THE LATE ORANGE RIOTS.
Official Proclamations.
 PROCLAMATION OF SUPERINTENDENT KELSO.
 OFFICE OF SUPERINTENDENT OF POLICE OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK,
 No. 100, New York, July 18, 1871.
 GENERAL ORDER No. 57.
 Captain—Precinct.

The Superintendent has been applied to by the Grand Master of the Orange Lodges in the United States to give police support to a celebration by a procession through the principal streets and avenues of the City of New York, on the 12th instant, in honor of the battle of the Boyne, and the surrender which was the consequence.

These several commemorative victories on the soil of Ireland by one English king over another one, nearly two centuries ago, unendured and followed from which have descended from generation to generation with increasing acrimony, and large bodies of citizens participating in these feelings form parts of our community.

The Superintendent has never legally advised that he should not aid any street celebrations that involve feuds and animosities belonging solely to the history of other countries than our own, and which experience has proved to endanger the public peace at home and abroad.

The proposed celebration, as is obvious to every one, belongs to the last named class. Last year, upon the same calendar day, an unexpected public celebration of the foreign event just named was accompanied in the streets with inexcusable and deplorable affrays, by which four citizens lost their lives, despite the interference of the police.

This violence was apparently unprovoked, and resulted from the fact that the brawling and riotous character of the former procession has been announced much in advance, and unusual arrangements have been made to swell the number of participants by accessions from other parts of this State and from other States.

It is given out that armed preparations for defence have been made by the members of the parading lodges. Indeed, the announced procession appears to have been especially organized to show the magnitude of any preceding one, and is emphasized with announcements that apparently evince a determination to resent, if not to avenge, the events which attended last year's celebration, and some of its leaders have stated to the Superintendent that they considered a collision inevitable. If this needless celebration should provoke a general disturbance it would furnish the opportunity which has been sought for by the lawless and dangerous classes of the community to participate in it, and to carry consequences so far as to endanger the safety of persons and property.

Recent disturbances have been announced from Great Britain, in which descriptions as incident to similar public demonstrations by the Orange institutions in that country. And upon the closest survey the Superintendent is convinced that if the proposed procession forms or moves with its banners and traditional music, and many unthinking, rash and hot-headed spectators who are not in sympathy with the foreign feuds which the procession is intended to glorify, then the whole police force (and, in fact, the whole military force of the city) might be required to protect the procession, and large sections of the city most needing watching would be left unguarded.

If any procession or occupation of the streets by marching troops, or by a band of light, or could legally demand protection, then it should, at all hazards, receive an escort and guard; because the authorities never should allow that which is a matter of right to the police to be done lawlessly or unbecomingly. But legal decisions have settled that occupation of the street by processions is a mere matter of usage or toleration, and is always subject to police regulation and supervision. The surrender of the streets to such a procession, organized by men necessarily interfering with the individual rights of her citizens, and those thus engaged are, in the view of the Superintendent, as a trespasser. The toleration of processions by citizens and authorities is perhaps due to the fact that street meetings and parades always represent some sentiment or occasion not at all calculated to provoke hot blood. In every such case, it is only a discretionary permission, the inconvenience of the few ought to be surrendered to the widest security for the property and person of the greatest number of citizens. And at all times the police should prevent occasions for disorder, and should not regulate or suppress it. It is very clear that if any individual should undertake by himself to produce an occasion of irritation and excitement to others in the community, he cannot be held liable in an act, entitled to police protection. And surely what may not be done by one individual ought not to be attempted by the organized many, when the aggravation would be so much the greater.

Therefore you are ordered in conformity to the private directions herewith promulgated, and which relate merely to details of discipline and arrangements for police action not expedient to be publicly announced to the community, to prevent the progression of the public street procession for the 12th inst., alluded to, and of all processions under pretense of target purposes. You will also on that day impartially keep the streets cleared from groups and assemblages of over classes of citizens, whether sympathizing with or against the procession, or whether they are lawlessly disposed or otherwise. You will also promptly arrest all persons of any description, who, in any way, by any means, use threatening or disorderly language, inciting to breach of the peace, in contempt of the State statutes upon that subject.

