads impassable, was simply an impossibility; it would not perhaps have blamed this delay as severely. All this time the correspondence had been growing more and more sharp; and, as Rosecrans felt the injustice of expecting impossibilities from him, and saw how utterly the Department failed to understand the topography of the country, his replies became vinegary and imprudent in the extreme. Assistant Secretary of War Dana and Gen. Meigs both said to him that they thought they had studied the descriptions of the country thoroughly, but, on entering it, found that they had no conception of its nature. Rosecrans considered the higher authorities in their turn more ignorant still, and treated them accordingly.—The Department soon determined that it must change its tone. Hitherto it had confined itself to suggestions and entreaties; now it became peremptory. Orders began to be sent instead of expostulations.

BEFORE CHICKAMAUGA.
In the last days of August the Department telegraphed Gen. Rosecrans, peremptorily ordering him to cross the Tennessee at once, to report each day's movement of each corps, and to allow

ROSECRANS' RETREAT.

Gen. Rosecrans' retirement to the rear at the crisis of the battle was the most immediate cause of his removal. Still it was a military error, not the result of cowardice. The General was striving to rally his broken right, when he met stragglers who said they were from Negley's command, and that it was routed and retreating. He knew that he had sent Negley's troops to the extreme left. Accepting their story as true, and leaping at once to the conclusion that if both right and left were routed, it was a hopeless defeat, he instantly resolved to hasten at once to Chattanooga, and re-organize the stragglers. Events showed this to be the fatal mistake of his life, and it was the chief cause of his removal. Furthermore, the Department regarded his subsequent evacuation of Lookout Mountain as unnecessary and cowardly. He, however, regarded the point as too far from his main body to be defensible.

THE ARMY POLICE.
As to the Truesdall matter, that official was remarkably shrewd; no evidence was brought against him sufficiently clear to convict him in General Rosecrans' eyes; and the latter, by no means insensible to flattery, was so played upon as to be led to believe implicitly in the honesty and skill of his chief of police. The complaints he regarded as persecution; and so, the aged obstinacy of his nature was aroused, and in spite of the remonstrances of his best friends, he stuck to Truesdall in defiance of every charge and suspicion. There was no evidence of any corrupt connection between them, and those who know Gen. Rosecrans will utterly scout at and repudiate the idea; but it cannot be denied that retaining him most seriously injured the General in the estimation of the Government, and even compromised him with his own friends. "Agate," in conclusion, says: "Such, then, are the causes of the removal which so startled the nation. If they are more grave than those of us who are friends to the justly distinguished General could have wished, they are at least such as affect his personal honor, or detract from the well-earned reputation his previous brilliant services have given him."

Rebel Women.
B. F. T., army correspondent of the Chicago Journal, in one of his letters from Tennessee, says:

I shall never be done admiring the patriotic faith and undying devotion of the loyal women of the land, but I must tell you that the rebel women of the South are worthy in everything but a sacred cause of their Northern sisters.—There is nothing they will not surrender, with a smile; the gaudy ring, the diamond bracelet, the rich wardrobe. They cut up the rich carpets for soldiers' blankets without a sigh; take the fine linen from their persons for the bandages. When 400 of Longstreet's men came up to Nashville, prisoners of war, about the roughest, dirtiest, wildest, fellows the sun ever shone on, and a flight of stairs in the building they occupied fell, killing and wounding a large number of them, you should have seen the fair young traitresses come forth from the old aristocratic mansions, bearing restoratives and delicacies in their hands, mingling in the dingy crowd, wiping away the blood with their white handkerchiefs, and uttering words of cheer; should have seen them doing this with hundreds of Union soldiers all round, and smiling back upon the rough backguards of rebels as they left; but in all there was a defiant air, a pride in their humanity strange to see. Of a truth they carried it off grandly. And almost all these girls were in mourning for dead rebels, brothers, lovers, friends, whom these same girls had sneered into treason and driven into rebellion, and allowed all the South with their graves, and the least they could do was to wear black for them and flaunt black from the window blinds. Clothed be their souls in sack cloth! I said they were worthy of their sisters at the North, in all but a righteous cause, but I said wrong.—There is a bitterness, there are glimpses of the Pythoness, that make you shrink from them. But they are fearfully in earnest; they are almost grand in self-sacrifice. Oh! that they were true and loving daughters of the old flag.

