Sensible Workmen in Italy
The workmen of Italy appear to possess a larger stock of moderation and good sense than their fellow laborers in many other countries.

The Roman correspondents of the Independent
The Roman correspondents of the Independent have been making some abortive attempts to induce the Roman workmen to turn out.

Horse Stable Floors
A correspondent of the Rural New Yorker who has no patient to offer, but who protests against bare floors of any construction for any animal, says:

It is true a dieling horse will very soon get a horse rolling himself upon his back against the partition, but by laying straw all day and night with the outside of his show raised just a little, and try a race the next day with an equal, and his sleep in a good bed. I have known several good, very good, horses, that would not stand upon a bare floor, as they would completely knock the bladder in a month, very much to their injury.
