VOLUME XXX.

AFTER THE HOLIDAYS.

The gay Christmas-time it is ended,
The Holiday course has been run,
And, white no offense is intended
To any particular oue,
I wish to make one observation,
And then, like the season, I'm done.

To the ancient and hon'rable oustom

Of giving gifts once in the year— Provided, of course, it don't bust 'em— All people should strive to adhere; And if they can give but a trifle, Give that with a slice of good-cheer!

Yet, while we would show our expression of love or esteem for a friend, A proper amount of discretion. In choosing the token might tend. To add to the pleasure of getting. The little or much we expend.

It chanced this particular season
I needed some shippers right bad,
And hinted the same for that reason
On every occasion I had:
And now I am of the conviction
I must at the time have been mad!

What number my boot was; and when
I told her I thought I aspired
To attitudes close upon ten,
She looked sympathizingly at me
And said, "Is it possible, Ben?"

And the very next day Arabella Propounded the query likewise— And Flora and Dora and Elia All wanted to find out my "size;" And the evening I called on Alida She measured my foot with her eyes!

Six pairs of slippers! Great heavens!
Wrought with a skill superfine—
Ranging from eights to elevens—
Rich and unique in design;
And a dozen they made all together,
And all of the dozen were mine!

I tried to look pleased and contented—
For that was the best I could do;
I took 'em all up and commented
On the beauties presented to view,
And I said they were "just what I wanted!"
And "twelve is better than two!"

But I locked three pairs in my closet, And one I have lent to St. Clair, And ene—I wonder whose was it? I gave to the Charity Fair! And the last—well, those are elevens, And those are the ones I shall wear!

And while I'm extending my "flippers"
In gratitude deep and sincere,
I wish to remark that twelve slippers
Are rather too many to steer;
And I take this occasion for stating
That I shan't expect any next year.

The superintendent looked at his rate to the proportion of paupers and criminals in the county is alarmingly great.

The attention of the doctor was attracted to certain names which everywhere appeared in the criminal and poor-house records of the county, and he was led to follow up the traces of certain families. These again seemed to be connected, and he was induced to search still further the genealogies of these families. The results will remain as permanent and most startling facts

In cities, such families become broken up, and their members are scattered everywhere. In villages, though their lines of descent may be followed, yet the retributive laws of Providence usually carry the effects of crime only 'to the third or fourth generation and then the race comes to an end through physical and moral degenera-tion, the final members being comparatively idiots, imbeciles, lunatic, and, in some countries, cretins. this happened, however, in county, that the physical vigor of the particular family traced, preserved some of its members for their evil destiny, and enabled the investigator to trace them during six generations of wickedness and misery. Some seventy years ago a young girl named "Mar-garet" was left adrift in one of these villages-it does not appear whether through the crime or misfortune of others. There was no almshouse in the place; but she was a subject of outdoor relief, probably receiving occa-sionally food and clothing from the officials, but never educated, and never kindly sheltered in a home. She became the mother of a long race of criminals and paupers, and her progeny has cursed the county ever since. The county records show 200 of her descendants who have been criminals. In one there were twenty children; of these, three died in infancy, and seventeen survived to maturity. Of the seven-teen, nine served in State prisons for high crimes an aggregate term of fitty years, while the others were frequent inmates of jails, penitentiaries and

King Kalakaua in New York. A New York corresdondent of the De-

troit Free Press writes:

King Kalakaua has left us, and very glad indeed he ought to be that he got away with his life. New York was killing him with kindness. I doubt if any distinguished foreigner was ever before so feted and feasted in hospital Gotham as the slightly colored gentleman with the dry goods name was during his so-journ of one week, That he stood it all so well is a marvel I do not pretend to understand. From the time he stepped from the train in Jersey City, till his departure for New England, the unfortunate man had hardly an hour that he could call his own. It was a breakfast here, and a dinner there, and a reception somewhere else, an evening at this place of amusement, that one or the other one, a visit to some printing house, jewelry store, stable, fire company or dry goods establishment, all the time he was with us, with aldermen at his heels ing he followed him from hotel to hotel in every instance, and the only wonder is that he held out half so well, especial. ly against the aldermen. They had never seen a real King before, and the way they stuck to his Hawaiian Majes ty showed how thoroughly they appreciated royal companionship. I have heard it hinted that their principal object was to get plenty of free drinks, but these they could have got without taking around a king for credit. He saw pretty much everything that was worth seeing, including the "Black Crook," which interested him tremend-ously. Now that he has left us we are beginning to sober down a little. The intoxication is passing off, and the peo-ple are saying to one another, "Well, what a set of fools we are, anyhow." Rather. If Gen. Washington came back among us I wonder if we could or would make more of him than has been made of the gentleman from Hawaii? Alas! State. this republican simplicity of ours is not, I fear, so simple as it seems.

A Resurrected Fortune.

Dubuque Herald, Dec. 25th. Some time ago a well-known miner in this vicinity, who has a very shaky idea of the security of the banking system, believing more faithfully in the old-fashioned injunction, "when you get a good thing keep it," pulled up stakes and set off for a prolonged absence on foreign shores. Before leaving, however, he dug a hole in a sequestered part of his land and there deposited the hoarded gains of many a year's hard toil, to the amount of $5,000 or $6,000 in gold, and went his way meditating on the frailty of all banks except clay banks, as the receptacles of golden treasures. In the long absence of our friend the premises were occupi-ed by his son, who continued to make various changes and improvements thereon, until finally many old land-marks were obliterated, and the burial place of the hidden treasure was dese-gypsum in the locality, which is at a place of the hidden treasure was descrated by being overtrodden by a prolific family of pigs, comfortably domiciled above it. The old gentleman returned to his native hearth, and went in searth of his buried gold. Every trace by which he had hoped to locate it had disappeared, all attempts at resurrection seemed hopeless, and the search was finally abandoned, when it was found that the maternal swine, in her burrowings and rootings, had unearthed several $20 gold pieces of the golden coin. She had found the open sesame, and the long hidden treasure was revealed intact.

The other artists are: Mr. Rudolphsen, baritone; Mr. Auguste Sauret, pianist, both of whom were here last year; and Miss Clara Dorea, soprano. A rich entertainment is promised.

- A few days ago, a clergyman of this city, neeting a member of his flock from the country, undertook to negotiate with him for some wood. A certain price was asked, which the Reverend gentleman thought was too high, when he was informed that if he could do any better it was his privilege to do so. It was argued that, as the farmer was a member of his church, and as he had to pay a certain amount of its expenses, he would not be the loser, if he sold his wood less than the market price, for as the running expenses of the church were increased, he would have all the more to pay. When the gentleman saw the point, a bargain was soon made.

Gerrit Smith, which event occurred at in the city of New York. His death was America, and was born in Utica, N. Y. in March. 1797. He graduated at Hamilton College in 1818. Inheriting from his father vast wealth, mainly in landed property, he was freed from the neces ity of entering upon any business pur Though he never studied law regularly quently participated in many important tria's. At an early age he manifested great interest in benevolent and edu-cational enterprises, and he was most widely known as a philanthropist. He was for years prominently identified with the anti-slavery movement, and his gifts in aid of that cause were numerous and liberal. From 1825 to 1835 he was connected with the American Colonization Society, and gave liberally of his means to further its objects. At the latter date, however, he withdrew from that society, and devoted his time more fully to the interest of the Anti-slavery Society. Mr. Smith never held but one public office. He was elected to Congress in 1852, but resigned his seat at being comparatively few outside orders, and but little shipping demand. The receipts for the tree shipping demand.