When Socrates was asked why he had built himself so small a house, he replied: "Small as it is I wish I could fill it with friends." These, indeed, are all that a wise man would desire to assemble; for a crowd is not company, and faces are but a gallery of pictures, and talk but a tinkling cymbal, where there is no love.

Oh wondrous age! when want of native charms no longer fills fair women with alarms; when painted roses adorn the sallow face, and iron ribbing gives her eve's glare: when piles of gold, her siren's ill-gotten gains, are full atonement for the want of brains; when sold graces wield a blunted dart, while musk and moonlight win the lover's heart.

THE LATE GOV. MARCY.—The New York Herald announces that Thomas Clowes, a contemporary of the late Governor Marcy, is about to edit the letters of the deceased statesman. They involve, to a large extent, the political gossip of the past history of the country. A massive granite monument has been erected over Mr Marcy's grave at the Rural Cemetery, on the Troy road.

In the hand of an embroideress, even the hard, polished needles bear beautiful flowers and fruits.

A Proclamation by the Governor.

The Proclamation of the President of the United States, of the date of the 17th day of October last, calling upon the Governors of the different States to raise and have enlisted into the United States service for the various Companies and Regiments in the field from their respective States their quotas of three hundred thousand men, has made it my duty again to address the people of Michigan.

To encourage such recruiting large increased bounties are offered by the Government. To volunteers in regiments whose terms of service will expire in 1864 or 1865, there will be paid a bounty of three hundred and two dollars, and to Veterans who shall re-enlist in such regiments a bounty of four hundred and two dollars.

The quota of this State has been assigned by the War Department, and is eleven thousand two hundred and ninety-eight (11,298) men.

This call is for soldiers to fill the ranks of the regiments in the field,—those regiments which by long and gallant service have wasted their numbers in same proportion that they have made a distinguished name, both for themselves and the State.

The hopes of the Rebellion are steadily perishing. The Armies of the Republic are in the midst of their country, and they have not the power to expel them.

Fill up the ranks once more, and the next blast of the bugle, for an advance, will sound the knell of revolution and herald in the return of peace.

Fellow citizens, let us do it willingly, gallantly, joyfully. The people of Michigan have heretofore earned the gratitude of the country by their promptness and energy in the support of the Government.

The terms of enlistments of the old regiments, many of them, will expire early next year. They must not be allowed to perish by such expiration.

I earnestly request the Counties, Cities and Towns to move immediately and actively in this work. Volunteers can choose their regiments among those named in the accompanying Orders.

Recruiting officers will be appointed wherever the people desire it to aid in filling up the quotas.

Patriotic men of Michigan, obey your country's call. Given under my hand at the Capitol in Lansing, this 9th day of November, A. D. 1863.

AUSTIN BLAIR, Secretary of State.

The National Forces.

Below we give a tabular statement of the number of men the nation has sent into the field during the present war:

Table with 3 columns: State, 3 Mos., 6 Mos., 3 Years. Lists states like Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, etc.

TOTALS.

Summary table of totals for various states and regions.

By this we see that the people have put into the field over one million and a quarter, and estimating the number sent from those States from which we have received no returns probably more than a million and a half.

THE PRINCESS OF WALES.—The London Observer, of the 24th ult., says: "We are enabled to state, upon the best authority, that her royal Highness the Princess of Wales will probably be confined in or about the last week in March next."

FRIDAY MORNING, NOV. 20, 1863.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

In accordance with established usage, and because it is eminently fit that an enlightened and Christian people should make frequent and public acknowledgment of their humble dependence upon Almighty God for all the blessings of life, I do hereby appoint Thursday, the 26th day of November instant, as a day of praise, thanksgiving and prayer, and I recommend that, suspending all ordinary business, the people of this State do assemble in their places of public worship, in their houses, and by the family fireside, and keep this day as becomes them with reverence and gratitude towards our Heavenly Father, and with sincere and hearty good will towards our fellow-men.

The people of Michigan have been prospered in business during the year that is past, beyond all previous example. Let them be thankful, but put away pride and the inordinate love of gain which leads us too often to make merchandise of the most sacred causes.

Reliable "Local Intelligence."

Our cotemporary of the News introduces some strictures upon the doings of the Supervisors, at their recent session, with the following self gratulatory remark:

Though we receive no adequate compensation for printing the proceedings, it is incumbent upon us to print them, especially, as the News is read more than any other paper in the county, having a more general circulation among the tax payers, and containing as it always does more of local intelligence than any other paper in the county.