JAMES J. KELSO,
 Superintendent.

PROCLAMATION OF GOV. RANDOLPH.
 The Constitution of the State of New Jersey enumerates among other "rights" "privileges," that the people have a right to freely assemble together. It is denied the enjoyment of any civil right, merely on account of his religious principles. It also makes the Governor of the State "commander in chief of the militia forces of this State," and under his authority of office makes it his duty "to promote the peace and prosperity and maintain the rights of the State."

It having come to my knowledge that a body of inhabitants of this State, in conformity to a custom among them, and in consonance with the custom of other bodies or societies of inhabitants of this State, propose to celebrate what to them is deemed an anniversary day, and it having come to my knowledge that the attachment to this contemplated celebration may possibly take place, by reason of which a serious disturbance of the peace of the commonwealth would probably ensue.

Now, therefore, I, Theodore F. Randolph, Governor of the State of New Jersey, do hereby proclaim that both the letter and the spirit of the Constitution of our State of New Jersey, as well as the long established custom of our people, do permit and protect all peaceful gatherings of the inhabitants of this State, irrespective of religious or political creeds, make it the lawful right of any body of peaceful citizens to assemble together, and that right cannot be abridged or interfered with by any unauthorized body of men, of any nationality, creed, or religion, whatever the real or supposed provocation may seem to be.

And I do, therefore, enjoin upon all good, law-abiding and peaceful citizens of our State of New Jersey to assist in every way in preserving the peace, good order and dignity of the same, not only by abstention from provocation, but by acts of toleration, forbearance and true manliness.

And I do hereby warn all persons from other States who may seek, and by persuasion, to interfere with the peaceful assembling of inhabitants of this State,

THE EDITOR "ON THE FLY."
 Bay City, July 18th, 1871.

DEAR ARGUS READER:

Shaking off office duties for a few days, the editor left "fair Ann Arbor" on the 17th by the 10:25 express train for this city on the Bay. An hour-and-a-half's ride through fields of growing corn and waving grain and grain in the shock and stack brought him to the "Central City," where he made a tedious stay of 31-2 hours, and then another and now departed. Setting well away from Jackson we noticed that the harvest was not as far advanced, but on either side reapers and makers and drawers and stackers were busy, and the job was evidently soon to be done, and a large and excellent crop to ensue. While we noted this, on our way, we met a large number of Califormians, who were in the city for the iron horse past Mason and Lansing, and who were collecting money to defray the expenses of the coming trial of her husband at Hastings.

Gov. Randolph Serenaded.
 MIDDLETOWN, N. J., July 15.
 The neighbors of Gov. Randolph, with out distinction of party, serenaded him last evening, when the Governor responded as follows:
 "I have every reason to be grateful when my public acts seem to have the hearty approval of my neighbors and friends, native and foreign, as to birth, Republicans and Democrats as to politics, Protestant and Catholics as to religion. The truth is, and recent events have already demonstrated it, that whatever difference we may have as to our political or religious faith, or whatever accident of birth may have made us native or foreign, we are all, if we are as we should be, intensely American, proud of the title and jealous of any act by any nation that may tarnish the honor or strike down the privileges of our common country. As Jurymen, with great historic associations and memories, we should be reverent to all the memories of our country and did not we attempt at any cost to transmit our rights and privileges untainted and unimpaired. Whilst during the recent troubles complete military preparation was made to promptly and efficiently sustain the civil power in case of need, and whilst military power would have certainly been exercised to have protected at any cost the rights of the humblest citizen, let me say to you that know me best, that my greatest satisfaction and night is found in the fact that no serious use of military force was found necessary. So great was found to be the noble forbearance, patience and Christian toleration of all parties, and the noble political difference we may have as to our political creeds, that military force was not, at that occasion, as I trust it ever may be, in full subordination to civil power, assisting, not controlling it, sustaining liberty by upholding the laws."

