Mala.

Wreathed with a crown of fragrant hawthorn
flowers,
Flashed with the roseate pink of Summer's dawn,
Sweet Mala rises from her flowery-couch,
And veils her white limbs from the glowing sun.

As fair bride veiled from her bridgroom's gaze
Her blushing face, hiding her conscious love.

The cherry orchards bend 'neath flow'ry-blossom
And mid their bloom with apple-blossom blend.

The rose-breasted bullfinch gleams piping
The heart's sweet carol of a glad content.

Clothed are the meadows in pure robe of green—

The green of Spring's unanlled loveliness—
And yellow buttercups thick sprinkled o'er.
Are golden buttons to the beauteous dress.

The blackcap sings in the claret porch;
The first pink rosette beneath the thatch;
The peacock-butterfly o'er tulip beds
Flits open-winged and eager-eyed to the spangled
Each drop of honey nectar as it falls
From dew-lipped Morn into the scented
Crimson-eyed orchids green the daisied meads,
And valley-lilies whitenning fields.

The active working of reforming life,
Awoke, astir, in every leaf and shrub;
The flow'rs we heed, nor of the serpent dream,
The thorns we pluck not whilist we grasp the first thorn.

Take me then thankfully the feast we find Spread for her guests upon kind Nature's bread.

Seize from her evil what we can of good,
And let the All-wise humbly lead the rest.

MY MIDNIGHT PERIL.

The night of the 17th of October—
shall I ever forget its pitchy darkness,
the roar of the autumnal wind through the lonely forest and the incessant downpour of the rain.

"This comes of short cuts," I muttered
petulantly to myself, as I plodded on, keeping to the trunks of the trees to avoid the ravine, through which I could hear the roar of the turbulent stream forty or fifty feet below. My blood ran cold as I thought of the possibility of a fall into the whirlpool. Why had I not been contented to keep in the right road?

Hold on! was that a light, or my eyes
playing me false?

I stopped, holding on to the low resinous bough of a hemlock that protruded on the edge of the bank, for it actually seemed that the wind would seize me bodily and hurl me down the precipitous descent.

It was a light—no, it was lynx fatuus to lead of a destruction and death.

"Hallo-o-o!"

My voice ran through the woods like a clarion. I plunged on through tangled vines, dense briars and rocky banks,
until, gradually, I heard the tramp of my feet on a hard surface, and came, or, at least, I thought I came,
to a clearing.

"What's wanting?" he snarled, with a peculiar motion of the lips that seemed to leave the yellow teeth all bare.

"I am lost in the woods; can you give me a hand to R— station?"

"Yes, R— station is twelve miles
from here."

"Twelve miles!"

I stood aghast.

"You are lost, my shelter I could oblige
you for the night?"

"No."

LIABILITY FOR DAMAGES BY FIRES— RIGHT OF WAY.

This week we conclude our extracts from the able address of Mr. Bennett on "The Rights and Duties of Farmers."
The first pink rosette beneath the thatch;
The peacock-butterfly o'er tulip beds
Flits open-winged and eager-eyed to the spangled
Each drop of honey nectar as it falls
From dew-lipped Morn into the scented
Crimson-eyed orchids green the daisied meads,
And valley-lilies whitenning fields.

I paused and laid down my pen as I concluded the words, half smiling to think what she would say could she know of my strange quarters.

Not till both sheets were covered did I lay aside my pen and prepare for slumber. As I folded my paper I happened to glance towards the couch.

Was it the gleam of a human eye observing me through the board partition or was it my own fancy? There was a crack there, but only blank darkness beyond, yet I could have sworn that something had sparkled balefully at me.

I took out my watch—it was 1 o'clock.
It was scarcely worth while
for me to undress for three hours' sleep. I would lie down in my clothes and snatch what slumber I could. So, placing my valise at the head of my bed, and barricading the lockless door with two chairs, I extinguished the light and laid down.

At first I was very wakeful, but gradually a soft drowsiness seemed to seal over me like a mantle, until, all of a sudden, some startling, electric thrill coursed through my veins, and I sat up excited and trembling.

A luminous softness seemed to glow through the room—no light of the moon or stars was ever so penetrating

The Prohibition Question.