Then comes censure of the Board for its parsimoniousness to Publishers, and for its undue liberality to other parties. We are not the defender of the Board, and don't endorse all its acts—by a long shot—but let us see about the charges of the News:

1st. "Parsimoniousness to Publishers." We don't believe the Supervisors have ever been inclined to pay too liberally for publishing proceedings, but the blame is more than half chargeable to those publishers who, knowing (perhaps?) the value of their services better than the Board, have bid against each other year after year, and volunteered to both report and publish proceedings at one-half what they knew and declared it was worth.

2d. The News don't like the allowance of "some sixty odd dollars"—$65,72—to JOHN O'HARA "for making an index to the Court Records." We agree with the News that it belongs to the Clerk to keep up his indexes, but it certainly does not belong to the present Clerk to bring up indexes left behind for half a score or more of years, we don't know how many. The Board honorably paid for work necessarily done by order of the present Clerk, and then resolved that that officer should keep up his indexes in the future. It is former Boards which have over-paid, not the present one.

3d. The allowance of $122 to JAMES McMAHON for services as Draft Commissioner is called in question. The claim was not for services required and paid for by the Government, but for enlisting men to fill the quota of the County, and saving it from the draft which took place in other Counties of the State in the Spring of 1863.

4th. The News says, "we notice also that O'HARA was allowed some $65,00 for services as a recording clerk for the Board," and says such a thing was never done before, that "the records have hitherto been made by the County Clerk, and the sum allowed to O'HARA was mere gratuity." It will no doubt satisfy "the people" to assure them—and the proceedings, which our cotemporary has probably not read, will warrant us in doing so—that not a single cent was allowed Mr. O'HARA for any such services, unless he can get "the Elder" to cash the vote of thanks passed him by the Board. Mr. Root paid Mr. O'HARA for his services as recording clerk, and no allowance for such services was asked of the Board or made by it.

5th. "The Board allowed the Argus and Journal ten dollars each for" reporting and "printing the proceedings," in addition to the appropriation made in May last, "and refused to allow the other papers of the County five dollars each" extra, "for doing the same work"—except the reporting. And this was probably because "the Argus and Journal are the only democratic papers in the County." We believe the motion for the extra allowance to the Argus and Journal was made by Mr. Babbitt, Republican, and we would refer our neighbor to him for his reasons. As to the democracy of the Journal, he can get the "statistics" on that point from the senior editor of that paper.

6th. "The Board was intensely political in all its movements," an assertion proved by the fact that it elected two Democrats and one Republican Superintendent of the Poor." We believe that when the Republicans have had a majority of the Board they have invariably elected two Republicans and one Democrat, and the News should have more manliness than to complain because his ox is gored in turn.

Seriously, we think the News made a "big boo" over the smallest of the sins of commission of the Board.—If it had been less anxious to find a political mare's nest, it might, perhaps, have found some better cause of complaint. As it is, its "local intelligence" does not much enlighten or benefit its readers.

Bounties to Volunteers.

By order of the War Department persons enlisting in the old regiments of this State, prior to the next draft, or who have enlisted since the 5th day of November inst., will be paid the following bounties:

To veteran recruits—or recruits who have served nine months and been honorably discharged, except for physical disability, $402; one month's pay, $13, $2 premium, and $60 bounty—in all $75—to be paid before leaving general rendezvous. Balance of bounty to be paid in $50 instalments, with pay.

To all other recruits $300 bounty; $60 with first month's pay and premium—in all $75—to be paid before leaving rendezvous, and balance of bounty in $40 instalments, with pay.

When the War terminates before the term of enlistment, three years, and the services of the troops are not required for the full term, any bounty remaining unpaid will be paid when mustered out, and if a volunteer is honorably discharged after two years' service he will be paid the full bounty. Heirs of volunteers dying in service will receive the full unpaid bounty.

To secure these bounties volunteers must enter the following regiments: 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th, 20th, 21st, 22d, 23d, 24th and 25th regiments of infantry.

Those entering regiments not named above will get a bounty of only $100.

The Quota of Washtenaw County.

Gov. BLAIR has issued his proclamation calling for volunteers to fill the quota assigned to this State under the late call of the President. In connection with the proclamation appears the order of Col. HILL, A. A. Provost Marshal General, assigning the exact quotas to the several Cities and Townships—or sub-districts—of the State. From this order we extract the following statement of quotas apportioned to the several sub-districts of Washtenaw County:

Table with 3 columns: District, Town, No. Men. Lists districts like Ann Arbor, Augusta, Bridgewater, etc.

