ANN ARBOR, MICHIGAN, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1875.

NUMBER 1557.

THE VACATION.

BY ELIZABETH W. DENISON, A wonderful October day, An atmosphere of gold and azure, Made ready, one might dare to say, For perfect rest and purest pleasure.

Some children, overworn with care, Poor, tired children, grown so weary With many things to do and bear, They almost thought the world was dreary. "Shall we go out to play?" they said, And then spake softly to each other,

As if their hearts were comforted:
"O let us go and see our mother!"

"Come home," she cries, "I long for you, With hands so full of gift and blessing, That all about my path I strew What kings are poor in not possessing,"

And when, with swift and eager feet,
These grown-up children sought and found her,
She met them with a welcome sweet,
And blessed them as they gathered round her.

Through lovely, lonely woodland ways She led them to her fields Elysian; Around them slept the golden hare, Above them shone the mount of Vision.

"It is enough," the children said,
"Our hearts with thanks are overflowing;
Can heaven be interpreted?
The rest is surely past our knowing." "Come up," the mother answered them, And led the way through misty splendor; They almost touched the garment's hem, A spell was on them deep and tender.

Then upward still, away, away,
With strange new strength no toil could weary,
Until they heard the mother say,
"Beheld your world that was so dreary,"

The utmost mountain height was gained, Beyond the realm of outward beauty Some higher law eternal reigned, As grand as Truth, severe as Duty,

But if the mother showed them there The secrets of her inner glory, If earth, like Paradise, grew fair, They never told the wondrous story.

They went their way with their hearts affame, And only by their nobler living We knew the benediction came, And guessed the joy of their Thanksgiving.

MINNIE'S ALLOWANCE.

A Thanksgiving Story. "Now you just say turkey again, Min-nie Rolf, and I'll spank you." So spoke Mrs. Rolf to her eldest daughter, aged about 9 years—not that Mrs. Rolf would have spanked her daughter; she never had done such a thing-never during the nine long winters and sum-mers through which Minnie had marched or toddled her stage on the journey of life; but Mrs. Rolf was a widow, and poor and worried. She had four children, aged respectively 9 years, 5 years, 4 years and 2 years; Minnie, a girl; Bimmie, a boy; Carrie, a girl; and Bob,

They were all talking turkey, conjurup visions of imaginary gobblers with preternaturally extensive develop-ment of white meat and unlimited capacity for dressing, whilst Bimmie, the beat a triumphal gastronomic march with a pair of succulent phantom

But alas! it was all a figment of the magination: there was no material basis of bird for all their oleaginous creations; there was no turkey—and no prospect of turkey-for the widow was not only poor, but very poor—ay, even, as a pro-fane butcher in the neighboring village had said, deucedly poor. It was as much as she could do to keep the wolf from It is hard work with a thread and needle to keep away that frizzly, grizzly monster, with his great sharp teeth, who is ever waiting and watching to pounce on little children's stomachs, and gnaw them and tear them, and then lick all the color off their cheeks and the luster out Yes, it is sad, sad work, and poor Mrs.

Rolf found that wild beast of a wolf often too much for herself and her needle, and he would get many a snap at the little ones, which made her poor heart

"Turkey, turkey, turkey!" exclaimed the angry dame. "You may feel thank-ful if you have dry bread to eat to-morrow, and go down on your bended knees if there is a little butter to it. How on EVERYBODY SAYS THAT earth am I to buy turkey? If I get that work done—and it's a great IF, I tell you—it's ten chances to one whether the folks will pay me right away when I take it home—ten chances to one; and, if they do—another big IF—there won't be igh to buy a turkey, let alone bread > and butter, and potatoes, and tea and

> Here the widow broke down and commenced sobbing.

