"But a week is so long!" he said,
With a toss of his curly head,

ren whole days! Why, in six, you know us said it yourself—you told me so), e great God up in heaven
de all the earth and the seas and skies,
e trees and the birds and the butterflies
w can I wait for my seeds to grow?"

"But a month is so long !" he said,
With a droop of his boyish head.
"Hear me count—one, two, three, four—
Four whole weeks, and three days more;
Thirty-one days, and each will ereep
As the shadows crawl over yonder steep;
Thirty-ene nights, and I shall lie
Watching the stars climb up the sky!
How can I wait till a month is o'er?"

"But a year is so long!" he said, Uplifting his bright young head. Over the finis with looseeps slow—
Autumn and winter, summer and spring;
Oh, for a bridge of gold to fling
Over the chasm deep and wide,
That I might cross to the other side,
Where she is waiting—my love, my bride!"

"Ten years may be long," he said, Slow raising his stately head, ut there's much to win, there is much to lose A man must labor, a man must choose, And he must be strong to wait! The years may be long, but who would wear The crown of honor must do and dare! No time has he to toy with fate Who would climb to manhood's high estate!"

"Ah! life is not long!" he said,
Bowing his grand white head.
"One, two, three, four, five, six, seven!—
Seven times ten are seventy.
Seventy years! As swift their flight
As swallows cleaving the morning light,
Or golden gleams at even. Life is short as a summer night— How long, O God! is eternity?"

THE CAPTURE OF JEFF DAVIS.

Narrative of the Event by Col. Pritchard of the Fourth Michigan Cavalry, Col. D. B. Pritchard, of Allegan, Mich., has contributed to The Journal of that town a long account of the capture of Jefferson Davis by the Fouth Michigan cavalry in 1865. Col. Prichard says he does not make this statement from personal choice, but from a sense of justice, as it has been assumed in certain quarters that the story of Davis' disguise in woman's dress is no longer believed. He says:
The orders under which I acted were received from Col. R. H. G. Minty, commanding the Second division of the cavalry corps, Military Division of the Mississippi, and from whom, on the afternoon of Sunday, May 7, 1865, I received direct orders to report immediately to him in person for instructions. On my arrival he detailed to me the information received by Gen. Wilson from his forces in the direction of Augusta regarding the movements southward of the principal parties connected with the Confederate Government, and the desire to effect ATTORNEY AT LAW,

Certain places appearing upon the maps were thought to be desirable points for establishing the headquarters of my regiment, but that matter was left to my own discretion upon arriving upon the ground; and, if pursuit became necessary, I was authorized to disregard all points and communications, and pursue as far as might be deemed necessary, even to the Gulf or the ocean.

In obedience to the orders above stated, which were verbal and strictly secret, I moved with my command from camp at Macon, at 8 o'clock the same evening, pursuing the main highway leading down the south side of the Ocmulgee river, in the general direction therewith, leaving everything in camp which might in any way impede our free and rapid movement. As this article is not intended to describe in detail the incidents of the march, I will simply say that we pressed forward by rapid forced marches, night and day, only halting long enough to feed and rest our horses, until the 9th day of May, at 3 o'clock p. m., when we arrived at Abbyville, seventy-five miles from Macon, where we first struck the trail of what proved to be the train of the Davis party, and which had gone on in the direction of Irwinsville the night before. Here we also met Lieut. Col. Harnden, commanding a de-tachment of the First Wisconsin cavalry, with whom a brief consultation was Capital paid in.....s 50,000.00 held, when it was decided that we could ships, whose rates are lower than most other first-class lines.