The above quotas give the exact number of men wanted for service from each Town, and if there is a deficiency in any Township the draft is ordered to take place on the 5th day of January next, at which time 50 per cent. will be added to the number then wanted. The 5th of January will soon be upon us, and if the Towns would escape the next draft, they must be up and doing. Liberal bounties are offered by the Government; and if active men in each Township will take the subject in hand and co-operate with the enlisting officers, the quota of the County may be nearly filled. A Town bounty of $50 in addition to the national bounty of $402 to veterans or $302 to new men enlisting in the old regiments will we think insure the desired object.

CHAMOUNI.

LAUSANNE, Oct. 20th, 1863.

Who has not heard of Chamouni? Quietly it nestles at the feet of mountains; the eternal rocks of the Brevent range, and the everlasting snows of the Mont Blanc peaks are its guardians. Its inhabitants are shut in from the broad world around, and are not troubled by the clash of arms in America, nor by the diplomacy of the monarchs of Europe.—To them, the sum total of life seems to be to watch the cows, as they graze on the mountain side, to make the butter and the cheese which all travelers praise, and to lay up a little store for winter, which will satisfy the wants which physical nature is heir to. What care they whether Louis Napoleon or Lord Palmerston reigns in the councils of nations? What care they whether the Pope is driven from Rome, or a Prince of Austria sits upon the Mexican throne?

The valley is the very picture of contrasts. Its own green fields and fertile soil, its farms and busy population, its little village and numerous chalets scattered here and there, its cattle, (beautifully making music with their bells as they return at evening from their pasture, is all the very opposite of the rocks, and waste which tower upon one side, and the wilderness of snow which rises upon the other.

The mountains were casting their shadows over the valley when we arrived.—We had come from Geneva, which we had left in the morning. The heavy diligence, carrying its load of twenty persons, had been exchanged at St. Martin for lighter and smaller vehicles, as the remainder of the road was precipitous and difficult.—With these, at dark, we drove gaily into the metropolis of the valley, Chamouni, and passing a loitering crowd of Savoyan yeomanry, who had finished their day's toil and were drawn by the attraction of habit to the street corner, we alighted at the Saussure Hotel, and were regaled with a fine supper, and pleasant rooms.

Although Chamouni itself is a little village, and its people simple Savoyans, yet we find here, in the full glory of opposition, five hotels, large, comfortable, and more civilized than even Ann Arbor can boast! And why is this? Because hither, during the summer months, through an almost endless caravan of voyagers, who are ever coming, coming, going, going. Hither comes the Englishman, with his square toed shoes, and slouch hat, and independent air, afraid of nobody, and bowing to no title; while to bring up the rear, now and then an Italian, and a Spaniard, and a Russian appears, forming an army large enough to keep busy the hands of all the good people of Chamouni's vale!

How delightful to sleep in such a valley, and surrounded by such monarchs as the mountains!

"Above me are the Alps, The Palaces of Nature, whose vast walls Have proclaimed in clouds their snowy scalps, And throne eternity in icy halls. Of cold sublimity, where forms and falls The Avalanche, the thunderbolts of snow!"

The Arve, as it roars along the valley, is the serenade that Nature gives, and it nurses me to sleep with its sweet music. Oh! for such a musician, always, to invite quiet slumber!

The morrow was the Sabbath. We had just come from Paris where no Sabbath is known, but where the laborer goes forth to his toil, leading the dumb animal that so much needs a day of rest; where the theatres present their most brilliant plays, and the gardens for the dance have their gayest throngs; where the clock of humanity never ceases work, but ticks on, and on, week in and week out. But not so in Chamouni. I saw its women, with their black cloth nets, covering the back part of the hair, for a head-dress, with their dark scarfs, thrown over their shoulders, with their tidy aprons and clean home-spun dresses, walking away from the little Catholic Chapel, where they had been attending prayers; I saw the men of Chamouni, in their holiday attire, standing quietly about its principal street, looking at the travelers, or conversing upon the affairs of the valley; and though a Puritan might not observe the Sabbath thus, yet I could not but contrast this observance of the day with that which I had seen in Paris. They seemed almost Saints beside the people that have no regard to moral or physical laws. Better make the Sabbath a holiday, or a day of idleness even, than not to regard it at all.—The poor frames of man and beast demand it.

