The President's Inaugural Address, Washington, March 4.

The following is the President's inugural address: Fellow Countrymen-At this second appearing to take the oath of The Presi

Now, at the Michigan. expiration of four years, during which public declarations have been constantly called forth on every point and phase of the great contest which still absorbs the attention, and engrosses the energies of the nation, little that is new could be presented. The progress of our arms upon which all else depends, is as wel known to the public as to myself, and it is, I trust, reasonably satisfactory and encouraging to all. With high hope Even yet my heart pleads, when I see they are the honored ones of the party. for the future no prediction with regard the carnage of buttle, the desolation of A correspondent of the Detroit Tribune, to it is ventured. On the occasion similar to this, four years ago all thoughts were anxiously directed to an impending civil war. All dreaded it; all sought to avoid it. While the Inaugural Address was being delivered from this place, devoted altogether to saving the Union without war, insurgent agents were in the city seeking to destroy a without war, seeking to dissolve the Union and divide the effects by negotia tion. Both parties deprecated war, but one of them would make war rather than let the Nation survive, and the other would accept war rather than let it per ish, and the war came. Une eighth of the whole population were colored slaves not distributed generally over the Union, but localized in the southern part of it. These slaves constituted a a peculiar and powerful interest. All know that this interest was somehow the cause of the war. To strengthen, perpetuate and extend this interest, was the object for which the insurgents would rend the Union by war, while the Government claimed no right to do more than to restrict the territorial enlargement of it. Neither party expected for the war the magnitude and the duration which it has already attained. Neither anticipated that the cause of the conflict itself should cease. Each looked for an easier triumph and a result less fundamental and astounding. Both read the same Bible, and pray to the same God, and each invokes His aid against the other. It may seem strange that any men should dare to ask a just God's assistance in wringing their bread from the sweat of other men's faces; but let us judge not, that we be not judged. The prayers of both should not be answered; that of neither has been answered fully. WISE TO KNOW, BUT WEAR TO DO. There is no more pitiable sight than that of a young man stricken by weakness of will, yet possessed of sufficient knowledge to feel the loss. Wishing to do, but too enervated in will and in body to act. Heavy-eyed when he should possess the eye of an eagle, listless when every nerve should tingle with energy, dreaming in Heu of doing, fearing marringe instead of seeking it, and fast sinking into a driveller and a warning to others, and all through seminal weakness, due to over-indulgence, natural or unnatural, displayed in loathsome emissions that humiliate and disgust him. To such we say, take the Caracker Curr, observe the directions that accompany it faithfully, and it will infallibly bestow what nature meant you to possess setrength, energy, health, and, in lieu of impotency, manly power. PLAN OF THE WORK.

PLAN OF THE WORK.

Since Sir Waiter Raleigh solaced his imprisonment in the Tower by the composition of his "History of the World," the Literature of England has never achieved the work which he left unfinished. There have been "Universal Histories," from the bulk of an encyclopædia to the most meagre outline, in which the annals of each nation are separately recorded; but without an attempt to trace the story of Divine Providence and human progress in one connected narrative. It is pronosed to supply this want by a work, condensed enough to keep it within a reasonable size, but yet sofull as to be free from the dry bathness of an epitome. The Literature of Germany abounds in history,—such as those of Muller, Schlosser, Karl von Rottock, Duncker, and others,—which at prove the de mand for such a book, and furnish models, in some degree, for its execution. But even those great works are somewhat deficient in that organic unity which is the chief aim of this "Hist ry of the World."

The story of our whole race, like that of each separate nation, has "a beginning, a middle, and an end." That story we propose to follow, from it beginning in the sacred records, and from the dawn of civilization in the East,—through the successive Oriental Empires,—the rise of liberty and the perfection of heathen polity, arts, and literature in Greece and Rome,—the change which passed over the face of the world when the light of christianity sprang up,—the origin and first appearance of those barbarfan races which overthrew both divisions of the Roman Empire,—the an nals of the States which rose on the Empire, and the extension of these influences, by discovery, conquest, colonization, and Christian missions, to the remotest regions of the earth. In a word, as separate histories reflect the detached scenes of human action and suffering, our aim is to bring into one view the several parts which assuredly form one great whole, moving onwards, under the guidance of Divine Providence, to the unknown end ordained in the Div. ne purposes.

purposes. No pains will be spared to make this history scholar-like in substance and popular in style. It will be tounded on the best authorities, ancient and modern, original and secondary. The vast progress recently made in historical and critical investigations, the results obtained from the modern science of comparative philology, and the discoveries which have laid open new sources of information concerning the Fast, afford such facilities as to make the present a fit epoch for ovr undertaking.

