SUMMER.

Long grass swaying in the playing Of the almost weared breeze; Flowers bowed beneath a crowd Of the yellow arrow'd bees; Summer's forest fills with twilight, Like a dreamy old romance, Rivers falling, rivers calling,
In their indolent advance.

Crimson heat-bells making regal All the solitary places; Dominant light, that pierces down Into the deep blue water spaces; Sun-uprisings and sun-settings,
And intensities of noon;
Purple darkness of the moon.

Rapid, rosy-tinted lightnings, Where the rocky clouds are riven, Like the lifting of a veil Before the inner courts of Heaven; Silver stars in azure evenings, Slowly climbing up the steep; Cornfields ripening to the harvest,
And the wide seas smooth with sleep.

David Matson.

By JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Who of my young friends have read The sorrowful story of "Enoch Arden," So sweetly and simply told by the great English poet? It is a story of a man who went to sea, leaving a sweet young wife and a little daughter. He was cast away on a desert island, where he remained several years, when he was discovered and taken off by a passing vessel. Coming back to his native town, he found his wife married to an old playmate—a good man, rich and honored, and with whom she was living happily.
The poor man, unwilling to cause her any pain or perplexity, resolved not to make himself known to her, and lived and died alone. The poem has reminded me of a very similar story of my own New England neighborhood, which I often heard, and which I will try to tell, not in poetry, like Alfred Tennyson's, but in my own poor prose. I can assure my readers that in its main particulars it is a true tale.

One bright summer morning, more than three score years ago, David Matson, with his young wife and healthy, beardless boys, stood on the bank of the river near their dwelling. They were waiting there for Pelatiah Curtis to come around the point with his wherry, and take the husband and father to the port a few miles below. The lively Turtle was about to sail on a voyage to Spain, and David was to go in her as mate. They stood there in the lovely morning sunshine, talking cheerfully, but had you been near, you could have seen tears in Anna Matson's blue eyes, for she loved her husband, and knew there was always danger on the sea.
And David's bluff, cheery voice trembled a little now and then, for the best sailor loved his snug home on the Merrimack, with the dear wife and her pretty boys, but presently the wherry came alongside, and he turned back to kiss wife and children once more.

"In with you, man," said Pelatiah Curtis, "there's no time for kissing and such fooleries when the tide serves." And so they parted. Anna and the boys went back to their home, and David to the port, whence he sailed off in the lively Turtle. And months passed, autumn followed the summer, and winter the autumn, and then spring came, and anon it was summer on the river side, and he did not come back. And another year passed, then the old sailors and fishermen shook their heads solemnly, and said that the lively Turtle was a lost ship and would never come back to port. And p'or Anna had her bonnet dyed black, and her straw bonnet trimmed in mourning ribbon, and therefore she was known only as the Widow Matson.

And how was it all this time with David himself?
Now you must know that the Mohammedan people of Algiers and Tripoli, and Mogadore and Salee, on the Barbary coast, had for a long time been in the habit of fitting out galleys and armed boats to seize upon merchant vessels of Christian nations, and make slaves of their crews and passengers, just as men calling themselves Christians in America, were sending vessels to Africa to catch black slaves for their plantations. The lively Turtle fell into the hands of one of those voracious sea robbers, and the crew were taken to Algiers, and sold in the market-place as slaves, poor David Matson among the rest.

When a boy, he had learned the trade of a shipcarpenter with his father on the Merrimack, and now he was set at work in the dock yards. His master, who was naturally a kind man, did not overwork him. He had daily his three loaves of bread, and when his clothing was worn out, it was supplied by the coarse cloth of wool and camel's hair, woven by the Barber women. Three hours before sunset he was released from work, and Friday, which is the Mohammedan Sabbath, was a day of entire rest. Once a year, at the season called Ramadan, he was left at leisure for a whole week. So time went on—days, weeks, months and years. His dark hair became gray. He still dreamed of his old home on the Merrimack, and of his good Anna and the boys. He wondered whether they yet lived, what they thought of him, and what they were doing. The hope of ever seeing them again grew fainter and fainter, and at last nearly died out, and he resigned himself to his fate as a slave for life.