"But we was only talking, ma," said Minnie, "Twas only fun; we don't want no turkey. Do we, Bimmie?" "No! answered Bimmie, promptly, as though he would fell to the earth any gladiator who should dare to question the statement; and he crept up to the chair where his mother was seated, and, trying to put his little right arm round her shoulders, said, "Don't cry mother; I don't think turkey mounts to much anyhow." He spoke in that peculiar dialect belonging to persons who live on the borders of the state of infancy, substituting t for c, and z for th. But this we will not imitate. "Don't cry, mother—there's a dear, good mother;" and, as if to help her along and take the job off her hands, as it were, he started crying himself, at the same time patting that portion of her face which was not buried portion of her face which was not buried in her handkerchief with his little hand.

All the children soon collected round the mother, unanimously repudiating a turkey, even scouting, scorning and reviling it.

"Well, well!" exclaimed the widow, rising from her seat, and squaring her shoulders, as if bracing herself for another bout with the wolf, "this will never do, in no shape, way or manner. It's time for you, Bimmie and Carrie, to be starting for school; so put on your thing, and I'll get your lunch ready to take along with you."

So Bimmie got into his absurd little cowhide boots and the ridiculous little concretion of patches which did duty as his overcoat, whilst Carrie went through a similar process with equally preposterous garments adapted to her sex, and they toddled off with their school-books ture, along the outskirt of Hope's wood, they toddled off with their school-books and a varnished tin imposture resembling a book, labeled the "History of the Sand-wich Islands," and called a lunch-box, containing several slices of bread, deli-

And when all this was over, they had the prospect of walking home and being waylaid by Farmer Fleshwick, with his big teeth and big bulldog, ready to do things from which the imagination staggered back appalled. Indeed, when school was over, and their punishment was over, and the rest of the children had gone home to lars, and the mince-pies ready for the oven, they held a dismal little council of war over their best line of march to that home which knew no turkey, but where there was a soft mother's bosom on which to lay their troubled little heads and weep away their tiny tears. To go back by the road was a course fraught with too much danger. Uncle Ira was certain to be there on the watch. How about cross lots? There lay the whole world open before them; to be sure, the world is chiefly made up of cross lots; but, then, there are often high fences and hedges, and brambles and bogs and streams, to be met with in cross lots; and there seemed to be an from the heart of Africa. They were dated, respectively, April 12 and 14, and were sent from Uagalla, in Unganda, the capital of the country ruled by King Mtesa. They complete the subject dealt with in the letters received in October.

He had several conflicts with the treacherous slavecamp at Msavura April 12, where he was received with great ceremony and cordiality by the King. In Stanley's honor the King directed extraordinary festivities and displays. One feature of the display was a naval review on the lake, of 84 canoes, manned by 2,500 men. On the second day, in addition to the naval throng of spectators. Among the on-lookers were the 300 wives of the King. On the third day there was bird-shooting and target practice by 3,000 troops. The Speakership.

A Washington correspondent telegraphs to a Western newspaper: "Mr. Weight, Chairman of the Democratic State Central Commission, of Pennsylvania, and member of the Forty-fourth Congress, writes to this city that he is for Sam Randall for Speaker, each and every time. Also, that the seventeen Democratic votes of the Pennsylvania delegation are pledged solid for Randall. The fact of his own State delegation backing Randall so strongly will give him a good footing in the House; but he will have to yield to Kerr, who is growin this selection, they must have a man above reproach, and whose record is clear. Kerr is the only available candidate who fills this demand."

Postmasters' Salaries. The increase in the amount of salaries paid to Postmasters during the last fiscal year, says a Washington correspondent, is $931,000, or 15 per centum of the entire amount paid. This increase is attributed to the law which provides that the salaries of Postmasters shall be regulated according to the amount of bus-ness transacted. The bad effects of this law have been observed in the cases where practically fraudulent sales of where practically fraudulent sales of stamps have been made in order to increase salaries. While this law has increased Postmasters' salaries about 15 per centum, it has added only about 13-100 of 1 per centum to the revenue. The estimates for Postmasters' salaries

The Farmer's "Hands."