camp was located in the thick pine forsoon as they were aroused, sprung from their beds and were immediately placed under guard and allowed time to put on the balance of their clothing, which consumed several minutes, after which the prisoners were gathered together and placed under a regular detailed guard. But before this was fairly completed, and before any of the persons occupying the tents had completed their toilet and come out, or a list of the names of the captured party had been made up, a volley was fired down the road and across the swamp alluded to, and about eighty or one hundred rods north of the camp, where the force of twenty-five dismounted men under Lient, Purinton were stationed. I at once ordered the men to resume their places in the column. Leaving Adjt. Dickinson with a sufficient force in camp to gather the rest of the prisoners in and guard them until my return, I in person pushed forward across the swamp with the balince of the command to the aid of Lieut. Purinton, whom I supposed to be engaging the force guarding the train, but which proved to be the First Wisconsin cavalry, under Col. Harnden, whose men had come upon the force under Lieut. Purinton, and, though a misunderstanding in the challenge and resporse, each had taken the other for the enemy, it still being so dark that they could not distinguish the uniform; and, as I came up the road in column, mounted, we received a raking fire from a dismounted force concealed behind trees and logs, which killed one man and severely wounded Lieut. Boutelle. This sad mistake was not discovered until two men were killed in the Fourth Michigan cavalry and eight or ten men wounded in the First Wisconsin cavalry. As soon as the firing ceased I returned to the camp, and, as I recrossed the swamp, I was met by Lieut. Dickinson, who, in a hurried way, informed me that he had carried out my orders, and said we had captured an oldish man whom he believed was Jeff Davis, and that he came out of one of the tents dressed up in woman's clothes and attempted to escape as a woman. I got the impression that Mr. Davis had refused to reveal his name up to that time, but will not be positive on the point. I rode on up to the point where the pris-oners were gathered under guard, and, as I approached them, I was accosted by this man, who proved to be Mr. Davis, with the inquiry if I was the officer in command. I replied that I was, and asked him in return whom I was to call him. He replied that I might "call him what, or whoever I pleased," when I replied that I would call him Davis; after a moment's hesitation, he said, "That is my name." He then drew himself up in a very dignified and imposing manner, and exclaimed: "I suppose you consider it bravery to charge a train of defenseless women and children, but it is theft, it is vandalism. Davis had thrown off the garments con stituting his disguise, and was clad in a suit of Confederate gray at the time of my meeting him. I then proceeded to take an inventory of our capture, when I ascertained that we had captured Jeferson Davis, wife, and four children; John H. Reagan, his Postmaster Ger eral; Cols. Johnson and Lubbock, aids-de-camp on Davis' staff; Burton N. Har-rison, his Private Secretary; Maj. Murand, Capt. Moody, and Lieut. Hathaway; Jeff D. Howell, a brother of Mrs. Davis, and Midshipman in the rebel navy; thirteen private soldiers; Miss Maggie Howell, sister of Mrs. Davis, two waiting maids, and several servants. We also captured five wagons, three am bulances, about fifteen horses and twen-ty-five or thirty mules. The train was principally loaded with commissary stores and private baggage, with a few arms and a few boxes of fixed ammuni-

