NUMBER 1633.

NEW POEM BY LONGFELLOW. Castles in Spain.

How much of my young heart, O Spain, Went out to thee in days of yore! What dreams romantic filled my brain, And summoned back to life again The Paladins of Charlemain, The Cid Campeador!

And shapes more shadowy than these. In the dim twilight half revealed; Phoenician galleys on the seas, The Roman camps like hives of bees, The Goth uplifting from his knees Pelayo on his shield.

It was these memories perchance,
From sunals of remotest eld,
That lent the colors of romance
To every trivial circumstance, and changed the form and countenan
Of all that I beheld.

Old towns, whose history lies hid In monkish chronfels of rhyme-Burgos, the birthplace of the Cid, Zamora and Valladolid, Toledo, built and walled amid The wars of Wamba's time;

The long, straight line of the highway,
The distant town that seems so near,
The peasants in the fields, that stay
Their toil to cross techniselves and pray,
When from the belfry at midday
The Angelus they hear;

The crosses in the mountain pass, Mules gay with tassels, the loud din of muleters, the tethered ass That crops the dusty wayside grass, And cavaliers with spure of brass Alighting at the inn;

White hamlets hidden in fields of wheat, White cities simularing by the sea,
White sunshine flooding square and street,
Dark mountain-ranges, at whose feet
The river-beds are dry with heat,
All was a dream to me.

Yet something somber and severe O'er the enchanted landscape vergned; A terror in the atmosphere, As if King Philip latthed near, Or Torquebada, the austere, His ghostly sway maintained.

The star of stars, the cynosure, The artist's and the poet's theme, The young man's vision, the old man's dream

And there the Alhambra still recalls Aladdin's palace of delight; Allah il Allah ! through its halls Whispers the fountain as it falls; The Darro daris beneath its wa'ls, The hills with snow are white.

Ah yes, the hills are white with snow, And cold with blasts that bite and freeze; But in the happy vale below The orange and pomegranate grow, And wafts of air toss to and fro

There was a contemptuous imperious

ness in Clarice's tones that brought the blood rushing to Lilias' cheeks.
"Because I never would marry for money; I will never give my hand to a man because he has a fortune at his disposal. Wealth is a great gift, but it does not purchase happiness. "How do you know? You have never enjoyed wealth." A quiet, strange smile-one that had annoyed Clarice many times since the orphan Lilias had come to their uncle's, six months before—lighted the sweet face, disclosing the pearly teeth.

"True, I am not in the enjoyment of wealth; yet, judging from yourself, dear I should conclude it did not bring bliss. "But it will, when I have once attained my object—the dream I have cherished for the half-year you have been here. When I am once the wife of Sir Irvine Tressell, the only man I ever loved or ever shall love, I defy anything to make me unhappy. His love is all I ask."

A bright smile, that made her really lovely, lighted her midnight eyes as she thought of him—her idol. "You've never seen him, Lilias, I believe," she went on to sav. "He is the most handsome man I ever saw!" "I think not. You know you requested me never to come in the parlor when you had company."

UNIVERSITY APPROPRIATIONS.

In the House on Friday last Representative Mills, chairman of the Comsouls despise Hayes and his policy nev- mittee on the University, presented the to improve the condition of the laboring following unanimous report, accomknow whether the Commercial got its panying an appropriation bill the passage of which was recommended ;

Evidenthighest order for any and all men who might desire it for the learned profes-sions, the sciences, the arts, and for the highest work of an American educator. To us, in common with others, the high character of the men whom we have drawn to this, our educational Mecca, the broad culture we have given to many who have availed themselves of its advantages, the admiration we have On Monday evening last a Free Trade | career as preacher, editor, and politician | inspired among the people of other | League was organized in Detroit, with | is fresh in the mind of the intelligent | States and nations for its large success reader. It is also a source of extreme mortification to us, as to others, that this noble child of right royal birth and parent age should every year become more and more a pauper, and come year after it a princely fortune and support, by grants of land and by encouraging munificent private gifts.

It is a painful fact, however, that of dram of liquor except as a medicine; the large amount of land-over 46,000 acres-given it, and which might, with and wise management, have yielded an endowment fund of nearly a sioner, vice Cobb resigned, and the attended a horse-race, never courted but million dollars, a large part was either one woman and her he married, and sold at a price far below what it might have brought, or recklessly frittered away by unfortunate legislation. In this way what might have constituted such a magnificent fund was reduced Col. Thos. W. Higginson, one of the more than one half. Surely, the Legisold, original abolitionists, a co-worker lature of Michigan ought to show a diswith Garrison, Parker, Pillsbury and all position to deal justly with the Univerdoing a noble work, the fruits of which pressed with the generous confidence re-

It is not a little flattering to the peosurrounding it, to deter people from other States from coming here, and the remoteness of older communities, has, students than many of the older States are doing. The State of Maine has in collegiate and professional courses, 729 students. New Hampshire has 554. Massachusetts, with her world-wide fame, 2,612. And the Empire State, with a population three times as large as ours, and institutions older than the name of Michigan, 4,666. We are giv-ing the same advanced education to 3,346 students.

