AN EYE UPON WASHINGTON.

Probably no politician has done more to bring shame upon American politics than ex-senator Chandler. He is recognized as a shrewd manipulator, who bends every energy to win a campaign for his party, or to secure promotion for himself. To him nothing succeeds like success. Conscientious scruples long since became obsolete in his political decalogue. "To win," is his motto, and it must be confessed, it has been transcribed upon many triumphant banners. But the shrewdest of the shrewd sometimes fail. Once upon the high road of political fame, men are apt to feel themselves impregnable, and overlook the subordinate influences that need be well-ordered harmoniously to retain their hold upon partisan friends. The triumph of senator Christian, hailed as a victory by the better of the baser portion of the Republican party, although a Waterloo for the intrepid leader of the party in this state, did not serve to discourage him beyond renewed effort. He has had one eye on the Federal capital ever since. How to get there has been a deep study. Indisposed to await the expiration of the terms of either Senator, he has incubated a scheme through which he hopes to resume his place in the senatorial circle.

The telegraph details the project. It is that senator Christian shall be given the Berlin mission, so that Mr. Chandler may have his place in the senate. If ex-President Grant was at the head of the administration there would be little difficulty in consummating the arrangement. But we have little faith that President Hayes will make a party to the transaction, provided parties to the first part mutually assent. He early "shook" such politicians as Chandler, who came so near ruining the party under Grant's administration, and we have observed nothing tending to a re-union of feeling between them. Still, the ease with which federal correspondents speak of this bargain and sale lead us to believe there must be some foundation upon which to rest the story.

An execution of this scheme would bring disgrace upon the state of Michigan. She that has long suffered under the machinations of an unscrupulous politician, can we suppose withstand further endurance. Perhaps a trade of this sort will not break the camel's back, which has been bent so many times that elasticity has become second nature.

OUR SENATOR. The Detroit Free Press from which we copied biographical sketches of Representatives from this county, and which omitted a sketch of our Senator, contains in a later issue the following: J. WEBSTER CHILDS, Senator from the Fourth District (Washington County) was born in Henniker, N. H., June 16, 1826. His early boyhood was spent upon his father's farm and in the district school until the age of 18 years, when he commenced teaching school, and soon after began fitting for college at Henniker Academy, but completed such preparation at Kimball Union Academy, Meriden, N. H., paying his way by teaching school winters and by being teacher of penmanship in the academy. After finishing his preparation for college and teaching school for about two years, he removed in 1848 to Michigan and settled upon the farm he now occupies in Augusta, Washington Co. In 1849 he was elected School Inspector, which position, or Township Superintendent of Schools, he has held for more than twenty-five years. He has several times been elected Supervisor of his township, and also held the office of Justice of the Peace. He was for twelve years President of the Farmers' and Mechanics' Trade Association of Ypsilanti, Mich., and three years President of the Eastern Michigan Agricultural Society. Mr. Childs has been for several years, and still is, one of the Executive Committee of the Michigan State Agricultural Society, and also has been for ten years a member of the State Board of Agriculture, which position he still holds. He took part in the organization of the Republican party, of which party he has ever since been an active member. In 1858 he was elected to the House of Representatives in the State Legislature; was re-elected in 1860, since which he has been four times elected to the State Senate, and in 1873 was chosen President pro tempore of the Senate.

HEALTHY NEWS. —Geo. H. Stellwagon, fairing county treasurer of Wayne, handed over to his successor Jan. 1st, $172,845.00. —Grand Rapids has a mystery. It signs itself "D. W.," and every New Year's day it sends $20 to a certain local charity. —Because Gov. Crosswell's message is longer than that of the President's, it is presumed in some quarters that the affairs of Michigan are of more importance than are those of the United States. —The Detroit, Lansing and Northern Railroad Company recently sued W. A. Starnes of Ionia, to compel payment of a $2,000 subscription made for the building of a railroad from Stanton to Ionia. The Sentinel says the jury disagreed in their verdict, standing nine to three in favor of the company. —The remark of Gov. Blair at Lansing, when all the living executives were present and made address, that it was a shame that this State did not pay its Governors a larger salary than dry goods clerks received, ought to impress the legislature with the necessity of an amendment, providing for at least $3,000 per annum. $1,000 is a picaresque figure, unworthy of the name of this great and growing commonwealth.