On the morning of the 11th we resumed our march in the direction of Macon, and, on the afternoon of that day, when a few miles below Hawkinsville, we met the rest of our brigade just coming out from Macon, and received from them the first knowledge we had of President Johnson's proclamation, ac companied by Gen. Wilson's order offering a reward for the capture of Davis above Hawkinsville. Moving on again early on the morning of the 12th, we arrived within fifteen or twenty miles of moving my command up to within about statement. It will be remembered, by a half-mile of the camp, where I halted those acquainted with the fact, that the under cover of a small eminence and discavalry command, under Gen. Wilson, mounted twenty-five men and sent them, | had drawn no regular Government supunder command of Lieut. Purinton, with instructions to make the circuit of the camp and gain a position on the road in rear of the enemy to cut off escape in that direction: to gain the position command was expected to subsist by designated undiscovered, if possible, foraging while on this expedition; but, if discovered and alarm was raised, as the country through which we passed I would charge the camp from the front, and he was to move upon the camp from any position he might then hold; but, if no alarm was raised, I should take it for granted that he had successfully are granted that he had successfully executed his orders, where he should remen were really in a suffering conmain quiet until I should assault the dition for food, and, as there was camp, as I had not then decided whether I should attack at once or delay until train, I decided to distribute the appearance of daylight, but finally that surplus among my men. After we determined upon the latter course, as the moon was getting low and the deep shadows of the forest would render it easy for parties to elude us in the darkness. After waiting in our position cient quantity to fully supply his party for about an hour and a half, and until the appearance of early dawn, I put the column quietly in motion, and was enabled to approach within a very few rods of the tents before discovery, when a charge was ordered, and in an instant the camp, with its inmates, was wholly within our power, without the necessity of firing a shot. The surprise was so complete that not the slightest show of complete that not the slightest show of posed, and Mrs. Davis said she felt cerresistance was made, the men not even having time to grasp their weapons, which were lying at their sides. > of his capture, and proceed to Washington and report in person to the Secretary of War. Accordingly, I went over to the steamer Clyde and informed Mrs. Davis of my instructions, and asked her if she had any objections to deliver ing to me the garments worn by Mr. Davis as a disguise at the time of his capture, and received this very sharp and pungent reply: "Certainly not, sir, for I do not think I ever had an opportunity to donate any clothing to Mrs. Stanton before; it is, perhaps, well that my mantle should fall on the shoulders of Mrs. Stanton." Mrs. Davis then delivered to me in person, with no further compulsion than a simple request, a lady's water proof cloak or robe of dark color, trimmed with pearl buttons, which she admitted to be the one worn by her husband as a disguise at the time of his capture. On the morning of the 24th, Capt. Hudson went over to Clyde and procured the balance of the garments worn in the disguise, which consisted of black woolen shawl with a border The Captain informed me that Mrs. Davis at first did not like to give up the shawl, saving she needed it for her children. He then went back to shore and ourchased another shawl for her, relacing the one Mrs. Davis delivered to him. These garments were taken by me to Washington and delivered to the Secretary of War, and were thoroughly dentified by the three soldiers who ar rested Mr. Davis at the time he came from the tent, to-wit: Corporal George Munger and privates James F. Bullard and Andrew Bee, each of whom made sworn statements at the War Department of the facts within their knowledge concerning the disguise, and which were filed in the office of the Secretary of War. I have not copies of those sworn statements in my possession, but I have a statement made by Corporal George SCHOOLCRAFT, Oct. 29, 1877. DEAR SIR: Yours of the 20th, asking for a statement of my participation in the capture of Davis, is at hand. I have had a great many calls for a statement from almost every State in the Union. I just received one from the Tribune office last week. I thought I would not say anything about it. There has been a great deal said by different ones regarding the capture of Davis. They all seem to differ more capture of Davis. They all seem to differ more or less. If I should make a statement it would not correspond with all.

Col. Pritchard's statement is as near right as

Munger in response to a request by Col

Robert Burns, and which I here insert:

any I have seen as regards Davis' disguise Davis had on a lady's waterproof clock or dress, and a red and black or black and white shawl thrown over his head and shoulders over a suit of gray clothes and a pair of cavalry boots. I do not know if Dickinson ordered Bee to let the woman pass or not, only what I heard the morning of the capture. I believe Bee was on guard at the tent. I did not see Bee was on guard at the tent. I did not see Dickinson until after Davis was taken back to the tent, and had taken off his disguise. Dickinson might have halted Davis, but not in my hearing. He certainly did not stop. He was about four rods from the tent, when I first saw him. Bullard and I were changing norses as we used to do sometimes when we found better ones. Bullard had just thrown his saddle on his horse, I was just buckling on my girth, when I saw the three women, as I supposed when I saw the three women, as I supp them to be, which afterward proved to be Davis, Mrs. Davis, and Miss Howell. I said to Bullard, "Those women ought not to be allowed to go out of camp; yon go and stop them." Bullard said, "You go, yon have your saddle on." I mounted my horse, rode around in front of the parky and said other.

saddle on." I mounted my horse, rode around in front of the party, and said to them, "Where are you going?" Mrs. Davis said, "With my old mother after some water." Mrs. Davis had a pail on her arm. I said, "What is she doing with those boots on?" When I saw his boots I cocked my gun and laid it across my saddle. Mrs. Davis put her hand over Davis' face, and said, "Don't shoot! You may not admire Mr. Davis' principles, but he is a reverend man." That is all that was said there. As soon as Bullard buckled his saddle. here. As soon as Bullard buckled his saddle, ne rode up to where we were. He heard the most of this conversation. We went back to he tent with them. There Davis took off his lisguise, and said he thought our Governmen nore magnanimous than to be chasing up wom n and children. This is as near right as ] ould state it at this time. Hope

Pleasure and Goodness.