But one day a handsome, middle-aged gentleman, in the dress of one of his own countrymen, attended by a grand officer of the Day, entered the shipyard, and called upon before him the American captives. "Are there any among these strangers who were not here other than Joel Barlow, Commissioner of the United States to procure the liberation

How to Prevent a Divorce.

When the senior Jonathan Trumbull was Governor of Connecticut, a gentleman called at his house, requesting to see him exclusively in private. According he was shown the sanctum sancto-rum, and the Governor came forward to meet him saying, "Good morning, sir; I am glad to see you."
"Squire W., returned the salutation, saying as he did so, "I have called upon a very unpleasant errand, sir, and want your advice. My wife and I do not live happily together, and I am thinking of getting a divorce. What do you advise, sir?"
The Governor sat a few moments in deep thought, then turning to Squire W., said:
"How did you treat Mrs. W., when you were courting her, and how did you feel towards her at the time of your marriage?"
Squire W., replied,
"I treated her as kindly as I could, for I loved her kindly at that time."
"Well, sir," said the Governor, "go home and court her just as you did then, and love her as when you married her.
Do this in the fear of God for one year, and then tell me the result." The Governor then said, "Let us pray." They bowed in prayer and separated.
When a year had passed away, Squire W., called again to see the Governor, and taking him by the hand said:
"I have called, sir, to thank you for the good advice you gave me, and to tell you that my wife and I are as happy as when first we were married. I cannot be grateful enough for your good counsel."
"I am glad to hear it, Mr. W., and hope you will continue to court as long as you live."
The result was that Squire W. and wife lived happily together to the end of life. Let those who think of separation in these days, go and do likewise.

Power of Imagination.

Alexander Dumas published, some time ago, in a daily Paris paper, a novel, in which the heroine, prosperous and happy, is assailed by consumption. All the gradual symptoms were most touchingly described, and the greatest interest was felt for the heroine.
One day the Marquis de Dalmac called on him.
"Dumas," said he, "have you composed the end of the story now being published in—?"
"Of course."
"Does the heroine die at the end?"
"Of course—dies of consumption—After such symptoms as I have described, how could she live?"
"You will have to make her live—You must change the catastrophe."
"I cannot."
"Yes, you must; for on your heroine's life depends my daughter's?"
"Your daughter's?"
"Yes, she has all the various symptoms of consumption you have described, and watches mournfully for every new number of your novel, reading her own fate in your heroine's. Now, if you make your heroine live, my daughter, whose imagination has been deeply impressed, will live, too. Come, a life to save is a temptation."
"Not to be resisted."
Dumas changed his last chapter.—
His heroine recovered, and was happy.

The President's Brother.

At some point on the march from Fayetteville, an old couple, man and wife, in the shabby dress of the poor whites of the South, and with a countenance smackedred and stained with tobacco juice, made their appearance at the headquarters of the General commanding the column of the division, and when they succeeded in getting attention, preferred a request to "pass to Washington?"
"What do you want a pass to Washington for?"
"Old man—"I want to see my brother there."
"Who is your brother?"
"Well, I reckon you've heard tell of him. He's Andy Johnson, Vice-President of the United States."
This reply caused some astonishment; but the strong likeness of the old man to the Vice-President, which now became apparent to all, confirmed his statement, and all became satisfied of its truth. In the course of the inquiries it came out that the old man could not read or write.
"No more could Andy, gentlemen," said he, "when we were young men; his wife taught him."
"And why didn't your wife teach you to read?"
"Well, General," said the old lady,
"I couldn't never read nor write myself."

Gen. Sherman's Report.

