

Annabell and the Mission

Once there was a fairy named Annabell. Her parents were the king and queen of Fairyland. Annabell had many friends and was very smart. At night Annabell studied very hard for exams in class such as: fairy spells, dark magic, and history of fairy magic. Since Annabell was so smart, her parents thought she needed something special. Five weeks before exams everybody had four weeks to study hard. After the break the students had one week of school to have little pre-tests and reviews of everything they had already learned. Since Annabell was so smart, she only needed one week to study and her parents decided to give Annabell powers, but Annabell had to go on a quest first. Annabell's parents told her their plan. For break she studied very hard. After one week, Annabell packed her bags and said good-by. She got on her horse and went on the quest. Annabell had to go to the Appalachian Mountains. She rode through mountains, deserts, plains, and forests. Annabell barely had enough food and water. Some people let her stay for a night , but in the morning she had to leave. It was hard life. When Annabell needed food or water it was there. She thought it was luck, but it was her powers. Annabell didn't care, she just kept going. Annabell got tired, but finally she reached the end. She went over to see what was there. Lying in the grass was a magic wand! Annabell picked it up and in that instant she was home. She thanked her mom and dad for the magic wand. The rest of the time Annabell helped the other kids study. Annabell was so happy. She only ever used magic for good!

The End!