THE BLESSINGS OF TO-DAY. Strange, we never prize the music
Till the sweet-voiced birds have flown;
Strange, that we should slight the violets
Till the lovely flowers are gone;
Strange, that summer skies and sunshine
Never seem one half so fair
As when winter's snowy pinions
Shake the white down in the air.

Lips from which the seal of silence
None but tood our roll away,
Never blossomed in such beauty
As adorns the mouth, to-day,
And sweet words that freight our memory
With their beautiful perfume,

Come to us in sweeter accents Through the portals of the tomb. Let us gather up the sunbeams

Accordingly Pompey Howard, with the carpet-bagger's guiding fingers on his uncertain nose, had run with his cucumber legs for the position of representative from Alligatorville, and, thanks to the votes of other men and brethren just as erdemain who counted those votes, had ome out ahead of all competitors. The first impulse of the new-fledged legislator was to shake hands with half a undred or so of ragged adherents, and ais next to start for his cabin, four miles up the spongy and reedy banks of Alliga tor Creek, with a view to supper. In the outskirts of the crowd of electors he met his father, commonly known for the last sixty years or so as Uncle Toby, a whiteheaded, shrunken, twisted, and wonderfully wrinkled little man and brother, who barely kept himself from dropping upon all fours by holding on with both hands to a long stick, and who consequently resembled the crang-outang which one discovers in unbelievable il-

"You manufacturers of public opinion, you makers of Presidents, who assume to control all mankind, what mischief are you now hatching?" He spoke in a loud tone and was heard all over the room:

General Scott came up at the moment, and Mr. Clay turned apon him, accosting him in a sneering and insulting tone: "And here is the redoubtable General The General Order Business at New York.

"You are rotten all over," was the reply.
Mr. Mangum led Mr. Clay from the room, and there the affair ended for the time. Some correspondence ensued, and serious consequences were apprehended. But friends interposed, and Mr. Clay. who was capable of magnanimous concession when conscious of being in the wrong, made a satisfactory apology.-Galaxy for March.

A Learned Counsel.