New York, May 31.
An abstract of Gen. Sherman's report, covering important points, is published. It contains the following dispatch to Gen. Grant:
"Hed's Mr. Dr. of Miss. in the Field, of BALTIMORE, N. C., April 23, 1865." } GENERAL—Since you left me yesterday, I have seen the N. Y. Times of the 24th, containing a budget of military news authenticated by the signature of the Secretary of War, which is grouped in such a way as to give very erroneous impressions. It embraces a copy of the basis of an agreement between Gen.
Johnston, of April 18th, with commentaries which will be time enough to disprove two or three years hence, after the government has experienced a little more in the machinery by which power reaches the scattered people of the vast area of country known as the South.
But, in the meantime, I do think that my rank, if not past services, entitles me, at least to the respect of keeping secret what was known to none but the Cabinet until further inquiry could have been made, instead of giving publicity to documents I never saw, and drawing inferences wide of the truth. I never saw or had furnished me a copy of President Lincoln's dispatch to you of the 5th of March, until after the agreement, nor did Mr. Stanton or any human being ever convey to me its substance or anything like it, but, on the contrary, I had seen Gen. Weitzel's letter to the Legislature, made in Mr. Lincoln's presence, and failed to discover any other notions of a plan of reconstruction, nor any ideal calculated to allay the fears of the people, and that after the destruction of the armies and civil authorities, they would be left without any government at all. We should not drive a people into anarchy, and it is simply impossible for our military power to reach all the resources of their unhappy country. I confess I did not wish to break Gen. Johnston's army into bands of armed men moving about without purpose, and capable only of infinite mischief. You saw on your arrival that I had my army so disposed that his escape was only possible in a disorderly shape, and as you did not choose to direct military operations in this quarter, I infer you were satisfied with the military situation. At all events, the instant I learned what was proper enough—the disapproval of the plan—I made such disposition as to insure the surrender of Johnston's entire army on the same terms you gave Gen. Lee, when you had it surrounded and in your absolute power.

Gen. Sherman's Report.

Mr. Stanton, in stating that my orders to Gen. Stoneman were likely to result in the escape of Mr. Davis to Mexico or Europe, is in great error. Stoneman was not at Salisbury then, but had gone back to Salisbury. Davis was behind him. By turning toward me he approached Davis, and had he joined me I would have had a force greatly exceeding that of his, and other purposes, but even now I don't know that Mr. Stanton wants Mr. Davis caught, and as my official papers, deemed sacred, are happily published to the world, it will be imprudently for me to state what has been done in that respect, as the editor of the Times has. It may be logically and fairly drawn from this singular document, the conclusion that I am insubordinate. I can only deny the imputation.
I have never in my life questioned or disobeyed an order, though many and many a time have I risked my life, health, and reputation in obeying orders or even hints to execute plans and purposes not to my liking. It is not fair to withhold from me the plans and policy, if any there be, and expect me to guess at them as facts, and appearing in quite different lights from different standpoints.
For four years I have been in camp, dealing with soldiers, and I can assure you that the conclusions at which the Cabinet arrived with such singular unanimity differs from mine. I conferred freely with the best officers in this army, and to the points involved in this controversy, and they will learn with pain and amazement that I am deemed insubordinate and wanting in common sense; that I, who in the complications of last year worked day and night, summer and winter, for the cause and the administration, and who have brought an army of 70,000 men, in magnificent style, across a country deemed impassable, and placed it just where it was wanted almost on the day appointed, have brought discredit on our government; I do not wish to boast of this, but I do say that it entitled me to the courtesy of being consulted before publishing to the world a proposition rightfully submitted to higher authorities for adjudication, and then accompanied by other statements which invited the press to let loose upon me. It is true non-combatants, men who sleep in comfort and security, while we watch in the distant lines, are better able to judge than we poor soldiers who rarely see a newspaper, hear from our families, or stop long enough to get our
pay. I envy not the task of reconstruction, and am delighted that the Secretary has relieved me of it. As you did not undertake to assume the management of affairs of the army, I infer on personal inspection your mind arrived at a different conclusion from that of the Secretary of War. I will, therefore, go on and execute your orders to their conclusion, and when done, will, with increase of satisfaction, leave to the civil authorities the execution of the task of which they seem to me so jealous, but as an honest man and soldier I invite them to follow in right paths, for the area of country known as the South.

But, in the meantime, I do think that
documents I never saw, and drawing in-
or had furnished me a copy of President Lincoln's dispatch to you of the 5th of March, until after the agreement, nor did Mr. Stanton or any human
anything like it, but, on the contrary, I
Legislature, made in Mr. Lincoln's presence, and failed to discover any other
tion of the armies and civil authorities,
they would be left without any government at all. We should not drive a
country. I confess I did not wish to
direct military operations in this quarter,
I infer you were satisfied with the mili-
the same terms you gave Gen. Lee,
your absolute power.

Gen. Sherman's Report.