In his pulpit the other day, Beecher alluded to the enormous sums squandered upon the navy, and yet said "we have nothing to show for it." This brings to mind Grant's naval minister, Robeson, who spent millions upon millions of the public money, without the government being able to show a first class vessel. Despite this wholesale misappropriation of money, Robeson has been able to thwart every move of the present Congress toward bringing him to that justice he richly deserves.

The Cameron party in Penn has lost its most active and trusted organ, ex-Senator Trevelyan Mackey, who died at the early age of 43.

Address of Ex-Gov. Felch at the Dedication of the Capitol Building.

Ex-Gov. Felch was introduced by Gov. Crosswell as the oldest ex-Governor and oldest ex-Senator in the State. Mr. Felch, in a clear voice and with strong utterance, read the following address: YOUR EXCELLENCY, FRIENDS AND FELLOW CITIZENS: The occasion which brings us together in this hall is one of no ordinary interest. It is the period designated by our State constitution when both executive and legislative power passes into new hands. The same popular will which entrusted it to their predecessors commits it now to the keeping of agents selected by the same popular suffrage, or renews its commission to the faithful and the true. It is the result of that glorious feature of our representative government—the choice of rulers by the sovereign will of the people—change of officials, with no change of principles by which they are to be guided—no revolution, no revolution.

We have just heard the administration of the official oath, in this presence, to the chief executive officer of the State. To me this inauguration is a most impressive scene. Ever since the establishment of our government more than 40 years ago—this same oath has been administered on every occasion of the incoming of a new administration. It imposes duties neither light nor trivial. The pledge to support the constitution in its true and broad sense, to execute the laws faithfully, to discharge the executive office, in the solemn assumption of the highest responsibilities, and all feel the propriety of the solemn appeal to the Most High in assuming them. And while I listen to my fellow-citizens, and seem to hear from the lips of every one in this great assembly the response, I too will support the Constitution of the United States and of the State of Michigan, and in my most humble sphere, will faithfully perform my duty to the commonwealth. And even from beyond the walls of the Capitol, from the lips of our fellow-citizens throughout the State, I seem to listen to the same impressive joining in our common pledge to our country's welfare. [Applause.]

But this occasion presents other most interesting features. We enter to-day this new Capitol of our State. Hitherto the government has been housed in a tenement—its portals are not permanent temples; and as its portals are thrown open to the several departments of the government, and we congratulate ourselves on the auspicious occasion, the history of past progress comes vividly before our minds. It was on the 3d day of November, 1835, that Stevens T. Mason, the first Governor of the State of Michigan took the official oath under the first constitution. Although not recognized by Congress as an admitted member of the Federal Union until January, 1837, the State of Michigan practically dates its existence from the organization of 1835. This period of over 43 years has been marked by wonderful and almost magic changes. The population, then less than 90,000, has constantly increased, until by an addition of some 1,400,000, it numbers more than 1,500,000 people. The State, mindful of its duty to the unfortunate, has secured for its territory noble institutions for the alleviation of their misfortunes and their sorrows. The asylums for the insane, the deaf, the dumb, and the blind, are the outgrowth of our State organization; and the noble provision for the unfortunate poor in every county attests how well the duty of the public to the individual citizens has been performed. The educational interests of the State have been liberally fostered, and the district school system of the Union has established throughout her domain more numerous or more noble institutions of learning. Wherever settlers, whether few or many in number, have fixed their abode, the schoolhouse and the teacher are the first to be born, and the standard of instruction is higher than here. And when we turn to the institutions of higher education, we can but congratulate ourselves on the eminent character which they have attained. In this respect, we all speak with due acknowledgment of the great merits of others also—stands that noble State institution, the University of Michigan, an institution whose growth is a marvel, whose history has been so long and so noble, and whose name has already become a power in the land, whose eminent challenges and receives such general admiration from abroad, and whose promise of future usefulness was never so bright as today. The magnificent library, collected by the Federal Government for a University might easily have been squandered and lost, as has happened in many other States having the same endowment; but here, through all its perils, it has been guarded, nursed and fostered with a watchful care and zeal almost without a parallel. All honor to the early legislators who labored so constantly and so wisely to preserve and utilize this inestimable boon. All honor to the early Governor of this State, who stood so firmly by the fund, and whose recorded messages transmit to us most ample proofs of the zealous care with which they guarded the treasure, and the wisdom and success with which they labored to add up to the noble institution of learning was built up before. All honor to the successors of these early friends who have never ceased to foster and aid it as the child and the glory of the State.