It would be a truism to affirm in a world where all seek pleasure that to make the most of life is to be happy, for Instead of f now to be happy is the enigma placed before us; but it certainly is no truism ered in and placed under guard. Immediately after taking possession of the camp my Adjutant, Lieut. Dickinson, notified me that there were ladies in the tents, when I directed him to station guards at each of the tents and allow.

of man. The avowed pleasure-seekers or virtue, and the class which seeks virtue at the expense of all pleasure as truly violates the divine economy as do those who seek pleasure at the expense of honor. Not as greatly, but as truly, breakers of God's law. Nothing seems more evident than that man is placed in a career which possesses two watchwords of paramount significance, and that these are happiness and character. To be good is only one-half of man's mis-sion, the other half being summed up in the phrase, to be happy. It is not probable that these are exact geometrial hemispheres, for the continent called character is in all probability the larger, but in the moral globe there is no exact geography or mathematics, but only a spiritual and hence indefinite measurement. If character be the greatest end of life, it is also the easiest found, for man has power to be righteous far beyond his power to be cheerful and smiling. We can control our conduct, but not the events of time. Disease in self or family will come, death will fall like a thunderbolt in a group bound by inex-pressible love, and there is no band to stay its ravages. One can keep from sin far more easily than from suffering of body or mind. Character is hence the most accessible of these large hemispheres, but the other is to be perpetual-That pleasure should be sought is proven by a single glance at not only nan's nature, but at all animal nature. All God's creatures begin life with play, thus shadowing in the outset the Creator's design; but of all these man only laughs, and man only carries on his enoyment to the extreme limit of his stay in this world. The play of the lower animals is merely physical, and hence it leaves them the moment youth's buoyancy is gone; but man's play or laughter is mental, and hence will live while his mind retains its faculties. The human delight in music or in a good anecdote will live as long as the mind lives. All those surprises of situation, of answer. of words, of incident, which so excite mirth will do so as long as the mind reains its delicate and marvelous powers. The dying, within a moment of death, will smile if some little absurd thing occurs in their sight, or if some strange story or bon mot comes suddenly into the chamber of memory. Many instances are on record where the solemnity of death could not prevent the mind. just about to sink away, from smiling ust once more over something laugha ole in the yesterday. You will thus perceive that man laughs and plays by an innate law, and that thus happiness is his birthright. His mind is made for a smiling destiny. The only creature, indeed, that weeps, he is also the only one who laughs, and his merriment is as divine as his ears. Happiness, therefore, reaches out pefore you as a continent you are to sail to and to possess and to transform into a home. You will not find it all you could wish, but you will find it a better land than any other philoshy could point out—a land that God United States, was first brought to the de and where He will be with His attention of this body, and a bill was children. Those who have counted existence here a form of waiting for a real and mere initial step about it—I have life, or those who have called this world a seen officers of the companies in this failure, have, only by that course, made the failure more complete, for the mind is so fashioned that it needs the perpetual bouyancy of real or supposed happiness. A discouraged soul is a affect any Senator. I suppose it did ruined soul so far as this life is connot. I have seen 50 cents a line paid to cerned. For path is never wholly pain, Nor bleakest prospect wholly cold;

The lightings shows the midnight rain
To be a shower of liquid gold.
A star preaks through the cloudy rifs,
A lamp shines in one loving hand.
Hope speeds across the heaving drift
And waves her torch from off the land.
The soul alone, a spark divine,
Siruck from the chariot wheels of God,
Unquenchable will ever shine
And pierce the darkness of the road.
From sorrow Joy exultant springs,
From stormy night the spiendid morn;
The angels came on thrilling wings
When in the stable Ohrist was born.
And from the manger Christ has gone.
Down through the shades of weeping night,
Up to a love-illumined throne,
Which pours o'er heaven its tender light,