OF HARTFORD

The choice was at once made, under a solemp compact to stand faithfully together until complete victory blesse n single fate sealed the struggle. Amid ail the ceremonies of a national birth the state stood sponsors to the cause, and by sacred oaths pledged all the lives, all the interests, all the property in mutual support, and for general relief. From the nature and motives of the war, and by the bond which united those who were struggling to save all that is prized among men, there was nothing too sucred to appropriate or abandon, except the plighted faith to be true to each other. These onths Virginia and her frontier children have not yet broken. The lives of her people are now in the trenches, with a daily sacrifice equal to the necessity of defense. Nearly all their property has been yielded to the enemy in obedience to the request of strategy. The slaves have been appropriated, and losses suffered according to the demands of the advancing enemy. This ap ropriation of territory and slaves by these States was as much a voluntary contribution by tl.em to the wants of the war, as if bills of grant and emancipation had been passed by their separate sovereign conventions. They were a part of the price contemplated at the time the struggle commenced, to be paid for blessings to be common to all. But the tide is now rolling toward those States who made the fight, who affirmed success or universal destruction, and who swore the oath. This oath has been broken, and they by whom the first blow was stricken are the first to desert those whose breasts have, so far, re ceived the fury of the storm raised by others. After the border Etates haveoffered lands and slaves, as necessary sucrifices to success, they still declare that wife, child, bride, a free tongue and unchained neck are things to be fought for. They say to the States of the "now make the same contribution of lands and slaves that you forced us to make, and sentiments, relations, and people will be secured." Monday the compact of mutual support was broken. The bill to appropriate the slaves so as to secure bonorable existence was defeated in the Senate chiefly by the votes of the Gulf States. The border States had previously contributed their share to the common detense. It makes no difference whether those slaves were lost to their owners by the strategy of war, or by the action of Congress. They were equally sacrifices to the national defense-sacrifices foretold by some-and which all swore to share alike.

The vote by which that bill was lost must be reconsidered The slaves must be given, or we may perish. They who watch the destinies of the State declare its wants and demand the relief. He for whom the love of the people is only exceeded by his own pure affection for his country-the hero of twenty victories, and the conqueror of every ignoble aspiration-implores the recreant States not to abandon the glory he won for them at Chancellorsville, and not to refuse the liberty he secures by his lines around the still unconquerable capital of Virginia. The army demands that its depleted ranks shall be strengthened by more men of whatever color, and it is sometimes impolitie to refuse the demands of an serny like that which Lee commands. The border States insist that such laws as are necessary to save the State shall be passed, even though those laws affect the slaves in the South as the war has affected them on the frontier That vote must be reconsidered. Perish property and all the luxuries of profit, but we will Baptist Church.

Dr. Jackson - Dear Sir; - I feel it due to your excelprotect our social existence and our pride as freemen. We prefer to do this by manly battle; but if they who demand to share our success now refuse the means to win that success, they can so act, but our wives and our honor must still be ours.

The difficulty in obtaining a nease has

The difficulty in obtaining a peace has been slavery. The appropriation by the border States of their slaves to the public use, has removed that difficulty in negotiations by them with the enemy. There Tennessee. Slavery has disappeared in one-half of Virginia, and practically exists nowhere in her limits. Let such appropriation of interest be at once made as will save to each State the rights of an unconquerable people. If this be refused, and the sacrifices of war are so imposed on some as to imperil relations without which life is intolerable; then iet provisions of safety be immediately made by those who value family bonds and individual pride above sordid property; and let those who are willing to have masters above, that they live uponthe hope of having slaves beneath them, seal their fate with the enemy now thundering at their gates. Perhaps it would be well for the Gulf States to reconsider their vote. Virginia, Tennessee, Missouri, and Kentucky will yet see that their people be not slaves, in order that the inconvenience of war may be felt on the Conguree and Tombigbee.

It is pure and pleasant; no had effects like when using Bourbon whisky, which disorders the stomach, torpore the liver, locks up all the secretions, turns the blood into water, dropsy sets in, and the patient dies suddenly.

Bourbon whisky is recommended now a days by almost every physician. Many patients that visit my rooms, both male and female, are stupefied with this poison. The relief is temporary. If they cough they take a little whisky; if they cannot sleep, they take a little whisky; if they cannot sleep, they take a more andmore until they are bloated up, and imagine they are getting fleshy. more andmore until they are bloated up, and imagine they are getting flethy. The stomach, liver, and disgrative powers are completely destroyed, and lose their appetite for food. No one was ever carred of consumption by this process, where cavilies have been formed in the tungs. A little stimulant is frequently beneficial to consumptives, such as pure brandy or good wines; in many cases London porter or brown stout in moderate quantities; but Bourbon whisky hastens on instead of curing consumption.

The Seaweed Tonic produces lasting resutes, thoroughly invigorating the stomach and digestive system, and enabling it to eliminate and make into healthy blood the food which may be used for that purpose—It is so wonderfol in its effects that a wine glass full will dicest a hearty meal, and a little of it taken before breakfast will give a tone to the stomach which few medicines possess the power of deing.