Some pure and perfect summer morn I meet a farmer plowing corn. The sun is shining like a king, Alive and glad is everything.

Sweet music in the robin's mouth,
A soft wind singing from the South
Persuades the willing werld to grow,
From crown of oak to apple-blow.
The farmer halting by the way,
I ask, "Who works for you to-day?"
"I am alone," the man's reply,
And wondering looks, when I deny
And say, "Not so, That royal sun
Is nothing but your hired man,
He comes a hundred million miles
Before your wife careens a pan,
To coax your corn with golden smiles,
And hang the silken tassels on,
And kiss the peach's cheek of down—
The farmer never toils alone.
The clouds, his angels hovering over,
Rain wine for grapes and buds for clover,
And shadding, shining, coming, going,
Weave counterpanes for wheat by snowing.
The robins serve him for their board,
And cat a cherry now and then.
What is a ruby from the hoard?
They are the sinless friends of men,
For saving yours they take their own,
Foes of our foes. Pray, drop that stone,
And leave the red-breast bird alone?"

THIS is what the Detroit Evening News says about one of its exchanges, and just because it has been worsted in a financial discussion: "The Lansing Republican is the smartest paper in Michigan. It says so itself." Just to help along the "joke" we can furnish evidence that it (the Republican) is the most powerful paper in Michigan. The great rebellion failed to dissolve the Union, but this is the way our Lansing and adopted. cotemporary did it in a single line, and with a single (misplaced) letter: "The internal revenue of the Untied States." Now let the News be satisfied, and proceed with its wholesale stealings.

AND now the Paw Paw Courier sees the "coming man" in ex-Senator Chandler, now Secretary of the Interior, and trots him out as the Republican candidate. And to prove that the Courier man is not the only political fool in the State, the Allegan Journal says: "A better selection than this could not possibly be made by the Republican National Convention. Why shouldn't Michigan have a President. It was in the beautiful Peninsular State that the Republican party was founded." Such reasoning conclusively proves that Chandler ought to be President. His imagination must have suddenly run to and five cents on a certain bill preseed. It, perhaps, is useless to suggest viously presented and allowed: to him a forgotten proverb, "Fact is Jortin Forbes stranger than fiction," as it evidently is not one of those which guide his pen; and equally as useless to point to the large Republican gains at Albany, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo, and at every other point where the corruptionists and same, which, on motion of Mr. Leitch canal thieves "plied their vocation." was accepted and placed on file. It is an acknowledged fact that "cor ruptionists of every hue "struck hands with the Republicans and opposed the Democratic State ticket, and if our cotemporary can't "imagine" the reason it would be a waste of time to attempt to sow the seed of truth on such a desert waste. Brains and perceptive powers are necessary to either "imagine" or reason, and no subsoiling of an empty cranium will compensate for the fully $5,000,000.