Instead of flowing from some absolute outward condition of fame and wealth or talent, the pleasure of man comes chiefly est, close by a small swamp. A chain of mounted sentries, composed of a force specially designated for that duty, swept rapidly around the camp on the instant servant set apart the necessary amount and most import in this existence. There specially designated for that duty, swept rapidly around the camp on the instant when the main force dashed into it, thus barring all possibility of escape after the completion of the circuit. If pleasure followed genius, how few could claim the boon! for not days. Eighteen days of this will be upon the ocean, and for the round trip every one. If r leasure followed genius, how few could claim the boon! for not one in a million enjoys a highly-gifted mind. In the national guard of some camp my Adjutant, Lieut. Dickinson, notified me that there were ladies in the tents, when I directed him to station guards at each of the tents and allow none of the men to enter. All of the men with the party, except Mr. Davis, I believe, were sleeping on their blankers outside of the tents in different parts of the camp, partially undressed, and, as they were aroused, sprung from their beds and were immediately placed. More About the Wonderful Inventor. [From the New York Graphic

We went over to Menlo Park, N. J. two of us, to see Edison and his wonder ful inventions and make some discov eries and sketches for the Graphic Menlo Park is not a park. It is not a city. It is not a town. It is not in any way related to Mungo Park, the great Scotch-African. Although it is on the Pennsylvania railroad (just beyond Rahway), it is not even a stopping place, except when the station-agent flags the train to take on waiting passengers. It is composed wholly of Edison's laboratory and half-a-dozen houses where his employes live. It is, in short, Edisonia, and nothing else.

Just north of the track is a long, plain, white wooden building, full of windows and two stories high; this is the laboratory of the Jersey Columbus whose name has suddenly become famous. Many telegraph wires are festooned from it. The first floor is occupied by scribes and bookkeepers in one end, and at the other some ten or twelve skillful workers in iron, who, at anvil and forge, lathe and drill, are noisily engaged in making pat-terns and models for the genius of the House, but the gentlemen on the other side had had the disposition of 90,000 offices, and why had they not discovered for other purposes." The text is as foleverywhere; turning-lathes are thickly set on the floor, and the room is filled with the screech of the tortured metal. Up-stairs we climb--to a room the size of the building, with twenty windows on sides and ends. It is walled with shelves of bottles, like an apothecary shop-thousands of bottles of all sizes and colors. In the corner is a cabinet organ. On benches and tables are batteries of all descriptions, microscopes, magnifying glasses, crucibles, retorts, an ash-covered forge, and all the apparatus of a chemist. At a table sit two carnest men, each holding alternately to mouth and ear the mouthpiece of a well yet. This is the largest circuit ever attempted, and it would not be possible without Edison's repeating machine.'

In the middle of the room is a man about five feet ten inches high, with a thin face, high cheek bones, and a long, lean neck. He would not be picked out in a crowd as a man of more than ordinary intelligence, and he is the person whom a banco-steerer would be likely to take into his confidence. Time he evidently considers too valuable to waste on personal decoration, for his boots have not been blackened this week, and, although he is ostensibly whiskerless, his beard has had about a five days' growth. His hair is of a chestnut brown, and I judge he cut it himself, for it stands up in an anxious way all over his head, with a striking tendency forward, and at the crown it stiffly radiates like the thorny top of a pineapple. There is a quid of tobacco in his cheek. His month is sensitive, the blue veins show on his hands, and the fingers flutter as if each had an another finding to the suicide two letters were found. Assassination in Ireland.

The following details of the rams-sination of the Earl of Leitrim, his clerk and driver, has been telegraphed from Dublin. The Earl of Leitrim left his residence at Milford shortly before 8 o'clock yesterday morning, accompa-nied by his clerk, and was driving on an outside car to Derry to meet his solicitor. He always carried arms. It is supposed the assassins concealed themselves behind a low embankment between the road and plantation, and that, having vants of the competitors. The vast road and plantation, and that, having first shot the Earl of Leitrim, they shot the clerk and driver, so there might be no witnesses. His Lordship's valet was tive. driving about a mile behind, and, on coming up, found his master and the clerk lying dead on the road. Life was still in the driver. The assassins mean-while escaped in a boat across Mulroy bay. The valet drove back to Milford and alarmed the police, who, coming to the place, found the driver still alive, but unconscious. He died shortly afterwards.

There is no doubt that the murder was agrarian. The relations between the Earl of Leitrim and his tenants were un-friendly. His Lordship was kind and liberal to the poor, but was very par-ticular and exacting in his dealings with a strong hold upon the county, owing the great walking match began. in a great measure to his harshness. He had an iron will which disregarded alike down to their work, the eighteen men, in the pursuit of his purposes.