Mr. Stanton, in stating that my or-
result in the escape of Mr. Davis to Mex-
exceeding that of his, and other purposes,
but even now I don't know that Mr. Stan-
official papers, deemed sacred, are hap-
fairly drawn from this singular document, the conclusion that I am insubordinate. I can only deny the imputation.
disobeyed an order, though many and
many a time have I risked my life,
different lights from different stand-
points.
For four years I have been in camp,
dealing with soldiers, and I can assure
Cabinet arrived with such singular unan-
freely with the best officers in this army,
versy, and they will learn with pain and
amazement that I am deemed insubordi-
nate and wanting in common sense; that
worked day and night, summer and
tration, and who have brought an army
of 70,000 men, in magnificent style,
across a country deemed impassable, and
a proposition rightfully submitted to
higher authorities for adjudication, and
which invited the press to let loose upon
me. It is true non-combatants, men
families, or stop long enough to get our
pay. I envy not the task of reconstruc-
ment of affairs of the army, I infer on
Secretary of War. I will, therefore, go
on and execute your orders to their conclusion, and when done, will, with in-
them to follow in right paths, for the

day, I have seen the N. Y. Times of the
news authenticated by the signature of
impressions. It embraces a copy of the basis of an agreement between Gen.
Johnston, of April 18th, with commentaries which will be time enough to
area of country known as the South.

FRIDAY MORNING, JUNE 9, 1865.
OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.
We give place in another column to an official letter from Gen. SHERMAN to Gen. GRANT, speaking in plain terms of the treatment received by him from Secretary STANTON, and also an unofficial letter from Gen. SHERMAN to a personal friend, and solicit for them a careful reading.

Soldiers' Monument.

We call the attention of our readers to the following circular, which has just been issued by the committee appointed at the meeting held in this city a few evenings since. It will be seen that the subject of a fitting monument is to be entered upon in earnest, and almost every family in the county mourns the loss of some relative or friend, a general cooperation may reasonably be expected. It is estimated that nearly or quite five hundred men from the county of Washtenaw have laid down their lives in this war.

A Fine Fleece.

On Saturday morning last we were privileged to examine a fleece of wool just clipped from a Spanish Merino Buck just purchased by D. M. FRYER, of this city, from the flock of Mr. SNOOK, of LIONIA, N. Y. The buck is but a little over a year old, weighed after shearing 100 lbs. and the fleece weighed 16 lbs. The wool was a No. 1, fine long, and not as full of gum as we have some times seen. We are glad to see our growers making such importations.

Boston Wool Market.

There has been a fine consumptive demand for fine and medium fleeces wool during the past week, at prices which do not vary materially from those last quoted. If anything, there is slight tendency to shade off in all but the most desirable grades of Western, which are in small stock and in some cases held above the market. As a general thing, however, with the probability of the new clip opening at low figures, holders of wool are free sellers at current rates. The supply of yearly grades is amply sufficient to carry consumers over to the new crop, and the balance of stocks will probably be bought up in small lots as wanted for use, and at rates regulated principally by gold and general values. There is no prospect of any excitement or active competition among buyers towards the close of the season, as was the case last year, for the reason that the future of the market is more clearly defined and satisfactory to the manufacturing interest.

U. S. 7-30 LOAN.

THIRD SERIES, For bargains in $230,000,000.

By authority of the Secretary of the Treasury, the undersigned, the General Subscription Agent for the sale of United States Securities, offers to the public the third series of Treasury Notes, bearing seven and three-tenths per cent. interest per annum, known as the 730 LOAN.

These notes are issued under date of July 15th, 1865, and are payable three years from that date in currency, or are convertible at the option of the holder into

U. S. 5-20 Six per cent. GOLD-BEARING BONDS.

These Bonds are now a handsome premium, and are exempt, as are all the Government Bonds, from State, County, and Municipal taxation, which adds from one to three per cent. per annum to their value, according to the rate levied upon other property. The interest is payable semi-annually by coupons attached to each note, which may be cut off and sold to any bank or banker.

The Interest at 7-30 per cent. amounts to Table showing interest amounts for One cent per day on a $50 note, Two cents on a $100 note, Ten cents on a $500 note, and 30 cents on a $1000 note.

Notes of all the denominations named will be promptly furnished upon receipt of subscriptions.