Suffering and Starvation. The story of the sufferings of Antonio Maximo, the only surviver of the crew of the bark Toronto, recently wrecked in the West Indies, is almost too terrible for belief. Maximo was picked up by the brig Centaur and brought to New York. He states that the Toronto was a bark which sailed from Glasgow, Scotland, about four months ago, with a cargo of coal. There were four-teen men on board. The name of the first mate was Smith. This is the only name Maximo could remember. From Glasgow they sailed to Madeira, the voyage taking a month and a half. From Madeira the sailed to Madeira the sailed deira they proceeded to Navassa, an island in the West Indies, where they took on board a cargo. Soon after leaving Navassa, a severe storm arose, and they buoyed to anchor. At about 11 Ward, now deceased, when he lived in Omaha. This is given on the authority of the busy Bee of that town, which sets forth the fact that Stanley once offered the offered that the foremast broke off quite close to the deck. Captain was then called and ordered a boat to be lowered. There were three boats, but one was sufficient to carry all the crew. The sea was running high at the time, and the storm raged furiously. One of the boats was put out and the Captain and crew all got into it. It was, however, immediately filled with water, and seven of the men were washed into the sea, and the violence of the waves soon carried the boat out of the sight of them. There were then seven men Maximo could give no intelligent account of how they fared in the boat; but, as far as could be ascertained, they drifted for days without food and without water. Water was obtained by spreading a sail during rains and heavy dews at night. The boat, which is on the Centaur, shows where it has been scratched by the men, as one of the sailors on board suggested, for the purpose of eating the dirt that clung to the sides. The sufferings of the men must have been intense. Maximo describes the men as walking about looking out at the sea and sky. Some, driven to desperation by the sufferings they en-dured, jumped into the sea. Some lay on their backs, with their longing faces turned to Heaven, and so died. One by one they threw themselves into the sea, or were thrown by their companions, until all had been lost but himself. From this man's account, it is clear that the men lost their reason. He ate seaweed to sustain life. He caught a sea bird occasionally and sometimes a fish, but here his reason fact that this sum is mainly collected seems to have wandered. He says he a big wash-basin filled with a white and horribly sour substance called "skea," and each took alternate dips at it with horn spoons. Mr. Gladstone did not seem to relish it much, and held back till he saw how rapidly it was disappearing on the other side, when he went in and did manfully.

During the year there was issued 107,-616,000, of the value of $1,076,160. In the month of October last there were issued of the new cards, 20,138,000, which is one-fifth of the entire amount sold during the fiscal year. The estimate of the number necessary for the next fiscal year is 154,967,000. The number of public or ordinary postal stamps issued to Postmasters during the fiscal year was 682,342,770, of a value of $18,-271,479. The value of postage and periodical stamps was $815,902. The number of official stamps issued to the executive departments was 18,495,900 of a value of $834,970. The total number of stamps of all kinds issued was 973,275,-025, of a value of $25,477,511. O these 106,200 were returned under The number of letter received from foreign countries wa 11,800,000, of which 219,100 were returned undelivered. These figure show the advantage which this country will derive from the new postal treaty of Berne. That treaty provides that each country shall retain the postage on al letters mailed in its own territory, and that no account shall be kept between the countries. The excess of letter mailed from this country over the num ber received from foreign countries nearly 1,000,000. The net gain to th United States from the treaty, therefore presuming all letters to be only single weight, is 5 cents on 1,000,000 letters $50,000. The result of the operations of the new law, which requires prepaymen of newspaper postage, presents a curiou paradox. While the aggregate receipt from this source have not been as larg as they were under the old system, the net gain to the government is greater. The Postoffice Department estimate that the new law would yield $1,500,00 annually. This estimate was based upo the returns from 55 leading offices for uniform period. But the Postmaster either erred or did not make truthful re turns, for the receipts from this source

Timber of suitable size and quantity for the construction of flumes and sluices is abundant. The water supply is in most localities ample, and the fall of the streams sufficiently great to enable the water to be readily carried above the level of even the more elevated bars and deposited gravel.

While as yet there have been discovered in the Blacks Hills no deposits of gravel sufficiently rich in gold to be profitably worked in the primitive manner with pan or rocker, yet there are many bars in the Harney's Peak field, especially upon Spring Creek, the forks of Castle and Rapid Creeks, and the vallevs of these mountain streams, which, when skillfully worked by gangs of miners with sluices, will yield a good return for the labor employed and the moderate capital required to be invested. But little could be done in a single season in prospecting the numerous segregated quartz But little could be done in a single season in prospecting the numerous segregated quartz veins of this region, some of which undoubtedly contain gold. I have procured abundant samples by testing their value by assay.

The Bear Lodge gold field situated in the extreme northwestern portion of the hills, is wholly in Wyoming and entirely separated from the Harney Peak region. It does not exceed fifty square miles in area; the gold deposits are small compared with those on Rapid Creek, and are remarkable for the absence of quartz in the gravel, the gold being derived from the disintegration of feldspar porphyry carrying irregular masses of iron and manganese ore.