This prohibition prohibits no one will admit. Pass all the laws prohibiting the sale of liquor the statute books will hold, the appetite remains and it will somehow be appeased. In Maine where a prohibitory law has been in force many years, the sale of liquor goes on despite the penalties attached to violation.

Prohibition was refused by the lower branch of the legislature last week by a large majority, yet, there was a pretty good vote in its favor.

Two of our representatives Messrs. Robison and Sawyer opposed, while Mr. Allen favored the bill. Irrespective of personal prejudices or political expectations, the bill deserved the fate it met. The people of the state are not prepared for prohibition.

Mr. Hooker (Dem.) of Mississippi, said in the House of Representatives that he had seen, for five years after the war closed, negroes marched to the polls in Mississippi, headed by leaders, bearing drawn swords, and that it had never been regarded by Republicans as an invasion of the rights of the people and of the freedom of the ballot-box.

While she is awakened, Detroit proposes to have but one session per day of banking hours, from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M., instead of an A. M. and P. M. session closing in the middle of the day two hours.

Alexander H. Stephens was so poor when he first commenced the practice of law that he had to live on $3 per month. This is said to be the secret of his assistance to poor young men, over fifty of whom he has assisted to a liberal education.

A proposed combination of oil producers and refiners, for limiting production and increasing price at the seaboard has fallen through. A Pittsburgh company is going to get all the members of the Cleveland combination indicted on the ground of being conspirators.

Fred. Douglass said in his Staunton, Virginia, lecture the other night: "It is a mistake for the negro to move North; one of the most unfortunate predicaments that can be imagined is a negro in a snow bank; it don't look right, the colors don't blend harmoniously."

The Chicago Tribune estimates that "every speech made in Congress costs the country about $5,000 each, not to mention the annoyance of reading it." The only saving in this clause is, that while we may be obliged to pay for these things, we need, thank Heaven, be obliged to read them.

A lady of Louisville, Ky., who is an ardent admirer of the stalwart Maine statesman, James G. Blaine, named her pet cat for him. On the morning of Easter Sunday she found a nice little egg in the cage of "Jeans," and in her surprise broke out with, "I vow there is no dependence to be placed on any of these politicians."

The elegant and costly institution of learning at Notre Dame, near South Bend, Ind., was burned on Wednesday last week. No lives were lost. The fire caught from kettles of composition used in repairing the roof. Scarcely anything was saved. Its faculty consisted 30 members and its courses comprised commercial, classical, scientific, law, medical, and civil engineering studies.

The President has vetoed the bill making appropriations for the support of the army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes. He points out the objectionable legislation which is sought to be attached to the Army Appropriation bill; or rather he shows at the beginning that the head and front of the offending Congress consists in the desire of the two Houses to strike from a section of the law a provision authorizing the presence under Federal authority at the places where any general or special election is held of troops or armed men "to keep the peace at the polls." This was all that Congress proposed to do or rather undo; for the legislation is repelling in its character. It was conceded by leading Republicans, in debate in the House, that the proposed repeal was unquestionable on the merits, and most of them declined to discuss the question on its merits.

Congressman Newberry of Detroit is said to be the wealthiest man in Congress. His income last year was $200,000.

Wendell Phillips, when asked by a reporter the other day to give the public his views on the negro exodus in the South, smilingly replied: "I have no views."

A Philadelphia paper says that hugging sociables are popular in some parts of New Jersey. The prices charged are given for benevolent purposes. It costs ten cents to hug a girl between fifteen and twenty, but you have to hug twenty-five cents for a young widow, fifty cents for a girl between twenty and thirty, and a dollar for hugging a married lady.

A Pontiac jury gave Mrs. Horace Thompson an $800 judgment against Eugene Steel, for selling liquor to her husband, causing his death.

A respectable appearing woman was arrested at Adrian for stealing shoes and stockings for her little one. They called it a clear case of kleptomania and let her go.

Arnold Burgess of Hillsdale, had an $800 settor dog of pure strain scrope, but death reduced the value to what the hide would bring at a glove factory.

Last Saturday railroad tickets were sold at Toledo for New York for one dollar. This would seem to indicate a bitter competition between the trunk lines east.

Jackson people affect to believe that the reason Prof. Ivan Morawski tried to kill himself was because of a consuming but unrequited passion for a beautiful pupil of his.