The traveler may spend a week at Chamouni delightfully. Is he fond of waterfalls, the Cascade du Dard leaps down the mountain side, inviting visitors; would he see a river formed, he has but to walk to the source of the Arveron, as it issues forth from the Glacier du Bois; has he curiosity to gaze upon a sea of icy pinnacles, the Mer de Glace, 40 miles in extent, is accessible by a path up the mountain; would he explore a glacier, "the cold and restless mass" of three are near; would he behold a panorama of the snow capped summits, in their greatest grandeur, let him ascend to the Brevent, and it is spread before him; or is his spirit more ambitious, and does he aim to be the highest man in all Europe, elevated above Princes and Kings, let him scramble up the side and over the snows of Mont Blanc, and his wish is gratified!

We remained here only two days, contented with viewing its glaciers, and a portion of the Mer de Glace, and with gazing, merely upon the frigidity of the "monarch of mountains," without testing its icy character, or feeling our breath freeze upon its icy summit! After these two days we were once more upon the move, and upon the back of mules we were crossing the Alps by the Tete Noir, nearer the blue azure sky than we had ever before seen.

Credits for Volunteers.

We extract the following from a recent order of Adjutant General Robertson. If the instructions are carefully carried out each Township will hereafter be properly credited for the men it enlists:

In order to guard as far as possible against improper credits being made, the following rules are laid down by the Provost Marshal General of the State, and men enlisting must be credited accordingly:

When enrolled, to the place of enrollment without reference to place of enlistment.

When not enrolled, to their known place of residence without reference to place of enlistment.

When not residents of the State, they may be credited to such locality as they may select.

Recruiting officers will be held responsible for having the men so enlisted by them credited to the proper locality.

Why don't our City cotemporary that is so eagerly sought for, for its "local intelligence," manage to find place in its columns for the Governor's proclamation calling for volunteers, and to the quotas assigned to this county? Perhaps such "intelligence" might be of interest to the "U-M-C-R-O-U-S" tax-payers dependent on its columns for their intellectual nutriment. We forget, though it may "bring up" between this and the 5th of January. Slow coaches shouldn't be so conceited.

Senator SPRAGUE and Miss KATE CHASS were married in Washington on the evening of the 12th inst. A grand display was made on the occasion.

A large number of students of the University went down to Detroit on Saturday last, crossed into the Queen's dominions, and paid a formal visit to Mr. VALLANDIGHAM. Mr. V. delivered a very excellent address on the occasion, ignoring almost entirely his own peculiar views and situation.

Three rebel blockade running steamers, the Robert E. Lee, Conubia, and the Ella and Anna, have been recently captured off Wilmington, N. C., all with valuable cargoes on board.

We have received the December number of Godey's Lady's Book, and a gem number it is, stamping Godey ahead of all competitors for the patronage of the ladies. It is a seasonable number, and both illustrations and contents bear directly upon the coming holidays. The "Daily Godey" is a beautiful plate, and the "Emblematic Title" will bear study, its tableaux appealing to the memory of the old and the present of the young. The fashion plates are numerous and O. K. A new volume will begin with the next number, and now is the time to subscribe. Put Godey on your list of Christmas presents. $3 a year; two copies $5. Address Louis A. Godey, 323 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Godey and the ARGUS for $3.50.

We give in our columns to day a third letter from our foreign correspondent, F. W. BACKER, of this city. Mr. B. is evidently traveling with his eyes open, and his well written letters we are glad to learn are appreciated by our readers. We have another letter on hand, and hope to receive others at short intervals.

The excitement consequent upon the discovery of a Canadian-rebel plot to invade the States, release the prisoners on Johnson's Island, destroy the commerce of the Lakes, burn Detroit, Buffalo, and other lake cities, and "raise the d—l generally," has subsided, and all is quiet along the Detroit and St. Lawrence. We think somebody was sold.

Change of Car Time.

A new Time Table was put in operation on the Michigan Central road on Monday, and one not on the whole the most acceptable to our citizens, especially in the arrangement of the Mail Train.—We know that Mr. Rice always desires to accommodate the business community along the line, and we hope that he will find a way to give us a mail train two or three hours earlier in the day, without detriment to other interests. In these times it is hard to wait until afternoon for the morning dailies.

Passenger Trains now run as follows:

Table with columns: GOING WEST, GOING EAST, listing train numbers and destinations like Detroit, Ann Arbor, etc.

The United States Christian Commission, a co-laborer of the Sanitary Commission in ministering to the wants of sick and wounded soldiers in hospital and field, has issued an urgent appeal for aid, and we understand that collections will be taken up in the Thanksgiving day congregations, to further the good work in which the Commission is engaged. The donations should be liberal.

