BIRTHDAY GIFTS.

Papa! don't you know it is my birthday? Don't you know I am five years old today?

Papa, do you know it is my birthday? Do you know I am ten years old today?

Twenty years old, and a fine mistake! A part commencement, a glorious dash!

Thirty years old, the blessed day! My father, to-day I am just twenty-five.

Forty years old; and my father lies there over his grave the first time.

Forty-five! and with blessing face My Minnie looks down with a modest grace.

Sixty years old! and thy silver hair, My Clara, to me looks woeful fair.

Seventy and ten sounds rather odd; Withered, but fair, is the hand I hold.

Eighty! the world is changed below; Progress it is, I think, I know!

Ninety and ten sounds rather odd; Withered, but fair, is the hand I hold.

FROM THE CATHOLIC WORLD FOR JANUARY.

There was a fire in our neighborhood last night I passed at the Raymonds.

Mrs. Raymond came into my room with a Rob Roy tartan thrown over her night-gown.

She stood, her stately form was defined by the illumination beyond it.

She stood a moment longer, then turned away from the window.

The ruins of the fire were still smoking when we reached them.

When she stopped, with her head raised, and a color as rich as that of a June rose.

When she smiled upon me, "If I were but sixteen years old, my dear, some night I could tell you a story."

"Every room of that house was full of memories for me," she said dreamily.

"Yes, human love is sweet and satisfying," she said slowly.

"I have found it so. With God, and one true friend, there is no earthly trial which we cannot bear."

FROM PUNCHINELLO.

Closely allied to the study of history is that of the origin of names.

It has never seemed to me that the primary thought of God in creating men and women was that they should be named.

When she smiled upon me, "If I were but sixteen years old, my dear, some night I could tell you a story."

POINTS OF ETIQUETTE.

Don't speak of persons, with whom you are slightly acquainted by their first name.

Irreparably a breach of good manners as well as good manners. Gentle courtesy we owe to all.

Be punctual. It is always annoying to be kept waiting and often a serious detriment to one's business.

Answer a civil question pleasantly and kindly, even if you are in a hurry.

Jokes and dangerous things to be said like gunpowder, with extreme caution.

If possible, always be at the station a few minutes before the train starts.

Getting aboard after the train is in motion is not favorable to bodily safety.

Don't be disturbed if you find the best seats taken. As no one knew you were coming, of course, they did not reserve one.

If you have your ticket in your hand, conductors always insist on seeing it.

When a car is crowded, don't fill the seat with your bundles.

Some time ago Professor Agassiz, in a speech before a Boston assembly, asserted that a fish diet, on account of the quantity of phosphorus contained in it, is especially adapted to nourish the brain... Allow me to call your attention to my PREPARATION OF COMPOUND EXTRACT BUCHU.

Second. Brain workers, as a class, are more active in their work than mechanics and laborers, the thinking power, the tools of trade of brain-workers, being always at hand and seldom idle.

Third. Brain-workers exercise, more or less, all the other organs of the body as well as the brain.

Digesting People with Religion. A great deal of harm, in our judgment is done by presenting the requisition of self-denial which the gospel makes, in a manner not only foreign but downright contradictory to the spirit of true religion.

Without doubt, young people waste money in carriages, and so doing, cheat not only themselves, but also their parents and sometimes their employers. But that extravagance of this sort, if it be such, should be coupled with a little business to privilege occurring only two or three times in a man's life, in hearing the greatest vocalist, perhaps, of the world, is affront the common sense of all but narrow-minded ascetics.

It is a high time that all this rant nonsense on the conflict of religion and the pleasures of art should come to an end, and that those who haven't any tails should cease to deem those foxes atheistic or God-forsaken who happen to have a full complement of nature's gifts.

As to Low Dresses. Most fashions owe their origin to an attempt to give prominence to the strong point or hide the weak point of a king or queen. Thus, powder came into vogue to conceal a queen's gray hair, and large perukes because a king was bald.

From that our French-women have on festive occasions always been accustomed to wear their dresses low. In fact, when you see one who appears to have forgotten the upper part of her dress, it is no proof of indelicacy, but simply an indication of the power of national sentiment. This satisfactorily explains what many ignorant people have taken for impropriety.

The Detroit Free Press relates an incident which occurred on the return of an excursion party from that city. Soon after the boat left Toledo, the steward was approached by an excited individual, who asked him if he was the captain. The steward replied in the negative, at the same time giving his rank.

"Have you the power to put a man out of the cabin?" inquired the stranger. "Well, yes, if he's disorderly, I have," replied the steward.

To Train a Horse to Stand. Take your horse on the barn floor and throw a strap over his back and fasten it to his right foot; lend him time and say "whoa," at the same time pull down the strap, which throws him on three feet and makes him stop suddenly.

A stranger riding about Hartford, recently noticed, in passing over College Hill, the fine bronze statue of the late Bishop Brownell, and inquired of the driver, "Who is that?" "I dunno," was the reply.