The Notes of this Third Series are precisely similar in form and privileges to the Seven-Thirties already sold, except that the Government reserves to itself the option of paying interest in gold coin at 6 per cent. instead of 7-30ths in currency. Subscribers will deduct the interest in currency up to July 15th, at the time when they subscribe.

The delivery of the notes of this third series of the Seven-Thirties will commence on the 1st of June, and will be made promptly and continuously after that date.

The slight change made in the conditions of this THIRD SERIES affects only the matter of interest.—The payment in gold, if made, will be equivalent to the currency interest of the higher rate.

The return to specie payments, in the event of which only will the option to pay interest in Gold be availed of, would so reduce and equalize prices that purchases made with six per cent. in gold would be fully equal to those made with seven and three-tenths per cent. in currency. This is now offered by the Government, and its superior advantages make it the Great Popular Loan of the People.

THE ONLY LOAN IN MARKET

Less than $230,000,000 of the Loan authorized by the last Congress are now on the market. This amount, at the rate at which it is being absorbed, will be subscribed for within two months, when the notes will undoubtedly command a premium, as has uniformly been the case on closing the subscriptions to other Loans.

In order that citizens of every town and section of the country may be afforded facilities for taking the loan, the National Banks, State Banks, and Private Banks throughout the country have generally agreed to receive subscriptions at par. Subscribers will select their own agents, in whom they have confidence, and who only are to be responsible for the delivery of the notes for which they receive orders.

JAY COOKE,

Subscription Agent, Philadelphia.

Subscriptions may be received by the FIRST NATIONAL BANK of Ann Arbor, and FIRST NATIONAL BANK of Ypsilanti.

ATWOOD'S PATENT DRILLING MACHINE, PILE DRIVER, AND HYDRAULIC SAND PUMP.

PRACTICAL TESTS having fully demonstrated the superiority of this machine over all others for purpose of sinking Oil Wells, the undersigned is now prepared to receive orders for the same.

This machinery comprises everything requisite for the boring of oil wells, excepting the STEAM ENGINE AND CAST IRON DRIVING PIPE, which will be furnished, if desired, at a reasonable price, and dispenses with the use of the Derrick Rope, Bull wheel and other cumbersome and expensive fixtures now in use, and is so arranged, being constructed on wheels and portable, that it can be easily removed for the purpose of sinking wells in different localities.

The DERRICK is removed from the well by the Patent Hydraulic process, and does not require the removal of the drill from the boring. This process not only removes all the detritus in from 5 to 10 minutes, but likewise effectually cleans out and opens all the small veins that are so often entirely closed up by the oil process of sand pumping.

WITH THIS MACHINE and a practical engineer, a well can be sunk from 100 to 600 feet within a period of from 15 to 30 days after the soil pipe has been driven.

Arrangements are being made for the construction and delivery of these machines at New York, Norwich, Newburg, N. Y., and Pittsburg, Penn.

It is surprising to how small a space an evergreen can be confined by pruning. We have seen the lordly pine, which naturally aspires to the height of a hundred feet, kept down for half a life time below six feet.

It is hoped that no one will despair of a cure until they have given the Indian Herb Doctor's Medicines a fair trial. During the Decade, the Doctor has given up and pronounced incurable by the most eminent school of physicians, many thousands who were on the verge of the grave, are now living thanks to the Indian Herb Doctor's skill and successful treatment.

The Currant Worm—Save the Bushes. For several years past, the currant bushes have been nearly destroyed by numerous small worms which divert them of their foliage. As the eggs from which these worms spring are deposited on the underside of the leaves, the first indication of their ravages will be observed by many small holes eaten through, and the minute worm may be seen making the holes larger.

Some people who are deeply read in the Bible have a marvellous habit of misapplying its passages. A person remarking in church, received the reply, "Why, sir, the Bible tells us to," "The Bible?" "Yes, sir," "Where?" "Why, the prophet says, 'Cry aloud and spare not; lift up thy voice like a trumpet, which means that we should herald in meeting, if I understand the Bible.'" He replied by quoting Scripture to prove that it was the duty of every person to take notice. "The prophet," said he, says, "Cry ye up! Cry ye up!" and that means that an emetic, does it not?"