Horse Knowledge.
It is stated by H. von Weir, that between 1750 and 1790 a Scotch lawyer made a journey to London. At that period such journeys were usually performed with horses when the traveler might buy a horse and sell him at the end of his journey.

The lawyer in question had sold the horse on which he had ridden to London as soon as he had reached that place. When the time for his return arrived he rode to Smithfield, then a horse market, to purchase a hackney for his journey. On finding that the hackney he had bought waited till toward dusk, when a handsome animal was offered, but at so low a price, considering his appearance, that he immediately suspected there was some secret hidden or dishonest in the bargain.

The next morning, still better pleased with the appearance of his horse, he again commenced his journey. The horse had excellent paces, and the lawyer, riding the first few miles on a well-frequented road, and observing that his horse was admired by nearly all who met him, he waited till toward dusk, when a handsome animal was offered, but at so low a price, considering his appearance, that he immediately suspected there was some secret hidden or dishonest in the bargain.

By this time he had reached Finchley Common, then a noted resort for high-society, and on going to a public house in a hollow which lay between two slight rises, he met a clerical-looking gentleman driving to town in a one-horse chaise. The road was solitary, not a creature in sight, when the horse astonished his rider by a sudden start, and jumping over the chaise, and so happened it, proving at once that the profession of his former master had been, as well as his own complicity in the highway robbery.

The lawyer spurred up his horse, and with many apologies to the terrified clergyman, he drove on. The horse, however, in a while, in another solitary part of the road, and again the horse prepared, by the same extraordinary maneuver, to bring it to a stand. The different occurrences, however, he considered as a blundering, and leveled from the coach window, with denunciation of death and destruction against the luckless rider, who was now in his turn more terrified than the unresisting clergyman.

So it went through the day. Wherever an opportunity of robbing occurred, the horse offered it to his master, and did the best in his power to aid him. In fact, after his life had been repeatedly endangered by the antics of his horse, and his steed naturally gave rise to, and his liberty threatened by the peace officers, who were about to take him up as a notorious highwayman, to whom, of a truth, the horse had formerly belonged, the lawyer was obliged to part with the horse for a trifle, and to purchase one in his stead which, though far less beautiful, had not been trained to those criminal habits in which the other had become a perfect adept.

Prevention is better than cure. Colic may be prevented by care in feeding. When succulent green fodder is used, such as the blades and tops of the green corn, it is essential to combine it with the production of grain in the stomach and intestines from the fermentation of the food, or by permitting the horse to drink too freely of cold water when tired and exhausted by work. Feed sparingly of green food, and mix it with hay or straw, and give little at a time, and never either immediately before or after feed. If the horse has been permitted to become very thirsty, give no more than half a pailful of water, letting him drink it gradually between the drinks, until he is satisfied. If notwithstanding all care he is troubled still with colic, give him two ozs. sweet spirits of nitre and one oz. tincture of opium in a half pint of water. If necessary repeat in half an hour, adding one oz. tincture of aloes. Any spirituous medicine should be carefully administered. If no inflammation be present a pint of run with half an ounce of purgative might afford relief.—American Agriculturist.

PLANTING TREES BY RAILWAY TRACKS.
The manager of the Chicago and North-Western, says the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railroad last spring commenced treplanting on a considerable scale, 11,000 chestnuts and 10,000 European larches having been planted along its line between Chicago and Toledo, and thence through the country where the forest has been mostly cleared away and the supply of timber is scantier. The trees were of one year's growth, and were planted on each side of the track, fifty feet apart, the tree on one side to be planted by the side of the space between two trees on the other. For each tree a hole was prepared two and a half to three feet in diameter the top soil thrown to the bottom. The trees were carefully set out, and each a stake provided for each. The trees were mostly thoroughly done, with intention that every tree might live, and the cost including the time of the laborers, and the cost belonging to the regular force of the road was estimated at $1.50 per tree. In addition to their ordinary duties, was an average of eight cents per tree, excluding the labor of the company's ordinary employes the cost was only four cents per tree.

The results of these experiments will be watched with great interest. There is hardly room to doubt that railroad companies, especially in treeless regions, will very easily increase the value of their property by such measures.