To make the work of the University possible use, your committee urge the importance of continuing the school of mines; of adding a physiological lab-oratory with something toward a proper equipment; a philosophical laboratory with suitable appliances; also, a cheap building with suitable instruments for ing for the University, the sum of $40,-000 or $45,000, with the conditions attached, viz: that the State pay to him during the life time of himself and present wife, the sum of 8 per cent. on the amount donated, and 5 per cent. to and the further condition that the State shall contribute $10,000 toward the building, and a small sum annually for the library, is regarded as a matter of great consequence to the University, both as an evidence of the hold it has upon the affections of the people, and as suggesting a solution, in part, of the question, "How shall the University be put on a basis of certain and permanent support?" Is it unreasonable to expect that wealthy and benevolent citizens of Michigan will from time to time contribute toward such endowments as will make a large part of the University self-sustaining? Indeed much has already been done in this direction. The generosity of citizens of Detroit and Ann Arbor gave to it the observatory which has so liberally contributed to its fame in the new world and in the old. Another offer comes to us just now, of a donation of $9,000 toward the Beal-Steere collection for the museum-a collection of almost inestimable value. Rumors of other like gifts come to us from every quarter. Ought not these efforts to be encouraged? Those noble monuments of generosity—Brown University, Yale College, Vassar, Girard, and a large number of others, show conclusively what may be done by inviting private benefactions. And such a policy recommends itself to us just now with peculiar force. Increased taxation has resulted very much from the policy of supporting charitable and educational institutions by taxation alone. Private generosities are absolutely demanded in our form of civilization, to prevent the fearful chasm between the rich and the poor, such as exists in many countries of Europe to-dato and which thoughtful minds are noy, dreading here. If wealth is devoted w selfish aims alone, even though it be ob-whose hard toil has very largely produced it, as a source of annoyance, it not a standing menace; but when it is nish all alike the means of improvement can fail to be reminded of the mutual bonds that unite all alike in a common brotherhood. We, therefore, earnestly vancing the cause of higher education, efit of future generations. In the opinion of your committee, the several departments of the University are all doing a good work. Nor can the people of this State afford to commit to gue pro and con as to which of them them less than is now exacted. On the contrary, step after step should now be taken to make the institution more thorough and efficient. The recent action of the Board of Regents in affording equal advantages for clinical work and instruction to the professors and students in each of the medical schools is to be much commended. No iess grateful must every thoughtful person feel for the action of the Regents in regard to extending and grading the course of medical instruction at the University. It required no little courage on their ment in determining both individual part, when other medical institutions and national character. were reducing their course of study and ectures to secure patronage, to adopt a Clothing ranks next to food in importance. MRS. ANN ELIZA YONNG has been beaten in her suit for divorce. The court held that Brigham's first marriage, contracted in Ohio in the early days of Mormonism, was the only legal marriage that he could contract; that the form of marriage with Ann Eliza did not make her his legal wife, and that therefore she cannot be divorced. Further alimony is denied, of course, and the sum already received as alimony awarded to her in payment for services rendered as a "domestic" or menial while she lived with Brigham as his wife. GENERAL,

THE eighth annual report of the Board of Indian Commissioners is made public. The report reviews what has been done under the peace system and deprecates the want of good faith of the Government in its treatment of the Indians. It concludes with the following recommendations: Immediate compliance on the part of the Government with the terms of existing treaties with all Indians; appropriation for consolidating agencies; generous appropriation for educational purposes; discontinuance of tribal relations; extension of the law for the protection of life and property; allotments of land; establishment of industrial and agricultural boarding schools; compelling the attendance of all between 7 and 18 years of age; issue of supplies to be made to heads of families; increase of salaries to Indian Agents.

We quote the following from one of their printed arguments: "Indeed, as to Presidential electors, the mode of the appointment-is by the constitution of the United States lift to the discretion of the Legislature of the State. Therefore, the General Assembly of Louisian might create any tribunal whatever Louisiana might create any tribunal whatever and confide to it the appointment of electors for President and Vice President. Consequently, it may properly authorize such a tribunal in case of the election of Presidential electors by the people, to count the votes and decide and declare who were entitled to seats in the Elecoral College." As matters stood on our arrival here, the legal title of the respective claimants to the office of Governor depended upon the question we have stated. There was no judicial tribunal, acknowledged to be author-tative by both parties, by which it ould be solved, for the reasons already ividii. The only hope of a pfactical sulution ras by the union of so many members of the rival Legislatures as would make a Leg-slature with a constitutional quorum in both of the rival Legislatures as would make a Legislature with a constitutional quorum in both senate and House of members whose title to heir seats is valid under either view of the aw. With a Legislature of undisputed authority, the settlement of the other questions tould, as stated in the letter of instructions to air commission from the Secretary of State, be gradually worked out by the prevalent authority which the legislative power, when unisputed, is quite competent to exert in comosing the conflicts in co-ordinate branches of the Government.
