

GAIL HAMILTON devotes a column and a half letter to Stanley Matthews, whom she calls "The Fourth Estate."

That colored West Point cadet, Flipper by name, was neither bull-dozed nor killed, but graduated last week, the fiftieth in a class of seventy-six. He is the first colored graduate of West Point.

Dows in Florida a one-armed man is exempt from taxation on his business unless he is a liquor seller. The law makers "calculated" that one arm is sufficient for a concocter of gin cocktails, mint-juleps, and "sich."

SENATOR BLAINE repudiates the idea that either he or anyone else "inspires" the letters of Gail Hamilton, and in illustration of his idea of Gail, tells the story of the Pennsylvania woman who responded to the notary's question, "do you acknowledge the execution of this instrument without fear or compulsion from your husband or anyone?" with contempt in both manner and voice, "Me afraid! I guess, yed, you don't know the family." Blaine is supposed to know the family, and judging by the habit Gail has had of "slinging ink" and invectives these many years, she don't need any "inspiration" from the Senator.

H. H., or Miss Helen Hunt Jackson, says she is not Saxe Holm, and Saxe Holm indignantly denies that she is "H. H.," or that "H. H." is she; yet the literary critic of the New York Tribune persists in charging "one is 'o'her and 'o'her is one." Perhaps the Tribune writer knows more than both the ladies in question.

HON. D. D. PRATT, formerly United States Senator from Indiana, and later Commissioner of Internal Revenue, died suddenly at his residence in Logansport, on Sunday last, of heart disease. Hon. John Pettit, another ex-United States Senator, and very prominent in his day, died at Lafayette, Ind, on Sunday, aged about seventy.

Statistics from eight townships in Saginaw County show that the increase in the acreage of wheat is about 20 per cent. over last year. The Courier says the same is true of the whole county. On the evening of the 14th, in the village of Brooklyn, fourteen miles south of Jackson, John Gibson was accused by one Amble of being too intimate with Mrs. A., which he coolly acknowledged to be true. Amble gave him a terrible beating, so that at last accounts he was lying at the point of death.

A singular freak of nature is reported on the farm of the late Ralph Wadsworth, in Kimball township, St. Clair County, where a thoroughbred calf was recently born with its heart located in its neck, entirely forward of the shoulder. The animal is now three or four weeks old, and quite active.

Wm. Hadrill, of North Branch, Lapeer County, wishing to get rid of a tenant who was occupying his house, concluded to try an original plan, which was successful, and much more expeditious than invoking the law. He put jack-screws under one end of the building, and raised it to such an angle that the occupant was glad to slide out right side up.

The galvanized iron moldings, drops, pedestals, panelings, etc., for the Senate and Representative Halls of the new Capitol, and also the lantern for the dome, have arrived in this city. They were manufactured by John Siddons, of Boston, N. Y., and the original plan, which was successful, and much more expeditious than invoking the law. He put jack-screws under one end of the building, and raised it to such an angle that the occupant was glad to slide out right side up.

The game law enacted at the recent session of the Legislature is a lame law. It protects them in the very month the legislators intended to permit them to be shot, and permits them to be shot in the brooding months when they should be protected. Woodcock may now be shot, if there is no error in the official copy of the act, from the first day of January to the fifth day of July, and are protected from the fifth day of July to the first day of January. That game-law maker was evidently out of time when he let his little bill go through.

A PRELIMINARY contract has been made for the consolidation of the Detroit Post and Advertiser and Tribune, and the appraisers of good will and material have been selected. The new paper is to be christened the Post and Tribune. The stockholders of both papers cannot fail to be the gainers by the consolidation, and the move is also politically a wise one; that is for the Republicans. The Democracy are the only gainers by having two Republican organs in Detroit, fighting each other instead of political opponents.

THESE Republican politicians who have a desire to build up an administration party, and to be considered main spokes in the government wheel, are likely to come to grief. Being brawling administration men is to give them no claim to step into the shoes of official and party sorcerers, and they must clap for the President in the capacity of private citizens and disinterested patriots and not as office-holders. The latest official declarations upon this point are found in a letter from the Postmaster-General to recently discharged clerks from the postoffice of a large western city. Complaining to the Postmaster-General, they alleged among other things that their successors were raw and inefficient hands, and that "the postmaster was not loyal to the Administration." The Postmaster-General laid their complaints before the President, and thereafter, by authority, responded to the complainants, by letter, from which the following extract has been given to the public:

"It appears from evidence in the department that the office was well conducted at present, and that the special agent has made favorable reports as to the present organization and management so that the public are not suffering for want of good service. The office is well managed, and so that the complainants are more in the nature of private rather than public grievances. The postoffice is not a political institution. If it be true, as you state, that the incumbent opposes the policy of the administration, that he has a right to do, and it is no cause of removal unless in his zeal and activity he sink the postmaster in the politician. If anyone, whether he support or oppose the administration, neglects such duty by being a busy politician, or makes himself obnoxious by reason of inconsiderate and foolish zeal, he ought to be removed, but if he attends faithfully to his duties and makes a good and acceptable postmaster he should not be removed, though he see fit to oppose the administration. The President has no sufficient cause for a change in the postoffice."

Let applicants for postoffices "put that in their pipes and smoke it." The heaviest fleece of wool thus far reported is 22 pounds. It was sheared from a three-year old ram belonging to Mr. P. H. Lyon, of Aurelius, Ingham County.

POSTMASTER-GENERAL KEY has written to a special agent of his department, who desired to be assigned to duty in his own State, where he "could be most useful in building up the administration party," in this wise: "You were not appointed to organize or build up an administration party in your State or elsewhere. You were appointed to do work in the Postoffice Department. You serve your party best by doing that work, and I shall take great pleasure in removing an agent and reducing the force whom I discover that has any time to attend to party organization and party discipline." Does Mr. Key mean to strangle the once proud Republican party?

SENATOR BLAINE repudiates the idea that either he or anyone else "inspires" the letters of Gail Hamilton, and in illustration of his idea of Gail, tells the story of the Pennsylvania woman who responded to the notary's question, "do you acknowledge the execution of this instrument without fear or compulsion from your husband or anyone?" with contempt in both manner and voice, "Me afraid!