This period of time since our State organization has witnessed changes all about us. Where then we were in the uncultivated wilderness, we stand now amid the beauties that pertain to an old and well cultivated country. The forest has receded, and the fields laden with rich harvests and the fields of the thousand charms and comforts of prosperous agricultural life stretch themselves out on every side. Railroads, almost unknown in 1835, now intersect nearly every portion of the State. Rich mineral deposits have been discovered, and the mines have yielded up their stores of wealth. The forests have supplied their treasures. Machinery of every kind is every where busy, and all the industrial arts with every modern invention and every newly discovered power of nature, are at work. It is wonderful then that everywhere in town and country alike the present should be so unlike the past? They who best remember the condition of things at the organization of the State will appreciate, in view of the present, the wonderful change that has taken place. We behold then the beautiful peninsula such as nature had made it little changed in the hand of man, we now behold the organized State, with its cities and its towns and its noble institutions, glorying in the wealth, the population and the prosperity of an older State. [Applause.]

If these years have brought such marked changes within our territory, the changes in our outside relations are no less remarkable. Michigan and Arkansas were admitted together to the sisterhood of the States, twenty-four States then constituted the Federal Union. The new States, covering an immense extent of territory, have since been organized and taken their places as members of the Union. The nation is no longer the same. Since the time referred to broad extents of country have been added to her territorial limits. On the West, Mexico and Russia have ceded large regions of country washed by the waves of the Pacific Ocean. Texas, with a territory twice enough to constitute Kingdoms, has become under the national jurisdiction. And the almost limitless country lying between the slopes of the Nevadas on the west, and the Mississippi and the great lakes on the East, partitioned into separate portions, presents itself to us as organized States and territories. We glory in the rapid march of national progress, and we rejoice with the knowledge that the period of the existence of our State is a memorable one in the annals of our nation, and that although her form of government is widely different from all foreign nationalities, she stands in the first rank of the powers of the earth.

No region of this vast national domain has had a more interesting history than our own Michigan. In early times it felt the power and yielded to the jurisdiction of more than one foreign sovereign. One of the most important acts of taking possession of a great country that history records, had its scene in this territory. The brave and representative of Louis XIV of France stood in the midst of the congregated Indians of the Northwest, and around him were priests in the rich vestments of their order, and His Majesty's soldiers equipped and glittering in their uniforms and their arms. The consecrated cross was raised, and the loud anthem broke upon the ear. Then at its side, with great form and ceremony, a cedar post was erected with the royal arms attached, and the representative of the king, holding his sword in one hand and raising a sod of earth with the other, proclaimed with a loud voice, in the name of his master the most high, might and redoubtable monarch, Louis the Fourteenth, most Christian King of France, that he took possession of all the country round about, from the great Lakes to the South Sea, declaring to all the nations therein that they were vassals of his majesty and bound to obey his laws, and promising that he would not his dutiful subjects all potentates, princes, sovereigns and republics—from entering into or infringing upon his majesty's domain.

It pomp and ceremony and bold proclamation, which secured to France, in the French monarch held the country subject to his scepter until 1763; and during that interval of time the Governor-General of Canada administered the affairs. Then British sovereignty succeeded, and until 1783 the British flag floated over it, and British governors were its rulers. Then succeeded the territorial organization, under the American flag, which we now cover. The region first as a part of the great Northwest territory, then as a portion of Indiana; then the territory of Michigan, and finally succeeded the State.

The complexity of our nation with foreign nations, and our territorial domain is a curious item in our history. Within our present national limits France, England, Spain, the Dutch, Mexico and Russia have severally, at some time, had jurisdiction and possession of our territory, but these, by honorable national acquiescence, have finally been relinquished, and our cherished form of a free and representative government has taken the place of all of them.

Our early fortunes, just 33 years ago, in obedience to the suffrages of our fellow citizens, to take the official oath as Governor of Michigan. As I look through the intervening years that lie between that and the present similar occasions, which have been carried back to the very origin of our State, and to the very fountain head whence flow the sweet waters of our prosperity. From the adoption of the State constitution to the occasion to which I have referred, the individuals only had occupied the executive chair. I should do injustice to my feelings and be false to my sentiments of veneration if I failed to speak in this assembly the revered names of Mason and Woodbridge, and Barry. They were the first to be honored with this high position, and they were worthy to bear the first honors. They were called to arduous duties in the infancy of the republic—to organizing the State government, and to moulding and forming and establishing its new institutions, and each was competent to the task, and each successfully performed it.