The steamer Sunny Side was burned on the Mississippi, near Island No. 16, on the 13th inst. About 30 passengers lost their lives, among them Mrs. Van Buren and daughter, of Detroit. The freight included over 13,000 bales of cotton.

The Propeller Water Witch, of the Sarnia and Chicago line, was lost in a gale on Saginaw Bay, last week. Capt. Ryder and all on board supposed lost.—The water Witch belongs to E. B. Ward, was worth $30,000, and uninsured.

GOOD TO TAKE.—FRIEND PETERS left fifty pounds Buck-Wheat Flour at our house last week. All we have to say is, that it is the best we have had for a long time. We understand a few more can be supplied with the same kind, by leaving their orders at Henion & Gott's store. "Hurry up the cakes," "that's what the matter."

The Annual Festival Supper of the New York Society will be given at the Monitor House, on Tuesday evening, December 8th. The members of the Society, and citizens generally, may get ready for a good time.

Our columns are destitute of army news, for the want of any news of real importance. There has been considerable skirmishing all along the lines, but the great armies have not succeeded in "finding each other yet."

The Wood Swindle. We have a few remarks to offer upon the subject of fuel, and if we shall make them rather pointed, it is because we feel "for our own and others' weas."

There are twenty loads of wood now standing along side the square, and let us try and buy one. Here is a small wagon box, partly filled with a poor article. "What do you ask for it?" is the question. "$2.50," is answered. "How much have you on?" "Three quarters of a cord," is the reply, no man ever has less than that quantity—or more frequently—"it makes no difference, I sell by the load."

By measuring for ourselves we determine that there may be three eighths of a cord in the load, and we shall pay at the rate of nearly $7 a cord if we buy.

Here is another load. "How much?" is asked. "$3.50," comes out promptly and promptly. "How much have you?" "Whatever there is, I don't sell by the cord." The rule is actually applied to this load, and there is 66 feet of wood, or would be if it was four feet long—but no such wood comes into market. $7 a cord, again; and so we go through the twenty loads, and find wood actually selling all day long, and day after day, at $6 to $8 per cord.

This winter answer, with the Argus at the old price, $1.50 a year, and so we try to contract. Here is a wood man, we'll try him. "How much will you draw me five or ten cords of wood for?" "Don't sell by the cord, can make more selling by the load." Here is another. "What'll you take for ten cords of wood?" "I sell by the load, wood cord wood for any man," and the same answer we get from man after man. They sell by the load, call half a cord, three quarters, three quarters a cord and then when the dearly bought load is unloaded at our door we find the wood don't look as it did on the wagon, the inside wood was not like that we saw on the outside of the load. We don't say that every man who draws wood into our market is swindling our citizens in this way, but, test the matter as we have, and you will make up your mind that there are too many wood swindlers; and in any event it is safe for you to watch the man who "won't measure wood for any one."

Wood is the only article sold in our market by guess. The farmer expects to have his hay, wheat, oats, corn, wool, beef, pork, butter, &c., &c., weighed, and to get the market price for exactly the number of pounds he sells. His lumber, staves, apples, cider, &c., are measured, not lumped off; and his potatoes are sold by the bushel not by the load. Wood should not be an exception, and we hope that our "City Fathers" will see that it is not long. We have a city ordinance, and we hope that at the first meeting of the Council, Wood Inspectors will be appointed, and notice given that the ordinance will be strictly enforced; and if it is not stringent enough let it be made more stringent, so stringent that no man will think of selling wood by the load any sooner than he would think of paying his choppers by the load, or guessing at their day's work.

If Wood is worth $3.50, $4.00, $5.00 or even $6.00 a cord, our citizens will pay it cheerfully, but they have a right to have what they pay for. Will our City Council see to it?

We have tried Dr. FOSTER'S National Coffee advertised in another column, and find it a first rate article.—Patronize home manufactures and save your money.

Gen. Tom Thumb and Staff give three levees in Hangsterfer's Hall to-day. They are sure to draw.

Dr. Dio Lewis, author of the "New Gymnastics," will lecture in Hangsterfer's Hall, on Thursday evening next. Dr. Lewis is one of the most popular Gymnasts in the country, and in the eastern cities his Light Gymnastics are displacing the old system. Dr. Lewis comes to our city under the auspices of the Detroit Gymnastic Association, and about a dozen members of that Association will accompany him and aid in illustrating the system. Go and hear him.
