

1. Reversed Time

It was a warm summer day. That actually was only happening on one side of the world. The other side? Plain old freezing winter. A clock stood in between the two worlds. The clock never moved since time was reversed. The earth was unforming, and it suddenly burst into two worlds. The earth stayed as summer and winter all at once. Clocks didn't know whether to say it was summer or winter, so they shut down. This happened all because of a time paradox. What you are reading has nothing to do with time. It is about a world that has no time, and because of that impossible things could happen.

2. The Shadows

A boy was walking down the summer world and saw the sun offered him a shadow. The boy touched the shadow, and the sun turned it into the boy. The shadow rose up and disappeared. The boy turned into a shadow and he never was seen again.

3. The Second Thing

Soon after the shadows, in the winter world a second thing occurred. As a girl was walking down, the wind offered her a ride to home. She replied "yes" and then the wind threw her to a cloud. She was stuck there forever, and, as well, never seen again.

4. The Third is the First

The girl found a lonely black cloud. She spoke to it but an image on the cloud startled her. It was a wrinkly finger that touched a piece of the sky. Everything got bright and a door opened. The girl then became the wrinkly finger. Her face shimmered on the door's window. She found herself in the winter world, where she was offered a ride. This became the first vision.

5. The Shadow's Vision

Newspapers began to include the return of the girl. The boy lived as the sun's flame. He worked all day and night to give the summer world light. As the sun's flame, the boy was also the fire's warrior. The north wind wanted to conquer summer, but the sun refused to surrender. Like always, summer was one half of earth and winter was the other. The sun offered a shadow to the summer world and summer accepted it. The shadow had a vision that the grass became black and life was lost to everything. The words "Because of you, this will happen" were heard. The shadow then became a stone with moss. This also was the end of four mysterious happenings.

6. The Fifth Mystery

Someone found the stone on a sidewalk in the summer world. They picked it up and threw it in the winter world. The stone's moss then turned into frost. The stone itself became an enormous snowflake. The ice from it reached all the way to the summer world. The sun's flame burned it with the fires, but the snowflake's ice became waves. Creatures started to form out of water. They were the aquas. The sun ordered the fires to attack. Also the north wind gave this command to his army.

7. Time is Even

The aquas were putting out the fires. But the fires gathered heat and destroyed the aquas. The sun and north wind clashed in a duel to end the battle. Their powers made time even. The five mysteries then became impossible, so the fantasy world was gone. But the strange events were still marked as the Five Mysterious Happenings....