No man, whose memory runs back to that period, will ever forget the youthful Mason, ardent, chivalric, accomplished in the performance of every duty—a boy in years, but in judgment a man of mature wisdom. Almost worshipping the State of his adoption, he was himself the idol of his fellow-citizens. His messages and the record of his administration will show how bravely he battled against error, how firmly he stood against all wrong, how strenuously, yet in the kindest temper, he urged the measures which he deemed most beneficial to the rising State. And as time passed, and the venerable form of Gov. Woodbridge. A man mature in years, of great mental power, of the most refined culture, an able lawyer and statesman, he proved himself equal to every emergency, and bore most worthily, and many honors that were conferred upon him.

And Governor Barry stands worthily in the company of these his co-peers, a man of mark and merit. Laborious in his performance of official duty, zealous in his care for the public interests, studying and enforcing the strictest economy in times of public embarrassments, and always seeking the greatest good of the State, the confidence of the community placed in him, and the repeated calls for his return to the executive office attest the strength of the hold which he continued to have upon the affections of the public.

Many a noble man has succeeded these in the same official position, and they both deserved and secured the approval and the gratitude of their constituency; but in the long list of names none more worthy are found than these, the earliest of our standard bearers. But they are with us no longer. They and their worthy co-workers also, with few exceptions, have passed to the assemblage of the great majority beyond the verge of life. We cast fresh flowers on their graves, and turn to the present and the future.

Let me congratulate you, my fellow citizens, on the auspicious occasion of opening the new Capitol of our State. This beautiful structure is not built for the present alone, but for the future also. Its solid foundations and its massive walls proclaim stability and permanency. It is to be the lasting abode of the three branches of our government—the Executive, the Legislative and the Judicial. It is to be the place where the wrongs of the citizen must be righted, and his rights defended and protected. It is a just demand of the great public that wise and beneficent laws should come from the Legislative Department, a firm and true administration of its appropriate duties from the Executive, and from the Judicial Department that faithfully intelligent and impartial distribution of justice which shall fall like a blessing upon the land. [Applause.]

My faith is strong in the perpetuity of our system of free government, based as it is on human rights and the welfare of the human family. We cannot know what the future may bring forth; but for myself, as fix my eyes upon the cloud that rests over it, I see it illumined by the bright bow of promise, and in cheerful hope and confidence I am content to commit the treasure to the keeping of those who shall come after us. [Applause.]

PERSONAL. —Gov. Hartranft would like to succeed Bayard Taylor. —Mrs. Grant is homesick and wants "to get back to God's country." —Judge Sherman of Cleveland, brother to the General and Sec. of Treasury, died lately. —Kimball, the great church debt extinguisher is popularly known as the Financier.

—Wade Hampton, who had his leg amputated and was elected U. S. Senator both upon one day, is rapidly improving. —The Sand Lots orator, Kearney, speaks quite respectfully of Kehoe of Penn., the lately hanged young Maguire. —Bishop Whipple of Minnesota has gone to Georgia in search of health. The Bishop has overtaken himself in behalf of Poo Lo. —Caleb Cushing of Mass., a profound lawyer, accomplished gentleman, adroit diplomatist, and life long Democrat, died last week nearly 79 years of age.

—Friends of Archbishop Purcell of Cincinnati, who wants to spend the rest of his life free from responsibility, have telegraphed to the Pope, to not accept his resignation. —Francis Murphy is out of pocket by his N. Y. city campaign, on account of division of temperance people. It can be safely asserted he will quietly shake the metropolis for, among temperance orators, he has the most lively conception as to returns for his efforts.

VICINITY. —Albion's new hotel has reached the third story. —Thomas Gains purchased the Niles Woolen works at Sheriff's sale. —Hannah Carter of Adrian, charged with adultery, has been surrendered by her bondsmen and is now in jail. —Mrs. Christian Munch, aged 70, living at Pulaski, Jackson county, was found dead in her yard one day last week.

—Uncle David Smith of Roma, aged 93, received for a Christmas present, a pension certificate as a soldier of the War of 1812. —An Adrian supervisor charged for 14 days' service in assessing the liquor tax on two saloons. He must have been "sampling for grading." —Doctoring the poor in Iasbella county, and the prisoners in the jail in Jackson county, is being let out to the lowest bidder. That will secure first-class attendance and abundance of medicines—of course.

It is said Conking is withholding his wrath toward the administration until after his re-election to the Senate. We were willing to arise early upon a frosty morning to obtain an inside view of the distinguished senator's opinion of Pres. Hayes.

For the first time in the history of the Republic party, Maine has a Democratic Governor, brought about by fusion of Democrats and Greenbackers.
